66. ———— Order of Special Judge on appeal from Settlement Officer—Bengal Tenancy Act, Ch. X, ss. 104, cl. 2, 106, 107, and 108, cl. 2.—Dispute as to entries in record-of-rights—Question as to status of raiyats—Civil Procedure Code, s. 622. Under Ch. X of the Bengal Tenancy Act, there is to be (i) a framing of the record-of-rights; (ii) a draft publication for a period of one month, during which time objections may be preferred; and (iii) a final publication, previous to which publication "disputes" as to the correctness of the entries in the record-of-rights, other than entries of rents settled, are to be heard and decided. Under s. 107, the decisions of the Settlement Officer in all proceedings under the chapter are to have the force of decrees, and under s. 108, cl. 2, an appeal lies to the Special Judge from all decisions of the Settlement Officer; but it is only in cases under s. 106 decided by the Special Judge on appeal from the Settlement Officer that a second appeal lies to the High Court, and such cases can only relate to disputes regarding the correctness of entries other than the entries of rent settled. Where a decision of the Settlement Officer in a case under s. 104, cl. 2, of the Act dealt with the question of the status of the raiyats, and was passed before the record had been framed; and after the record had been framed, there was no dispute as to the correctness of any entry, except the entries of the rent settled:—Held, that the order of the Special Judge on appeal from such decision of the Settlement Officer was not one passed in a case under s. 106, and therefore no second appeal lay from it to the High Court. Shewbarat Koer v Nirpat Roy, I. L. R. 16 Calc. 596; Lala Kirat Narain v. Pulakdhari Pandey, I. L. R. 17 Calc. 326, referred to. Held, also, that the case was not one which required the interference of the High Court under s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. GOPI NATH MASANT v. ADOITA NAIK

67. ———— Special Judge, order of—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), ss. 106 and 108—Boundary dispute—Bengal Survey Act (Beng. Act V of 1875), Part V, s. 40—Settlement Officer acting as Survey Officer. A second appeal only lies to the High Court under s. 108 of the Bengal Tenancy Act from the decision of the Special Judge in a case under s. 106 of the Act. No second appeal therefore lies from an order of the Special Judge dismissing an appeal on the ground that no appeal lay to him in a case of a boundary dispute which had been tried and decided by a Settlement Officer acting as a Survey Officer under Part V of the Bengal Survey Act (Bengal Act V of 1875). 68. ———— Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), Ch. X, ss. 106 and 108—Record-of-rights, Dispute prior to the preparation of—Standard of measurement, question of. In a proceeding under Ch. X of the Bengal Tenancy Act, a dispute arose between the parties, before the preparation of record-of-rights, on the question of the local standard of measurement. The Settlement Officer decided the case in favour of the plaintiffs, and, on appeal to the Special Judge, the decision was upheld. Held, that the order of the Settlement Officer was not one under s. 106 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and under cl. 3 of s. 108 no second appeal lay to the High Court. Gopinath Masant v. *Adoita Naik, I. 69. ———— Special Judge, decision of—Revenue Officer, decision of—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), ss. 105, 106, and 108 (3)—Record-of-rights, dispute prior to completion of—Dispute about proposed entry or omission in the record. The respondent, in the course of proceedings for the record-of-rights in the village, of which he was the landlord, applied for the settlement of fair rents. The appellant claimed to be a raiyat holding at a fixed rent. The respondent denied the validity of the claim. This dispute gave rise to a case between them which was decided by the Revenue Officer against the appellant, who then appealed to the Special Judge, with the result that the decision on that question was confirmed. At the time of the Revenue Officer's decision no record-of-rights had been completed under s. 105 (1) of the Bengal Tenancy Act. On appeal to the High Court, the respondent took the preliminary objection that no appeal lay under s. 108 (3), as the case was not one under s. 106. Held, that the decision of the Revenue Officer was a decision in a proceeding under s. 106 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and that a second appeal lay from the decision of the Special Judge to the High Court. Gopi Nath Masant v. Adoita Naik, I. L. R. 21 Calc. 776, and Anand Lal Paria v. Shib Chunder Mukerjee, I. L. R. 22 Calc. 477, so far as they decide that a second appeal would not lie in such a case, overruled. Under the terms of s. 108 of the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), a second appeal lies from the decision of the Special Judge on questions with regard to the prevailing standard of measurement, area of lands in the possession of tenants, and the liability of the tenants to pay rent on account of any excess lands in their possession. 71. ——— Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), ss. 105, 106, 108—Order of Special Judge as to standard of measurement of lands. An order of the Special Judge as to the length of the standard of measurement to be used in measuring certain lands is not a decision in a case under s. 106 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and therefore no second appeal lies from such an order to the High Court. Mathura Mohun Lahiri v. *Uma Sundari Debi, I. 72. ——— Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 153—Execution of rent decree valued at less than R100—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 647. Where the original suit is a suit for rent valued at less than R100 and the decree or order made in it does not decide a question relating to title to land or some interest in land as between parties having conflicting claims thereto, or a question of a right to enhance or vary the rent of a tenant, or a question of the amount of rent annually payable by a tenant, no second appeal will lie in respect of an order made in execution proceedings relating thereto. 74 ——— Suit for rent—Interest on rent—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), ss. 3, cl. (5), and 153. Interest on rent is not rent within the meaning of s. 3, cl. (5), of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Therefore no second appeal would lie in a case where the question is one relating to rate of interest and the value of the subject-matter of the suit is less than R100. 75. ——— Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 153—Rent payable by the tenant not in issue in the appeal. Under s. 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, a second appeal lies in a rent suit whenever the decree of the Appellate Court has decided a question of the amount of rent annually payable by a tenant ; it is not necessary that the amount of rent payable by the tenant should be a matter in issue in the second appeal. In the same case in review :—Held, that the question relating to instalments, though it affects the question of interest on the rent, is not a question of "the amount of rent annually payable" within the meaning of s. 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Therefore no second appeal would lie in a case where the value of the suit is less than R100, even if there is a question as to the instalment of rent. Koylash Chandra De v. *Tarak Nath Mandal, I. 76. ——— Appeal from District Judge —Proceeding to be adopted when a District Court erroneously returns an appeal-petition for presentation in High Court—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 57, 588, 589, 622. Certain members of a Moplah family sued the others in a Subordinate Court to recover their distributive share under Mahomedan law. The property to be divided was more than R5,000 in value, but the share claimed by the plaintiffs was less. The Subordinate Judge passed a decree, against which an appeal was preferred to the District Court, but the District Judge returned the appeal for presentation to the High Court. The appellants preferred a second appeal to the High Court against the decision of the District Judge, and also presented a petition praying for the revision of his proceedings under the Civil Procedure Code, s. 622. Held, that neither a second appeal (which did not lie in such a case) nor a petition under the Civil Procedure Code, s. 622, was the appropriate proceeding to be adopted by the appellants, but an appeal as from an order made under the Civil Procedure Code, ss. 57, 582, which would lie under ss. 588, cl. (c), and 589. The error of the appellants being one of form merely, the Court amended the second appeal as an appeal from an order of the District Court, and directed to District Judge to receive and dispose of the appeal from the Subordinate Judge. The prayer was for an order directing defendant to deliver to plaintiffs about 5 garces of grain, worth R250 at R50 per garce, in respect of the two heaps of paddy of which he had taken unlawful possession. The distraint was made on 25th January, 1896, and the suit was instituted on 25th July of the same year :—Held, that the suit was in substance one for compensation for illegal distress or attachment, and not for the recovery of specific property, and that, in consequence, it was not a suit of the nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, and a second appeal lay. Held, also, that the suit was barred. When, therefore, a decree was passed by the Munsif upon an award, and an appeal was preferred to the Subordinate Judge, who set aside the decree of the Munsif on the ground that the award was bad, and sent the case back for the trial of the case on the merits :—Held, that, the award being good and valid, no appeal lay to the Subordinate Judge, and no appeal lay to the High Court against his order, and the remedy lay under s. 622, Civil Procedure Code. 6. ——— Suit of the nature cognizable in Court of Small Causes—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 586, 622—Superintendence of High Court. For the purposes of an appeal, whether from a decree in a regular suit or from an order passed in execution of such decree, the pecuniary test of jurisdiction is the valuation of the original suit in which the decree was passed, and not merely the actual amount affected by the order sought to be appealed. Therefore where execution was applied for in the Munsif's Court in respect of a sum of R422-14-0, the value of the matter in dispute in the original suit (which was of the nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes) having been above R500 the Munsif's order having been upheld in appeal by the District Judge, revision of both orders was applied for in the High Court. Held, that no proceedings by way of revision could be taken, because a second appeal would lie from the order of the District Judge. 12. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 586. Where a suit, though one cognizable by a Small Cause Court, was instituted and dealt with in the ordinary Civil Courts, it was contended that a second appeal would lie. Held, that no second appeal would lie. A small cause is such wherever it is instituted, and, the nature of the cause not being variable in any way according to the Court in which it is brought, the circumstance that it has been instituted in an ordinary Civil Court and dealt with there would not for that reason admit of a second appeal which in such a case is expressly excluded by s. 586 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). Where a suit, cognizable by a Small Cause Court, was tried both in the Munsif's and District Judge's Courts without objection to the jurisdiction :—Held, on a second appeal to the High Court, that s. 646B of the Civil Procedure Code must be read with s. 16 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, so as to modify its full effect in a case wrongly tried by an ordinary Civil Court and taken in appeal to the District Court : both parties having submitted to the jurisdiction, it was not competent to either of them on second appeal to plead the want of jurisdiction, so as to render the proceedings taken in the suit void. The defendant raised a plea to the jurisdiction of the Court, and the Judge, without recording any decision on its validity, directed that the plaint be presented on the regular side of the Court for the reason that it raised questions of complexity. At the date of the execution of the mulgeni the Government assessment was R56-8-0, but in 1872 it was enhanced to R129-8-0, and a local fund cess of R4-9-0 imposed in addition. The plaintiff sued the defendant to recover from him the enhanced assessment and the cess. On appeal an objection was taken that, the amount claimed by the plaintiff being less than R500, the suit was cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, and that therefore there was no second appeal. Held, that the suit might be regarded as one for arrears of rent at an increased rate, and, as such, was not cognizable by a Court of Small Causes. 34. ——— Improper assumption of, and inference from, facts. A finding of a fact by the lower Appellate Court was set aside on special appeal, and the case was remanded on the ground that the Judge assumed a state of things in favour of the defendant which the defendant had not urged, and which was contradictory to his case, and because the finding of the Judge was opposed to a proper inference which arose from such facts. 36. ——— Omission to consider important portions of the evidence—Finding based on statements, not on evidence. The lower Court, in its judgment, having omitted to make any mention of certain important documents or their bearing on the terms of a tenancy which were in question:—Held, that, the lower Court having presumably omitted to consider important portions of the evidence, the findings arrived at by it ought not to be accepted. Held, also, that the finding of the lower Court as to the plaintiffs' claim being barred by limitation, being based on statements without referring to any evidence to establish them, could not be accepted. Case sent back for reconsideration and fresh decision. APPA KALGA NAIK v. MALLU . . . I. L. R. 16 Bom. 477

37. ——— Decision of Judge not based on evidence given in the case—Finding of fact when binding in second appeal. In a suit for ejectment for non-payment of enhanced rent the defendants pleaded (i) that they were permanent tenants; (ii) that the plaintiff had no power to enhance; (iii) that the enhancement by the plaintiff was unreasonable. The lower Courts held that the defendants were permanent tenants, but were bound to pay a reasonable rent. Their decision was not based on evidence given in the case, but on what was termed a "well-known distinction between the sheri or private lands of an inamdar and the khata or raiyatwar lands held by recognized tenants." The exercise of certain rights of transfer or inheritance, etc., were regarded as evidence of fixity of tenure at a reasonable rent. On second appeal by the plaintiff to the High Court it was argued that, the District Court having found as a fact, that the defendants were permanent tenants bound to pay a reasonable rent, the High Court in second appeal was bound by that finding. Held, that the case should be remanded for proper enquiry. No doubt, if the appeal in the District Court were conducted as if all the facts recorded by the Subordinate Judge were admitted, the plaintiff could not in second appeal question those facts. But it did not appear that it was admitted that the distinction drawn between sheri and khata tenants was correct or that every khata tenant, as such, exercised the rights described by the Subordinate Judge. 38. ——— Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 584, 585—Findings of fact distinguished from inferences or conclusions of law—Inference of law which the facts found were insufficient to justify. It is well settled that a Court of second appeal, for the purpose of considering the weight of the evidence is not competent according to ss. 584 and 585 of the Civil Procedure Code, to entertain a question as to the soundness of a finding of fact by the Court below. The first Court's decision as to the effect of the evidence must stand final as to the facts. But the soundness of conclusions may involve matter of law, and may be questioned by a Court of second appeal. A conclusion was drawn by an Appellate Court affirming the judgment of the first Court that the defendant had accepted as a binding obligation upon him a mortgage executed by his mother, with whom he was a sharer by inheritance in the property charged. A higher Appellate Court, on a second appeal, decided that these conclusions were not warranted by the facts found, and reversed that judgment. Held, that the third Court had not exceeded its powers under the above sections by reversing the decision of the Court below. The expression "specified" used in cl. (a) of s. 584, first introduced into the Code by the Act of 1877, means "specified in the memorandum or grounds of appeal." Durga Chowdhrani v. *Jewahir Singh Chowdhri, I. L. R. 18 Calc. 23 : L. 41. ——— Finding on the existence of custom or usage, mainly based on irrelevant matters—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 13—Mis-trial—Remand. In suits by a landlord for ejectment of purchasers from raiyats having only a right of occupancy on the grounds that the holdings of such raiyats were not transferable without the landlord's consent, the defendants pleaded custom or usage in support of the transfers. Questions arose as to the character of the usage required to be proved in such cases and the nature of the evidence required to prove the usage. In second appeal the High Court, upon an examination of the evidence relied on by the lower Court of appeal, and on reference to s. 13 of the Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872) :—Held, that, the finding of that Court on the existence of the usage having been mainly based or irrelevant matters, the appeal was not properly tried and the case must be remanded for re-trial. Womes Chunder Chatterjee v. *Chundee Churn Roy Chowdhry, I. The lower Appellate Court took evidence on the issues not tried before and came to findings of fact on that evidence. Held, that the lower Appellate Court tried the case, not as an original case, but as an appeal, and acting under the powers given to it took fresh evidence. Held, that on second appeal the High Court is precluded by the Code of Civil Procedure from going into facts, and that restriction of power is not confined only to cases where evidence is taken in the first Court. Gopal Singh v. *Jhakri Rai, I. This had not been sanctioned by the Collector under the Madras Rent Recovery Act, s. 11, but it was found that it had been paid by the raiyats for many years. The Court of first appeal held on this finding that there were implied contracts on the part of the raiyats to pay it. Held, that the finding as to the existence of an implied contract to pay the enhanced rent was a finding of fact, and must therefore be accepted on second appeal. 46. ——— Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 584, 585—Second appeal—Finding of fact by lower Court. One Ragho died prior to 1856, leaving a widow Anpurnabai, and one son Babaji, who was Anpurnabai's step-son. On Ragho's death, Anpurnabai took possession of the land in question in this suit, and mortgaged it several times. In 1879 she mortgaged it with possession to the father of the defendants. Anpurnabai died in April, 1887, and in 1899, within twelve years after her death, the plaintiffs, who were the sons of Babaji, filed this suit to recover the land. They alleged in the plaint that Anpurnabai had been granted this land by her step-son Babaji by way of maintenance for her life, and they contended that, therefore, their right of suit did not arise until her death. The defendants pleaded adverse possession. They contended that Anpurnabai had held adversely to Babaji and to his sons (the plaintiffs). No evidence was given by the plaintiffs of the alleged grant of the land to Anpurnabai for her life by way of maintenance. The lower Court dismissed the suit. On appeal the District Judge reversed the decision and passed a decree for the plaintiffs. In his judgment he said: "The plaint states that Anpurnabai had this land for maintenance, and, in the complete absence of even the slighest information about Babaji and Ragho, I must take this to be the fact." Held, confirming the decree, that this was a finding of fact, with which

This was reversed by the first Appellate Court, which decreed the claim, holding it unaffected by the compromise, on the ground that the latter was, in fact, contrary to the interests of the infant. The High Court, on a second appeal, set aside this finding, there having been no proof that the compromise was to the infant's detriment, and affirmed the decree of the first Court. Held, that the High Court rightly reversed the decree of the first Appellate Court; the above finding, without any evidence to support it, being a substantial error in the proceedings, and good ground of second appeal within the meaning of s. 584, sub-s. Held,* by the Full Bench (PETHERAM, C.J., dissenting), that under s. 584 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code it is competent for the High Court to entertain pleas in second appeals which impeach the findings of fact recorded by the lower Appellate Court, on the ground that such findings are conjectural, that they ignore the evidence, and that the Court has given no reasons for the conclusions at which it arrived. Where a lower Appellate Court has drawn strained or unreasonable conclusions from the evidence or has discredited or disbelieved witnesses or documentary proof upon capricious or unsustainable grounds, or has stated no intelligible reasons for arriving at its findings of fact, the High Court may take notice of all such matters in second appeal. Futtema Begam v. Mohamed Ausur, I. L. R. 9 Calc. 309; Assanullah v. Hafiz Muhammad Ali, I. L. R. 10 Calc. 931; and Lal Mahomed Bepari v. Shoila Bewa, 11 C. L. R. 104, referred to. Per PETHERAM, C. J.—The High Court is not at liberty in second appeal to look into the evidence in the cause for the purpose of ascertaining whether the lower Courts have found the facts correctly, inasmuch as no question of fact is included in the grounds of appeal allowed by s. 584 of the Civil Procedure Code, and it would seem that the intention of the Legislature was that in small causes the findings of the lower Courts on questions of fact should be absolutely final. By "specified law" in cl. (a) of s. 584 is meant the statute law, and by "usage having the force of law" the common or customary law of the country or community, and the clause is confined to cases in which the lower Appellate Courts have either misconstrued a statute or written document, or have come to a wrong conclusion as to what is the customary law of the country or community, with reference to questions at issue between the parties. Cl. (b) can only refer to mistakes in law and does not extend the operation of cl. (a). The term "procedure" in cl. (c) means the practice followed by the Courts in the trial of cases, and cannot be construed as including the mental process by which a Court comes to a conclusion upon a question of fact. Per MAHMOOD, J.—That the Legislature by framing s. 574 of the Civil Procedure Code, intended to guard against such failure of justice as might arise from the defective or arbitrary exercise of the extensive powers possessed by the Court of first appeal in cases which, with reference to their nature, would be proper subjects of second appeal; and a judgment of a Court of first appeal which falls short of due compliance with the various clauses of s. 574 is essentially defective, and may properly be made the subject of complaint in second appeal under s. 584. Ramnarain v. Bhawnidin, All. Weekly Notes (1882) 104, and Sheoambar Singh v. Lallu Singh, All. Weekly Notes (1882) 158, referred to. The word "procedure" in cl. (c) of s. 584 must be understood in its most generic sense, including all the rules contained in the Civil Procedure Code or any other law regulating the investigation of cases by the Civil Courts. When the Court of first appeal, after having entered into the merits of the case, has considered the evidence and adjudicated upon the merits in the manner required by s. 574, the mere circumstance that the conclusions at which the Court has arrived are erroneous or opposed to the weight of evidence will not justify interference in second appeal, even though such conclusions proceed upon an improper conception of the exact effect and bearing of the case upon the merits. On the other hand when the Court of first appeal, while adjudicating with due compliance with the provisions of s. 574, arrives at conclusions upon the merits ignoring any steps essential for justifying those conclusions, or where such conclusions are based upon evidence inadmissible by law, or proceed upon an erroneous view of the legal effect of any material part of the evidence, or are arrived at under a misconception either of the rules of evidence or of any other law, such conclusions, though they purport to be distinct findings of fact, would lay the judgment of the lower Appellate Court open to second appeal under cl. (c) of s. 584, so long as the error was substantial enough to have possibly affected the justice of the case upon the merits. NIVATH SINGH v. BHIKKI SINGH. BHIKKI SINGH v. NIVATH SINGH I. L. but objections to these findings must be restricted to the limits within which the original pleas in second appeal are confined. Nivath Singh v. Bhikki Singh. I. L. R. 7 All. 649, referred to. Per PETHERAM, C.J., and TYRRELL J.—Ss. 565 and 566 of the Civil Procedure Code are, as far as may be, incorporated in Ch. XLII of the Code relating to second appeals, and when the evidence for disposing of the real issues in the case has been taken and exists on the record, it is the duty of the High Court, on the hearing of a second appeal, to itself fix and determine such issues on the evidence on the record, and not to put the parties to the expense and delay involved by a remand. Per STRAIGHT, J.—S. 587 of the Civil Procedure Code does not mean that the provisions of Ch. XLI relating to first appeals are to be applied indiscriminately or in their entirety to second appeals, and implies no warrant for the decision by the High Court of questions of fact in any shape or at any stage of a second appeal. Ramnarain v. Bhawanidin, All. Weekly Notes (1882) 104, and Sheoambar Singh v. Lallu Singh, All. Weekly Notes (1882) 158, referred to. Per TYRRELL, J.—The jurisdiction of Courts of second appeal in respect of questions of fact is restricted, in so much as the appeal may not be entertained on "grounds" of fact, but under the circumstances of s. 566 of the Code, no less than under the abnormal circumstances contemplated by the ruling of the Full Bench in Nivath Singh v. Bikki Singh, I. L. R. 7 All. 649, the Court may take cognizance of omitted issues of fact, and must determine them if there be evidence upon the record sufficient for that purpose. In cases where the Court still acting under s. 566, has been obliged in the absence of evidence on the record to supplement the defect through the agency of the Court below, its jurisdiction in respect of such evidence does not become limited thereby or by reason only of the circumstance that the evidence is accompanied by a "finding" of the inferior Court,—the term "finding" being used in s. 566 in its restricted sense of an answer to the proposition referred for inquiry, and not for an award of decision of the issue before the Court. of proof. Per MAHMOOD, J.—It is the duty of the Court, when dealing with second appeals and in considering the conclusions at which the lower Appellate Courts have arrived, to consider whether or not those conclusions have been arrived at in due compliance with the rules of law governing the admissibility of evidence, and which involve questions of the burden of proof; especially in cases in which a title is asserted by a plaintiff who seeks to oust a defendant and that defendant denies the title and asserts that the plaintiff has no title at all. 74. ——— Suit for ejectment—Proof of title—Inference of title from acts of ownership—Finding of lower Court on such question—Mixed question of law and fact—Finding of fact. In an ejectment suit the evidence of the plaintiff's title to the property consisted of evidence of acts of user from which the Court was asked to infer ownership in the absence of proof of a better title by the defendant. Upon review of the evidence the District Judge held that the plaintiff's title was not proved. Held, that this finding, which was a mixed one of law and fact, was a finding with which the High Court could not interfere on second appeal. When, from the facts found by the lower Court, the legal inference to be drawn is certain, the High Court in second appeal may correct erroneous conclusions drawn by the lower Appellate Court. Where, however, the legal inference to be deduced from facts is doubtful, it is not open to the High Court in second appeal to interfere with the findings of the lower Court. A test which often presents itself to an English lawyer is this: Would a Judge withdraw the case from a jury on the ground that there was no evidence of the question to be found upon, such as adverse possession or title, to go to them? or would he, on the other hand, on certain facts being established, direct them to find in a particular manner? In either of these cases it would be open to the High Court in second appeal to come to a different conclusion from the lower Appellate Court. But where the question upon the facts and law is one which the Judge would lay before the jury to decide, there it is not open to the High Court to consider the propriety of the finding of the lower Appellate Court. Lachmeswar Singh v. *Manowar Hossein, I. 115. ——— Putting onus of proof on wrong party—Irregularity affecting merits—Error in law. A suit instituted in the Court of the Principal Sudder Ameen was transferred under s. 6 of Act VIII of 1859 to the Court of the Munsif, who took further evidence, and decreed in favour of the plaintiff. The defendant appealed to the District Court, on the ground (amongst others) that part of the evidence had been taken by the Principal Sudder Ameen; and the District Judge reversed the Munsif's decree, not on this ground, but on the merits. The plaintiff then appealed to the High Court, objecting that the suit had been illegally decided by the Munsif, upon evidence recorded by the Principal Sudder Ameen; and that the onus of proving the bonâ fides of the transaction, which was the subject-matter of the suit, was thrown by the District Judge on the plaintiff, instead of on the defendant, who alleged the want of it. Held, (i) that the Munsif's having used the evidence recorded by the Principal Sudder Ameen was only an irregularity which was waived by the plaintiff not requiring the witnesses to be examined again, and proceeding with the suit, and producing other witnesses to be examined in support of his claim; and as this irregularity did not affect the merits of the case, the decree of the Munsif being in the plaintiff's favour, it was not a ground for reversing the decree on special appeal; (ii) that the onus was not thrown by the Judge upon the plaintiff in its proper sense, and so as to be an error in law, as the Judge did not hold that the defendant was entitled to succeed without giving any evidence, unless the plaintiff disproved the allegation of the want of bonâ fides. (c) DISCRETION, EXERCISE OF, IN VARIOUS CASES.

16. ———— Order for security for costs—Appeal struck off in default—Absence of error in law. When the Civil Procedure Code gives to a Court of regular appeal a discretionary power, and that discretionary power has been fairly exercised, it is no good ground of special appeal that a wiser exercise of the discretion would have led to different results. In a regular appeal the District Judge, at the instance of the respondent, on 26th March, called upon the appellant, who resided out of British territory, to show cause, within two days, why, under s. 342 of Act VIII of 1859, he should not furnish security. The appellant appeared on the 13th of May and filed a written statement that he owned land in Jhansi, and prayed that, if the statement was denied, inquiry might be made. There was nothing to show that this statement was disputed. The Judge on the same day made the following order: "As I cannot say whether or no this is true, and am not aware of the terms under which the land is held in Jhansi, if indeed the appellant holds any land there, the excuse cannot in its present form be accepted, nor can the respondent be exposed to risk while enquiries are pending. The appellant must file security within fourteen days or the appeal will be struck off." On 28th May the appellant produced certificates that he held maafi lands in Jhansi. The Judge, not considering these to be security, after recording that no further order could be passed, struck off the appeal with costs. A special appeal having been admitted from the Judge's orders, the respondent objected that no special appeal would lie. Held, that the High Court ought not to interfere in special appeal merely on the ground that, in the exercise of the discretion given to the lower Appellate Court, another Court might have thought it unnecessary to call upon the appellant to furnish security. Held, also, that, unless it could be shown that the investigation of either of the issues of fact touching the appellant's residence and property had been defective, or that there had been error in law, the High Court had no power to interfere in special appeal. Held, also, that, if the appellant had, after the order of 26th March, come into Court without delay or even on 13th May applied for an adjournment to enable him to put in proof that he held land in Jhansi, and been refused that permission, the Court would have interfered in special appeal. If a discretion is exercised under these conditions, and a certain conclusion is arrived at, that conclusion is an exercise of discretion judicially sound, though an appellate tribunal might be disposed to draw a different inference from the facts. 30. ——— Omission to state reasons in judgment—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 574, 584. The fact that the judgment of an Appellate Court is not drawn up in the manner prescribed by s. 574 of the Civil Procedure Code is no ground for a second appeal under s. 584 unless it can be shown that the judgment has failed to determine any material issue of law. 32. ——— The Judge decided that the plaintiff was barred by limitation, but his judgment did not disclose the grounds on which he held that plaintiff was not entitled to deduct, in calculating the twelve years' limitation, the time occupied by certain suits brought for the same property, in which he was non-suited. Held, that it was no ground of special appeal that the judgment was silent on the subject of the claim to deduction, and that, whether the point was urged in the lower Court or not, the plaintiff had no ground of special appeal in respect of omission of all notice of it in the judgment. 33. ——— Error of procedure—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 359. A lower Appellate Court's omission to give reasons cannot be considered a ground for special appeal when it has not produced error or defect in the decision upon the merits. Where a lower Appellate Court has omitted to state reasons, and it appears to the High Court that reasons should have been stated, the proper course is to retain the case on special appeal, but to return the proceedings and require the omission to be supplied. 37. ——— Decision for plaintiff on ground not alleged by him—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 350—Error not affecting merits. In a suit for possession of a quantity of land, where the first Court gave plaintiff a decree on the ground that he had proved title by purchase, and the lower Appellate Court, in confirming the decision on the substantial issue raised, went further, and found that one of the defendants was plaintiff's raiyat, contrary to the allegation set up by the plaintiff himself:—Held, in special appeal, that the error did not affect the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the lower Court; and the High Court could not therefore interfere under s. 350 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The lower Appellate Court, after remanding the suit for a second local investigation and report, determined to disregard the second return, which differed from the first, and affirmed the judgment. Both parties having appealed, the High Court, dissatisfied as to this disregard of the second return, decided to hear the appeal as a regular one, examined the evidence, and reversed the judgment of the Court below. Held, by the Privy Council, that to have dealt with the appeal as a regular appeal was in excess of the Court's jurisdiction; and that it had no power to hear the appeal as a second appeal, there not having been in the proceedings below any error or defect, within the meaning of s. 584 of the Civil Procedure Code, which contained the only grounds of second appeal. (m) WITNESSES—concld.

The plaintiff's evidence was recorded and that of one of the defendants; the defendants being unable to produce further evidence, the Court recorded that the case was closed, and that judgment would be delivered on the following day, the 31st December. On the day following the defendants produced certain witnesses and asked that they might be examined. This application was rejected, and judgment was subsequently delivered in favour of the plaintiffs. Held per PETHERAM, C.J.—That the omission to examine the defendant's witnesses on the 31st December was a substantial error in procedure, and that the Munsif had therefore exercised his discretion wrongfully. Per GHOSE, J.—That although there was some doubt whether the Court on second appeal could interfere in a point of discretion, yet this doubt was not strong enough to justify an expression of opinion contrary to that arrived at by the Chief Justice. The defendants denied that the plaintiffs were the heirs of the deceased obligee, and contended that they should have obtained a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 before suing. There being good reason to doubt the validity of the title of the plaintiffs, the lower Appellate Court postponed the decision of the case for a certain time in order to give the plaintiffs an opportunity of obtaining such certificate.

The Lower Appellate Court found that, though an adoption had taken place, it was not, and was not intended to be a real adoption, but was a sham transaction entered into by collusion for the purpose of deceiving the Government, a case which was not set up by the parties, nor warranted by the evidence. Held (affirming the decision of the High Court), that such a disposal of the suit was a "substantial error or defect of procedure" within the meaning of s. 584 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), and that the High Court therefore had jurisdiction to set aside the finding on second appeal. Annangamanjari Chowdhrani v. *Tripura Soondari Chowdhrani, L. At the hearing of the second appeal, a claim was made on her behalf not merely to maintenance, but to a share in the property as mother of the last owner. The point had not been taken in the lower Courts, nor was it one of the grounds of appeal. Held, that it could not be taken for the first time in second appeal. The amount was not paid, and the landlord executed the decree and obtained possession. The tenant appealed and succeeded in getting the decree set aside, and the amount found due from him for arrears by the first Court was reduced, and a decree made directing that, if the reduced amount were not paid within fifteen days, he should be ejected. He paid the amount found due by the Appellate Court within the fifteen days and recovered possession of his holding. He then brought a suit in the Munsif's Court to recover mesne profits from his landlord for the time he was in possession after the execution of the first Court's decree. It was contended on second appeal that the suit would not lie, as the matter might and should have been determined in the execution department under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, that, as the suit was instituted in the Munsif's Court, and the Munsif, under the circumstances of the case was the officer who, in the first instance, would have had to determine the matter in the execution department, there was at most only an error of procedure and no exercise of jurisdiction by the Munsif, which he did not possess, and that, upon the authority of the decision in Purmessuree Pershad Narain Singh v. Jankee Kooer, 19 W. R. 90, this could not be made a ground of objection on appeal. Held, also, that the point being one that was not raised in the pleadings or before either of the lower Courts, and being a point which went exclusively to the jurisdiction of the Court, it could not be raised on second appeal. 44. ——— Power of High Court to deal with evidence—Necessity for remand—Evidence of existence of legal necessity. Held, by PEACOCK, C.J., that the High Court has the power in special appeal, before remanding a case, to see whether there is any evidence on the record which would warrant a contrary finding to that already come to by the Judge below ; and that it would be worse than useless to remand the present case to the Judge to find whether any necesssity existed for the sale, when the Court sees that there is no evidence on the record to prove the existence of such necessity, and when the Judge has found that there was no necessity ; if he were to come to a contrary finding upon the evidence as it stands, his judgment would be reversed upon special appeal as being a finding without any evidence in support of it. Held, contra, by BAYLEY, J., that, under s. 372, Act VIII of 1859, the Court in special appeal cannot try facts on the evidence on the record, or whether the evidence is sufficient to enable the Court to come to a conclusion of fact on the question of legal necessity, and that the case should be remanded to the Judge for a clear finding on that question. 45. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 565, 566—Determination of case by High Court. In a suit for pre-emption, based on the wajib-ul-urz of a village, the Court of first instance dismissed the claim on the ground that no right of pre-emption had been proved to exist in the village. The lower Appellate Court, dissenting from this opinion, reversed the first Court's decree, and remanded the case under s. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code for a decision on the remaining question of fact, viz., the amount of the consideration for the sale. On appeal from the order of remand, the High Court, on the 3rd January 1884, observed that it was not disposed to interfere with the finding of fact that the plaintiffs had a right of pre-emption, and accordingly dismissed the appeal, but added that the Judge was in error in remanding the case under s. 562 of the Code ; that his order must so far be set aside ; and that he should proceed under s. 565 or s. 566 as might be applicable. The Judge, on receipt of this order, replaced the case on his file, remitted an issue to the Court of first instance, under s. 566, as to the amount of consideration, and, accepting the first Court's finding upon that issue, decreed the plaintiffs' claim. In second appeal by the defendants the High Court was of opinion that the Judge had disposed of the case upon a condition of things which the plaintiffs had never asserted, inasmuch as he had treated the right of pre-emption which was in issue as one arising from custom, and not, as alleged by the plaintiffs, as arising from a contract between the ancestors of the parties. All the evidence necessary to the determination of the case was on the record. Held per PETHERAM, C.J., and OLDFIELD and TYRRELL, JJ., that the High Court was competent, in second appeal from the Judge's decree, to look into the evidence already on the record for the purpose of finding whether a right of pre-emption existed in fact in the village, if the evidence for answering this question was already on the record, and that, in such a case, the question need not be referred to the Court of first appeal. Bal Kishen v. *Jasoda Kuar, I. After the date of sale, but before the whole of the purchase-money had been paid into Court, X applied to the Court by petition, praying that the amount due to him might be paid to A, to whom, he alleged, he had assigned it. Before any order was made on this petition, B, C, D, and E, in execution of separate decrees against X, attached the sum in Court. The District Munsif ordered that B, C, D, and E should be paid before A. A brought a suit against B. C, D, and E in another District Munsif's Court for a declaration that he was entitled to the money and to set aside the said order. The Munsif set aside the order and declared the plaintiff to be entitled to the amount. B, C, D, and E severally appealed against this decree, and the District Court passed a decree in each appeal, dismissing A's suit. A presented one second appeal, making B, C, D, and E parties thereto, against the four decrees of the District Court. Held, that A was bound to file a separate appeal against each of the decrees passed by the District Court; he was, however, allowed by the Court to amend his second appeal and file three more second appeals. 56. ——— Omission to examine witnesses—Second appeal, objection on, on the ground of such omission. A Subordinate Judge, after examining some only of the plaintiffs' witnesses, was of opinion that there was no necessity for further evidence, and passed a decree for the plaintiffs. Ten witnesses whom the plaintiffs had summoned were not examined. The defendant appealed to the District Judge. At the hearing of the appeal the plaintiffs did not inform the Judge that some of their witnesses had not been examined, nor did he become otherwise aware of the fact. He reversed the lower Court's decree, being of opinion, on appeal, that the plaintiffs' evidence had not proved their case. The plaintiffs appealed to the High Court, and contended that the decree of the lower Appellate Court should be set aside, in order that the excluded evidence might be taken. Held, that there was no sufficient reason, on second appeal, to set aside the decree. The plaintiffs ought to have brought the facts to the notice of the lower Appellate Court, and, not having done so, they could not on second appeal take the objection in order to have a chance of a second trial. He cannot select one part of the agreement for breach and another for performance. 7. ——— Delay in bringing the suit—Specific Relief Act, s. 22—Joinder of a person not a party to the contract of which specific performance is sought. A plaintiff sued on the 28th February 1881 for specific performance of a contract entered into on the 1st March 1878 by defendant No. 1, and joined in that suit as a defendant a third person, who alleged that he was the owner of the property, the subject of the contract, seeking to obtain possession and other relief as against such third person, stating that he was a benamidar of defendant No. 1. On second appeal such third person contended that the discretion given to the Court under s. 22 of the Specific Relief Act ought not to be exercised, as the plaintiff had slept on his rights for nearly three years. Held, that, although the principle of the objection as to the delay of the plaintiff in bringing his suit was an important one, and one which ought to be considered by the Courts in the exercise of their judicial discretion under s. 22 of the Specific Relief Act, yet the point not having been taken in the Courts below, and there being nothing on the record to lead the Court to presume that the ordinary rule applicable to suits of this nature had been disregarded in the Courts below, the objection ought not under the circumstances to be allowed to prevail in second appeal. of non-performance. The application of the doctrine of specific performance to partnerships is governed by the same rules as those which govern it in other cases. There are only two classes of cases in which specific performance of an agreement to enter into a partnership has been decreed; first, where the parties have agreed to execute some formal instrument which would confer rights that would not exist unless it was executed; secondly, where there has been an agreement which has come to an end to carry on a joint adventure, and the decree that the agreement is valid, prefaced by the declaration that the contract ought to be specifically performed, is made merely as the foundation of a decree for an account. On the 6th Decmeber 1886 the plaintiff discovered that it was out of the defendant's power to specially perform his contract, and he thereupon, on the 13th April 1887, applied to the Court which had granted the decree for re-hearing of the suit on the question of damages, asking that, in lieu of the decree for specific performance, a decree for damages, when assessed, might be entered up. Held, that he was entitled to ask for such relief. personal quality of the party, with whom a contract is made, is a material ingredient in the contract the right to enforce specific performance ceases upon the death of the person with whom the contract is made, and cannot be claimed by his legal representative. If, from the nature of the contract, it is not intended that A, the contracting party, should further call upon B, with whom the contract is made, to perform his part of the contract, the right to enforce the specific performance of the contract is lost by B by reason of delay and laches in performing his part of the contract, although time is not mentioned in the contract as being of the essence of it. 15. ——— Issues—Discretion of Court—Delay—Laches—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 22—Purchase at Court-sale—Purchase subject to subsisting equities—Right, title and interest of judgment-debtor. The plaintiff sued for specific performance of an agreement whereby the father of the first defendant and the husband of the second defendant agreed to sell to the plaintiff 500 square yards of land forming part of a property consisting of a chawal and vacant land. The agreement was dated the 29th of June 1901, and the suit was filed on the 30th November 1903. The third defendant purchased the entire property at a Court-sale in execution of a money-decree obtained by the creditors of the original vendor against his estate. He had notice of the plaintiff's claim. Held, that even if a purchaser at a Court-sale purchases without notice, he can only buy what the Court could sell, i.e., the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor, as these existed at the date of the sale, and as these could have been honestly disposed of by the judgment-debtor himself. Sobhagchand v. Bhaichand, I. L. R. 6 Bom. 193, followed. Held, further, that the purchase by the third defendant was subject to the equity in favour of the plaintiff to compel specific performance, unless that equity had been lost by the plaintiff. The third defendant did not plead delay as a defence or raise a specific issue on the point. Held, that the purpose of a general issue is certainly not that pleas should be allowed under it which are not clearly included in the other issues, but only to determine the kind of relief to which a plaintiff is entitled as the result of the findings on the issues preceding it. When, however, a decree for specific performance is sought it is the duty of the Court to see, whether having regard to the judicial discretion vested in it under s. 22 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877) it ought to be granted. The proper issue to be raised in such a case is—"Whether the plaintiff's delay has been such as to show that he had lost his right by waiver, abandonment, or acquiescence?" Laches to bar the plaintiff's right must amount to waiver abandonment, or acquiescence and to raise the presumption of any of these, the evidence of conduct must be plain and unambiguous. 17. ——— Specific performance, suit for—Pleadings—Practice—Plea in defence—Omission of material term in written contract—Onus—Duty to examine himself—Agreement to take lease on lessor erecting suitable buildings—Time, if essence of contract. In a suit for specific performance it is important to distinguish between negotiation and contract and to ascertain what the contract is, when and by whom it was made, and who the parties are who are bound by it. Where a party concluded a contract with another party without at any time disclosing that he was acting in the matter as agent for some other person, whether he was really acting as such agent or not, the burden of the contract rested on him, the other party not being concerned with his undisclosed intentions. If the plaintiffs' case is clear and the written statement of the defendant raises no defence, the practice in English Courts allows the plaintiff in a suit for specific performance to move for a decree on the written statement being put in, and to get such a decree at once and as a matter of course. It is incumbent on a party who seeks to make out that by inadvertence or mistake an important term has been omitted from a contract drawn up by himself with his own hand and signed by him, to pledge his oath to the truth of his story specially when the other party comes forward and swears that the suggestion is without foundation. G. & Co. agreed to take a lease of certain premises from H at a certain rent, upon the latter undertaking to erect new buildings (on a plan which G. & Co. approved) to replace existing ones which were to the knowledge of both parties in the occupation of tenants, whom it might take him to eject: Held, that time was not made the essence of the contract, though it was clear that in the contemplation of both parties the buildings were to be completed without unreasonable delay. In case of undue delay on the part of H. G. & Co. might have made time the essence of the contract by giving notice that they would not hold themselves bound to complete unless the buildings were finished within a specified time, provided the time allowed were such as the Court would hold to be reasonable under the circumstances. It is not incumbent upon a party to give corroborative evidence of

15. ——— Contract for sale of land by Receiver—Misdescription—Purchaser having personal knowledge—Title to land between high and low water-mark. The defendant, who for twelve years had occupied land as tenant, purchased the land at a sale by the Receiver, but refused to complete the purchase on the ground of material misdescription in the advertisement of sale, in that a road and ghât, comprised within the boundaries mentioned in the advertisement, were not the property of the parties whose land the Receiver purported to sell; and also that, to make up the quantity of land as stated in the advertisement, viz., 20 bighas by estimation, land lying between high and low water mark had been taken into calculation. The owners of the property sold having brought a suit against the defendant for specific performance, the defendant contended that the Receiver was a necessary party to the suit, and that the sale had been rescinded by a statement of the Receiver that he would forfeit the deposit in the event of the defendant not carrying out his contract. In support of his objection to quantity, the defendant relied on a Collectorate chitta as showing that the area of the land sold was only 9 bighas 8 cottahs 10½ chittaks; the same chitta, however, in giving the eastern boundary of the property, described it as lying "on the west of the low water of the Ganga." Held, that there had been no rescission of the contract, that the plaintiffs, being owners of the land down to low water-mark, were entitled to all subsequent accretions, and were therefore entitled to include in their measurement all land down to low-water mark; and having regard to the fact that the defendant was personally acquainted with the property sold, it was not open to him to repudiate the contract on the ground of misdescription. The plaintiffs were entitled therefore to a decree for specific performance. GANGADHAR SIRKAR v. KASINATH BISWAS . . . 9 B. L. R. 128

16. ——— Agreement to sell land at a valuation—Land of peculiar character—Construction of agreement in a pottah—Assignment of pottah—Rights of assignees against original lessors. The owners of ancestral village lands gave a mokurari pottah of land in a mouzah to the proprietor of a neighbouring colliery "for quarrying coal, for building stores, for garden, for orchard, for road-making, and for other uses." The pottah, besides the above, contained the following, as translated: "You will build a factory according to any plan you choose, and possess the same. Within that aforesaid mouzah we will not give settlement to anybody. If you take possession, according to your requirements, of extra land over and above this pottah, we shall settle such land with you at a proper rate. Thereat we shall make no objection." The lessee, after being in possession for some years under the pottah, assigned it to the plaintiffs, who afterwards took possession of the whole of the extra land, and demanded a pottah therefor from the defendants, and made a contract advantageous to themselves to sell it to third persons. The defendants refused to grant them a pottah. In a suit for specific performance:—Held, in the High Court, that where a contract is made to sell land at a fair valuation, and there is no difficulty in ascertaining what a fair valuation would be, the Court will take the usual means of ascertaining it, and decree performance of the contract accordingly. But when, having regard to the peculiar character of the property, as in the case of land supposed to contain coal, or valuable minerals, the value of the land must be to a great extent a matter of guess and speculation, the Court will not decree specific performnace, as it has no means of ascertaining by the ordinary methods what price the plaintiff should pay. Held, by the Privy Council, on the construction of the pottah, that if the lessee, or his assigns, had required additional land for the purpose of carrying out the objects for which the pottah was granted, then the lessors would have been bound to settle so much of the adjoining land with them as might have been necessary for such requirements. Held, also, that the plaintiffs, the assignees, were not entitled to compel the defendants to grant them a pottah of the extra land, even at a reasonable rate, merely for the purpose of selling it. Semble: In a suit for specific performance of an agreement to sell land, the fact that on account of the extraordinary character of the property, as its containing coal or other valuable minerals, there is considerable difficulty in fixing a reasonable rate for it, is not a sufficient reason for refusing a decree. In the answer of the wife it was alleged that property purchased by the husband had been concealed by him from her when she executed the agreement. Held, under the circumstances, that that fact, even if proved, was not sufficient to entitle the wife to treat the agreement as a nullity. Held, also, that, if the property said to have been concealed by the husband had been purchased by him out of moneys belonging to the wife's separate estate which was clothed with a trust for the children of the marriage, the wife's remedy was to enforce her own and children's rights by bill to compel a settlement of any property improperly withheld by the husband at the date of the execution of the agreement. 19. ———— Contract—Disability to contract—Temporary disability of zamindar to contract, his estate being subject to the provisions of Act VI of 1876 (Chutia Nagpore Encumbered Estates Act), amended by Act V of 1884—Effect of continuance of transactions after the release of his estate from management under that Act. It is competent to a person, who has been, but is no longer, in a state of disability, to take up and carry on transactions commenced while he was under disability in such a way as to bind himself as to the whole. He may be bound by a contract, of which the terms are to be ascertained by what passed whilst he was disabled from contracting. The defendant's ancestral zamindari was placed under management by an order made under s. 2 of Act VI of 1876, and he became incapable of contracting in reference to it. He, however, agreed with the plaintiff that the latter should advance money on mortgage, and take a lease of part of the estate. Afterwards by an order, whether well founded or not, at all events effectively made, under s. 12 as amended by Act V of 1884, he was restored to the possession of his estate, again acquiring the right to contract about it. He carried on the transaction with the plaintiff, retaining the benefit of money paid by him, but in the end not completing. Held, that he was bound by the contract, though its terms were to be ascertained by what had passed while he was disabled from contracting, and that specific performance could be decreed against him. Whether his entering into the contract was against the policy of the Act, and whether the order under s. 12 had, or had not, been made on good grounds, did not affect the question. His widow G held possession of the estates down to her death in 1878. After some disputes as to the succession, one N K, claiming as widow of an alleged adopted son of N, was put into possession by the Revenue authorities. Against N K two suits were brought for the property left by N. The first suit was brought in April 1879 by one C, claiming as sister's son of N. C, being a pauper, sold a portion of the property in suit to one M for R20,000 and made M a co-plaintiff in the suit. The second suit against N K was instituted in May 1879 by S and others, the defendants, appellants in this present suit, who claimed title as the nearest sapindas of the deceased N. In each of these two suits the plaintiff or plaintiffs were successful. In each the defendant appealed. In the case of C the defendant was successful, and the plaintiff's suit was dismissed by the High Court on the 7th December 1886; in the other case the parties on the 25th of July 1885 settled their dispute by a compromise. While the two suits above-mentioned were pending, S and his co-plaintiffs instituted a suit on the 2nd of July 1883 against C and M asking for a declaration that they were entitled to succeed to the property of the deceased N. In January 1884 the female defendant having died, the Collector of Bareilly was brought on to the record of this suit as guardian of her minor children, and on the 19th of January 1885 a compromise was entered into between the Collector, on behalf of the minor children of M and one adult daughter of M on the one hand and the plaintiffs on the other, whereby the representatives of M relinquished the suit and consented to a decree being passed in favour of the plaintiffs, and the plaintiffs agreed that, when they got possession of the property, they would make over certain villages and a certain sum of money to the representatives of M. On the 6th of January 1888 the Collector of Bareilly instituted a suit for specific performance of the compromise of the 19th January 1885. The Court of first instance decreed the plaintiffs' claim. 31. ——— Suit for execution of fresh instrument on retention of first one by defendant—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), ss. 12, 21, 22—Suit to restore terms of lost instrument. The plaintiffs, alleging that the defendants, having executed in their favour and delivered to them a bond the consideration for which was money due to them for rent of land and on a former bond, had received it back for registration, and, refusing to register it had retained it, sued the defendants to have a similar bond executed and registered. Per MAHMOOD, J.—That it was doubtful whether the suit could be regarded as a suit for specific performance of a contract, and whether the only remedy open to the plaintiffs was not a suit for the money. It was only on the hypothesis that the mere writing of the original bond, in the absence of registration and final delivery, did not amount to a performance of the contract, that the suit was entertainable at all. That, assuming the suit to be one for specific performance of a contract, the plaintiffs were not entitled to the specific relief which they sought, since they could obtain their full remedy by suing for the money in respect of which the fresh bond was sought to be executed; and they had failed to prove the exact terms of the original bond. Observations on the nature of the evidence required to prove a contract of which specific performance is sought. Per STUART, C.J.—That the suit was bad in form and substance, and there was no ground for the remedy by specific performance of a contract. If the alleged bond were in existence, a suit simply and directly for the recovery of the money claimed by the plaintiffs would have sufficed, for in such a suit, facts relating to the loss or concealment of the bond might have been proved, and under the circumstances secondary evidence at least of the terms of the bond might have been admissible, or the plaintiffs might have found themselves in a position to make out their claim by other evidence; but if the plaintiffs considered it material to their case to have their claim on the bond, the loss or destruction of which could not be doubted, their proper course of proceeding was by a suit to restore the terms of the lost bond, or, as it was said in Courts of equity in England, by suit to obtain the benefit of the lost deed or instrument; and that, if the suit could be taken to be one affording such a remedy, it contained no sufficient materials to warrant it being held that the bond was of the tenor and in the terms alleged by the plaintiffs. Please come over to the house of my attorney between 3 and 4 this day with the title-deeds of the house, and receive the earnest. There shall be no doing otherwise." The plaintiffs through their manager wrote in answer to the defendant's wife: "You having agreed to purchase our house for R13,125 have sent a letter through the broker, and were agreeable to it and we will be present between 3 and 4 this day at your attorney's and receive the earnest." The plaintiffs and defendants met at the attorney's office in the absence of the attorney, and no inspection of title-deeds or payment of the earnest-money therefore took place. Held, in a suit for specific performance of the above contract, that the first letter contained no absolute proposal or undertaking to purchase, but merely fixed the price to be given for the house, leaving the inspection of title-deed and the payment of earnest-money to be settled at the meeting asked for. That both parties having treated the payment of earnest-money as an element in the contract, the contract could not be completed till the amount of earnest-money had been ascertained. The Court sanctioned the sale, but at a higher price than that agreed on between the plaintiff and the guardian, and the latter sold to a third party. The plaintiff thereupon sued the minors by their guardian as next friend and the third party for specific performance of the agreement to sell to him at the price mentioned in the agreement. Held, that the contract was not one which could be specifically enforced, and that s. 26 of the Specific Relief Act did not apply. The contract as it stood was never a complete contract at any time, as it was contingent upon the permission of the Court, and the permission of the Court did not extend to the whole contract as agreed upon between the parties. The defendant K's substantial plea was that the mehal had been sold in one lot along with others, and taken by the head member of the family without knowledge of the agreement, and that plaintiff had himself through an agent competed for the patni at the sale: consequently that the event contemplated had not happened, and that plaintiff had himself avoided the agreement. H pleaded that he was not privy to the agreement, and the minor that he was not bound. The lower Appellate Court found that both parties had abandoned and avoided the agreement. Held, that, even if the agreement were binding on K, the Court could not compel a partial performance, which was all that could take place; for as plaintiff claimed half the patni and K's share was at most one-fourth plaintiff could be entitled to one-eighth only. A specific performance could not be decreed, for plaintiff could have resisted an action brought by the present defendants for fulfilment of contract, as he could not have been compelled to buy what he had not agreed to. 41. ——— Agreement extending lease on conditions—Right to possession under former lease expired—Agreement extending lease on conditions—Right to compensation for being kept out of possession. The defendant's father was engaged in litigation for the purpose of obtaining possession of a zamindari under a lease for ten years, given by the zamindar, commencing in 1857. While the suit was pending, the defendant's father sold five-eighths of his interest under the lease to the plaintiff and agreed to give plaintiff possession, in consideration of certain sums of money paid and certain liabilities undertaken by the plaintiff. The defendant's father obtained possession in 1865, but refused to put the plaintiff's agents in possession, on the ground that the plaintiff had not complied with the terms of the agreement. In giving a decree for the defendant's father against the lessor, the Privy Council reserved to the zamindar leave to institute a suit for redemption upon payment to the defendant of all sums advanced to him. In a suit instituted by the zamindar for redemption in 1866, a razinamah was signed by the plaintiff and defendant in the suit, by which the term of the original lease was extended to the year 1875 for the considerations therein contained. In 1867 the plaintiff brought a suit for possession, and claimed the benefit of the stipulations contained in the razinamah, or for damages. Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to possession, on the ground that defendant was not in possession under the old lease, inasmuch as the effect of the razinamah of 1866 was not to extend the former old lease, but plaintiff was entitled to recover damages for loss of profits during the defendant's father's possession.

and the monsoon season had begun. Ultimately it was agreed between him and the plaintiff that the plaintiff should complete the purchase within twelve days from the date of the agreement (22nd June 1886), and this was duly inserted in the agreement. During the twelve days the plaintiff took no steps to have his conveyance prepared, but asked the defendant for a month's time to complete, saying that he had not the money with him. After some hesitation the defendant extended the time to the 10th August. On the 21st July at latest the drafts of the conveyance from C to the defendant were formally and finally approved, and the defendant was anxious to complete the sale to the plaintiff. On the 23rd July he wrote to the plaintiff reminding him that the time to complete would expire on the 9th or 10th of August, and requesting him to be prepared then to complete the purchase ; otherwise he would consider the agreement of the 23rd June to be null and void, and would himself begin to repair the house. The plaintiff sent no reply to this letter, but at an interview with the defendant told him that he was considering the matter. He, however, took no steps in the matter beyond getting a draft conveyance prepared. The deed of conveyance by C to the defandant was ready for execution on the 23rd August. Matters remained in this state until September. On the 7th September the defendant through his solicitors served a notice on the plaintiff, requiring him to carry out the agreement of the 23rd June, and giving him notice that, in default of compliance within four days, he would consider the agreement at an end. The four days having expired without the plaintiff sending a reply or taking any steps to complete, the defendant considered his contract with the plaintiff to be at an end, and on the 13th September he completed his purchase from C without reference to the plaintiff. If the plaintiff had been ready to complete the purchase, the conveyance to him by the defendant and the conveyance by C to the defendant would have been executed simultaneously. Immediately after taking the conveyance from C, the defendant began to repair the house. When the repairs were almost complete, the plaintiff, on the 5th October 1886, sent a notice to the defendant requiring him to specifically perform the agreement of the 23rd June 1886. The defendant refused, and the plaintiff filed this suit for specific performance. Held, on the evidence, that the delay in completing the purchase was the delay of the plaintiff, and not of the defendant. Held, also, that, having regard to the circumstances under which the contract with the plaintiff was made and to the nature of the property, the time stipulated for the completion of the purchase was of the essence of the contract, and that the extension of time granted at the plaintiff's request to the 10th August operated only as a waiver to the extent of substituting the extended time for the original time, and did not destroy the essentiality of the time. Barclay v. *Messenger, 43 L. July was but a timely warning to the plaintiff that the contract would not be kept in suspense after the extended time had expired. The plaintiff, though thus warned, took no steps to complete, and was not therefore in a position to enforce performance from the defendant after the 10th August had gone by. It was contended for the plaintiff that the letter of the 7th September, written by the defendant's solicitors, treated the contract as then still subsisting and purported to put an end to it if not completed within four days; that the time so allowed was unreasonable; that the defendant, in fact, by that letter waived the plaintiff's previous default and gave the plaintiff a fresh starting-point. Held, that such was not the effect of the letter. The letter was only a qualified and conditional waiver of the performance within the stipulated time, the condition being that the plaintiff should complete within four days. That condition not having been complied with, the waiver could not be relied on. Barclay v. Messenger, 43 L. J. Ch. 449, and Stewart v. Smith, 6 Hare 222. Quære: Whether under all the circumstances of the case, and assuming time not to have been originally of the essence of the contract, the four days' time limited by that letter was unreasonable. 45. ——— Failure to give possession under agreement—Suit for specific possession. A purchaser of property of which possession was contracted to be given, but which contract the vendor is unable to fulfil, is at liberty to rescind the contract and sue for repayment of the purchase-money, and is not obliged to sue for specific performance. MOHUN LAL v. BEHAREE LAL . 3 N. W. 336

46. ——— Agreement to pay money or in default to execute bond—Suit to recover money. By an agreement it was contracted that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff ₹4,000 within six months, and that, in default of payment within such period, he should execute a bond to secure payment with interest within a further period of six months. The money not having been paid and no bond having been executed, more than twelve months after the date of agreement, the plaintiff sued to recover the amount due under the agreement with interest. Held, that the suit was rightly brought, and that the plaintiff was not bound to have sued for specific performance of the agreement to execute a bond. ROHIMUNISSA BEGUM v. MAHOMED MIRZA . 10 C. L. R. 103

47. ——— Agreement for assignment of rents—Suit for consideration-money—Damages. The plaintiff, having agreed to assign certain arrears of rent due to him to the defendant for a consideration, brought this suit in which he tendered the kobala of assignment and claimed the consideration-money with interest. Held, that the plaintiff had misconceived the shape in which his suit was brought, and, as his claim was purely for money, he should have sued for damages for breach of contract, especially as it was found as a fact that the subject assigned was now worthless. Held, also, that, as in a former suit brought by the present defendant for specific performance of the same contract the present plaintiff (as then defendant) had resisted successfully and without qualification, he could not now treat the contract as subsisting. 48. ——— Agreement by Government to pay moneys in lieu of tora garas hak—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts—Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871), s. 4. A suit against Government, upon an alleged agreement by Government to pay moneys from its treasury in lieu of tora garas haks, falls within the prohibition, in s. 4 of Act XXIII of 1871, to Civil Courts to entertain any suit relating to any grant of money made by the British Government, whatever may have been the consideration for such grant, and whatever may have been the nature of the payment, claim, or right for which such grant may have been substituted. Observations on the cessation of the collection of tora garas by Government. Quære: Whether Government bound itself to act perpetually as agent of the garasias in the collection of tora garas. Quære: Whether the Civil Courts would compel the specific performance of such an agreement. 49. ——— Agreement to lease—Subsequent lease to third party taking in good faith without notice of agreement—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 18. S agreed to lease certain immoveable property to W for a term of fifteen years, and to execute and register the lease on a certain specified day. Before the day fixed for executing the lease arrived, S executed a lease of the same property for two years in favour of N and others, who had no knowledge of the agreement to lease to W. W thereupon sued S and his lessees, claiming cancellation of the two years' lease to N and his co-lessees and specific performance of the agreement to lease to him for fifteen years. Held, that S was, having regard to s. 18 of the Specific Relief Act, in the position of a person who had agreed to lease, "having an imperfect title," and who had subsequently acquired such an interest in the property as enabled him to carry out his agreement, and that, although the lease to N and others could not, under the circumstances, be set aside, the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for "specific performance," of the agreement to lease to him, to take effect after the determination of the lease which had been granted to N and others. to the plaintiff, and the plaintiff paid into Court, as part of the consideration, the amount due by the defendants under the foreclosure decree. The defendants neither executed a conveyance of the property which they had agreed to sell, nor did they return to the plaintiff the money which he had paid on their behalf. The plaintiff thereupon sued the defendants, claiming in the alternative either a decree for specific performance of the agreement to sell or a refund of the money paid by him as part of the consideration for the sale agreed upon. The Court of first instance gave the plaintiff a decree for specific performance. On appeal by the defendants, it was held by the High Court (i) that, the terms of the agreement, to sell not being satisfactorily proved, no decree for specific performance could be made; (ii) that the plaintiff was therefore entitled to get back the money which he had paid under the agreement; and (iii) that the plaintiff's alternative claim for a refund on failure of consideration was governed, as to limitation, by Art. 97 of the second Schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, and was not barred by limitation, inasmuch as limitation only began to run from the date of the High Court's decree declaring the agreement to sell to be unenforceable. Dassu Kuar v. Dhum Singh, *I. 51. ——— Attempt by party to rescind agreement of which his heirs afterwards seek specific performance—Suit—Ekrar—Consideration, failure of. Where parties had made a compromise comprising an agreement, the chief consideration for which was the execution of an ekrar by one party acknowledging the title (as adopted son) of the other party to the agreement, and the former had subsequently by his conduct (in bringing a suit to set aside the adoption and alleging that the ekrar had been obtained from him by fraud) attempted and in a great measure succeeded in depriving the latter of the benefit of the agreement:—Held, in a suit by the heirs of the party, who had so tried to rescind the agreement, that there had been a failure of consideration and the conduct referred to was at variance with and amounted to a subversion of the relation intended to be established by the compromise, and that specific performance of the agreement could not be enforced. of the rent mentioned in the lease." There was nothing in the lease to indicate that notice of intention to renew was to be given before its expiration. Held, on a construction of the lease, that time was not of the essence of the contract, and that the plaintiff had not forfeited his right to have the lease renewed by reason of having allowed some months to elapse after the expiration of the original term before he gave notice to the defendants of his intention to take advantage of the covenant for renewal. A plaintiff instituted a suit for the specific performance of a contract to reconvey a plot of land, in which he did not claim mesne profits to which he was entitled in consequence of the defendant's delay in performing the contract; subsequently to the decree for specific performance he brought another suit for the mesne profits: Held, that the plaintiff's suit for mesne profits that accrued due before the institution of the suit for specific performance was barred under s. 43, Civil Procedure Code. 2. ——— Object of section —Wrongful dispossession—Onus of proof. S. 15 did not affect the general law on the matters to which it related, but provided a special remedy for a particular kind of grievance, e.g., to replace in possession a person who had been evicted by a wrongful act from landed property of which he had been in undisturbed possession, and to prevent a powerful person from thus shifting the evidence of proof from himself to another less able to support it. Weekly Notes (1887) 55*, referred to. Per MAHMOOD, J.— A person who is suing upon a merely possessory title to recover possession of immoveable property against a person who has ousted him must bring his suit, if at all, under s. 9 of Act I of 1877, and therefore within six months from the date of his dispossession. WALI AHMAD KHAN v. AJUDHIA KANDU . . . I. L. R. 13 All. 537

25. ——— Nature of possession giving right of suit—Juridical possession. Where the plaintiff alleged that he was in possession of a certain room as representing his father and uncle who were alive, but who were not parties to the suit, and that he had been dispossessed from such room within six months of the institution of the present suit :—Held, that his possession, not being juridical possession, did not entitle him to maintain a suit under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act. Permission to be allowed to amend the plaint by alleging that the possession of the plaintiff was exclusive possession on his own account was not allowed, such allegation being inconsistent with the case on which he came into Court. 26. ——— Suit for possession by person evicted brought more than six months from date of dispossession against one having better title than himself. Certain land belonging to two brothers was mortgaged by one of them and leased to plaintiffs by the mortgagee. The heirs of the other brother, declining to accept the mortgage or the lease which had been granted under it as binding on them, evicted plaintiffs from the land. Plaintiffs now brought this suit against the defendants to recover the possession of which the defendants had deprived them by such eviction. The defendants' title was found to be good. Held, that s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act was not applicable, and that plaintiffs could not succeed. Per SUBRAHMANIA AYYAR, J.—That it is an undoubted rule of law that a person who has been ousted by another who has no better right is, with reference to the person so ousting, entitled to recover by virtue of the possession he had held before the ouster, even though that possession was without any title. Asher v. *Whitlock, L. ——— s. 9—contd.

But that the above propositions were inapplicable to the facts of the present case where the defendants were found to have good title. Per O'FARRELL, J.—The rule is that where plaintiff in possession without any title seeks to recover possession of which he has been forcibly deprived by a defendant having a good title he can only do so under the provisions of s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act, and not otherwise. Here the defendants held under a lease granted by a person who was found to have title, and a suit to recover possession would only lie under the provisions of s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act, and this was clearly not such a suit. 28. ——— Suit for possession of land by person wrongfully ejected—Joinder of other claims. A Court should in all cases in which it applied give effect to the provisions of the first paragraph of s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, whether that section is expressly pleaded or not. There is nothing to prevent a claim for damages and a claim for establishment of title being joined with a claim for the relief provided for by the abovementioned section. RAM HARAKH RAI v. SHEODIHAL JOTI . . I. L. R. 15 All. 384

29. ——— Decree for possession—Form of decree. Where a decree was passed under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877) giving the plaintiff possession, and also directed that the costs of removing huts and filling up excavations should be paid by the defendant under this decree:—Held, that the latter portion of the decree was beyond the scope of a possessory decree under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act, and must be set aside. 30. ——— Hât—Suit to recover possession of a hât—Delivery of possession—Incorporeal right—Illegal dispossession. A hât, the possession of which is held by collecting tools or rents, is not "immoveable property," within the meaning of s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act; and a suit to recover its possession is therefore not maintainable under that section. Fadu Jhala v. *Gour Mohun Jhala, I. 31. ——— Constructive possession—Collusion by tenant with the trespasser—Refusal by the tenant to bring a suit—Right of suit. S. 9 of the Specific Relief Act contemplates the case of a person who, being in physical possession of property, is dispossessed. So, where plaintiff was in constructive possession of a plot of land through his tenant, and the latter was dispossessed: Held, that the plaintiff had no right to maintain a suit under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act. Held, further, that plaintiff was not entitled to bring a suit, even where, subsequent to such dispossession, the tenant, in collusion with the person who dispossessed, refused to bring a suit. 32. ——— Civil Procedure Code, s. 43—Summary suit for possession—Plaintiff restored to possession—Subsequent suit by plaintiff for mesne profits—Burden of proof. One Lachmi Narain died possessed of certain immoveable property. He left him surviving a widow, Mukhta Kunwar. Narain Das obtained possession of some portion of the said immoveable property, as he alleged, under a lease from Mukhta Kunwar, and held possession, at any rate, for some months, down to the 27th of November 1897. After the death of Mukhta Kunwar, one Sheo Kumar, who claimed to be the adopted son of Mukhta Kunwar, by some means other than legal process, dispossessed Narain Das. Narain Das thereupon instituted a suit under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act, and, having obtained a decree in the suit, was restored to possession. He then instituted a suit against Sheo Kumar to recover mesne profits for the time during which he was out of possession. As to this suit, it was held (i) that the suit was not liable to be defeated by reason of s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure; and (ii) that, as to the other issues arising in the suit, the first was, whether the defendant was the true owner of the property, the burden of proving which was on him; and, secondly, if the defendant established his title, whether the plaintiff had such an interest in the property, under the lease set up by him or otherwise, as would entitle him to remain in possession as against the defendant. SHEO KUMAR v. NARAIN DAS, (1902) I. L. R. 24 All. 501

33. ——— Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 622—Tenant holding over—Dispossession by landlord—Suit by tenant to recover possession—Extraordinary jurisdiction. A tenant holding over after the expiry of the period of tenancy was dispossessed without his consent by the landlord. The tenant then brought a suit for possession against the landlord under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877). The Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit. The plaintiff (tenant) thereupon applied under the extraordinary jurisdiction (s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, Act XIV of 1882). Held, reversing the decree, that the plaintiff (tenant) was not liable to be evicted by the defendant landlord proprio motu and that he was entitled to a decree for possession. Per BATCHELOR, J.—"To read the words 'due course of law' in s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act as merely equivalent to the word 'legally' is, we think, to deprive them of a force and a significance, which they carry on their very face.

SPECIFIC RELIEF ACT (I OF 1877) —contd.

For a thing, which is perfectly legal, may still be by no means a thing done 'in due course of law;' to enable this phrase to be predicated of it, it is essential, speaking generally, that the thing should have been submitted to the consideration and pronouncement of the law and the 'due course of law' means, we take it, the regular normal process and effect of the law operating on a matter which has been laid before it for adjudication. That, in our opinion, is the primary and natural meaning of the phrase, though it may be applied in a derived or secondary sense to other proceedings held under the direct authority of the law; in this sense it may be said, for instance, that revenue or taxes are collected in due course of law." The only issue tried by the Subordinate Judge was—"Whether the plaintiff was wrongly dispossessed within six months before the suit." Held, that the plaintiff's remedy lay in an application under the extraordinary jurisdiction (s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, Act XIV of 1882), inasmuch as that issue was not one upon which the dispute between the parties could be properly adjudicated upon. In a suit under the section instituted by the immediate landlord of the dispossessed tenants, who were not made parties to the suit, the Court made a decree in the plaintiff's favour:—Held, that the non-joinder of the tenants did not affect the jurisdiction of the Court and the High Court would not interfere. In a suit to recover damages for breach of the contract, the defendant pleaded that the dispute should have been referred to the decision of the selling broker, and that the suit was therefore barred under s. 21 of the Specific Relief Act, the latter clause of which provides that, "save as provided by the Code of Civil Procedure, no contract to refer a controversy to arbitration shall be specifically enforced; but if any person, who has made such a contract, and has refused to perform it, sues in respect of any subject which he has contracted to refer, the existence of such contract shall bar the suit." Held, that, before that section could be relied upon, it must be shown that the plaintiff had refused to refer to arbitration; and that the filing of the plaint was not such a refusal. 3. ——— Agreement to refer to arbitration—Refusal to refer—Suit in respect of matter agreed to be referred—Pleadings. One of the parties to a contract to refer a controversy to arbitration brought a suit for part of the subject-matter referred. The defendants pleaded the bar of s. 21 of the Specific Relief Act, but did not allege in their answer to the plaint that the plaintiff refused to perform his contract. Held, that the mere act of filing the suit on the part of the plaintiff was not tantamount to a refusal to perform his contract in the sense of s. 21 of the Specific Relief Act. The contract, the existence of which would bar a suit under the circumstances contemplated by s. 21 of the Specific Relief Act, must be an operative contract and not a contract broken up by the conduct of all the parties to it. 5. ——— Agreement to refer to arbitration—Refusal to perform agreement. In a suit against a brother-in-law for maintenance the defendant alleged that, after the plaintiff had left his house, an agreement had been made between them to refer their dispute to arbitration, that the agreement of reference had been actually signed, but that, on the day fixed by the arbitrators for making their award, the plaintiff had given notice to them not to make an award, and accordingly they had not done so. The defendant contended that, by reason of this agreement, the plaintiff's suit was barred by s. 21 of the Specific Relief Act, I of 1877. The alleged agreement to refer was in the following terms: "To D M and D D. We, the undersigned two persons, give in writing to you as follows: We used to reside and act in the house together in peace and harmony. Lately, a few days ago, in consequence of a disagreement amongst the women, V resided separately. Upon persuasion having been used towards her, V again resides in the house together with the rest: so now all are residing in the house in peace and harmony. If any occasion should arise, and if any disagreement should take place amongst the women, in order to find a remedy for that, we, the undersigned two persons, give in writing to you as follows: As to whatever award or settlement you two persons together will make, in accordance therewith, we agree to receive or pay. As to that, we are truly to act on our true religious faith; and we have written and delivered this writing of our free will and pleasure. The same is agreed to and approved of by our heirs and representatives, all; the 11th Jyesth Vadya Samvat 1939, the day of the event, Friday, the 1st June 1883. And as to this, you are truly to make and deliver a settlement within fifteen days' time." Held, that the plaintiff's suit was not barred. The agreement did not indicate what was the subject-matter to be referred, and there was no evidence to show that the plaintiff's claim to maintenance had been laid before the arbitrator or that the plaintiff had refused to perform her agreement to refer in reference to that claim. Nor was there any evidence to show the time at which the plaintiff withdrew from the arbitration—whether before or after the time allowed to the arbitrators to make and publish their award, viz., fifteen days. If the latter, her withdrawal could not, in any view of the section, be held to be a refusal on her part to perform her agreement to refer. Even if the plaintiff's withdrawal was unjustifiable, it appeared that the defendant had taken no steps, under s. 523 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), to have the agreement filed in Court, and thus render her withdrawal of no effect. There was nothing to show that the defendant did not acquiesce in it. Quære: Whether the above agreement was not void by reason of uncertainty. Quære: Whether the actual submission of a subject in dispute to named arbitrators, followed by the attempt of one of the parties to such submission to withdraw from or to prevent an award being made upon the submission falls within the concluding paragraph of s. 21 of the Specific Relief Act, I of 1877. in difference between them to arbitration, and for this purpose applied to the Court for an order of reference under s. 506 of the Civil Procedure Code. The application was granted, arbitrators were appointed, and it was ordered that they should make their award within one week. Before the week had expired, and before any award had been made, one of the parties made an ex parte application under s. 373 of the Code for leave to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit in respect of the same subject-matter. The application was granted, the suit struck off, and a fresh suit instituted in pursuance of the permission thus given by the Court. In defence to this suit it was pleaded that the suit was barred by s. 21 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877). Held, that the Court in the former proceedings had no power no revoke the order of reference prior to award except as provided by s. 510 of the Code ; that consequently the Court's order under s. 373 was ultra vires if involving such revocation, or, if not involving it, left the order of reference still in force ; that in either alternative the suit was barred by s. 21 of the Specific Relief Act ; and that it was immaterial that the period within which the award was to be made expired before the bringing of the second action. Per TYRRELL, J., that the suit was barred by the second clause of s. 373, the Court having had no jurisdiction to pass the order under that section, or, having referred the suit to arbitration, to restore the suit to its file and treat it as awaiting the Court's decision. 2. ——— Specific performance—Issues—Discretion of Court—Delay—Laches—Purchase subject to subsisting equities—Right, title and interest of judgment-debtor. The plaintiff sued for specific performance of an agreement whereby the father of the first defendant and the husband of the second defendant agreed to sell to the plaintiff 500 square yards of land forming part of a property consisting of a chawl and vacant land. The agreement was dated the 29th of June 1901, and the suit was filed on the 30th November 1903. The third defendant purchased the entire property at a Court-sale in execution of a money-decree obtained by the creditors of the original vendor against his estate. He had notice of the plaintiff's claim. Held, that even if a purchaser at Court-sale purchases without notice, he can only buy what the Court could sell, i.e., the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor, as these existed at the date of the sale, and as these could have been honestly disposed of by the judgment-debtor himself. Sobhagchand v. *Bhaichand, I. On the 7th August 1877, he mortgaged such estate to P, agreeing that, if he failed to pay the mortgage-money within the time fixed, he would convey such estate to P, and that, if he failed to execute such conveyance, P should be competent to bring a suit "to get a sale effected and a deed of absolute sale executed." On the 6th October 1877 F mortgaged such estate to B and D. By this mortgage the lien created by the mortgage of the 7th February 1873 was extinguished. In December 1877, B and D obtained a decree against F on the mortgage of the 6th October 1877, and in June 1878, in execution of that decree, such estate was put up for sale and was purchased by D. In February 1880 P sued F and D for the execution of a conveyance of such estate to him in accordance with F's agreement of the 7th August 1877. Held, that the mortgage of the 7th August 1877 was not in the nature of a mortgage by conditional sale, and there was no necessity for P to take proceedings to foreclose the mortgage, and the suit was maintainable. Also that, assuming that D had no notice of the agreement of the 7th August 1877, it was very doubtful whether under s. 27 (b) of Act I of 1877 D could claim that specific performance of that agreement should not be granted, inasmuch as the contest lay between a prior and subsequent lien created upon the same property, which had passed to the transferee under a sale in execution of a decree for the enforcement of the subsequent lien. The plaintiff on 1st June 1895 executed a sham sale-deed in favour of the defendants, neither party intending that it should be acted upon. The defendants in February 1899 began to set up a claim to ownership on the strength of the deed. But where the Courts below in the deliberate exercise of the discretion entrusted to them by s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act made such a decree, the Judicial Committee refused to interfere with it, although their Lordships thought that, had they been sitting as a Court of first instance they would have felt great hesitation before making the decree. Their Lordships found special reasons for not interfering in the present case, in the fact that in their pleadings the widow and her devisees had set up a Will alleged to have been executed in her favour by her deceased husband under which she claimed to be absolute owner—a title which was inconsistent with any present or future rights of the reversioners. The property had belonged to S, deceased. Prior to the death of S, who was a minor, proceedings had been taken for the appointment of a guardian for him under the Guardian and Wards Act. Pending those proceedings the District Court appointed plaintiff Receiver and placed him in possession of the property, removing the minor's mother, the present defendant, from the charge thereof. The High Court reversed that order and directed that possession of the property should be handed back to the defendant. This order had not been carried out to any extent at the date of suit. On the objection being raised that the suit was not maintainable by reason of s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act :—Held, that the suit was maintainable. The possession of the property was, at the time, neither with the defendant nor with the plaintiff, it being in custodia legis and in the hands of an officer of the Court and it being a mere accident that that officer was the plaintiff. Inasmuch as the defendant was not in possession, plaintiff could not, as against her, have consequential relief, and nothing more was required to be done to secure to the plaintiff all his rights than to obtain an order of the Court enabling him to retain possession in his own right. The plaintiff, not having at the time of filing the suit been dispossessed of the property sold, claimed only the setting aside of the auction sale and cost and paid a proper Court-fee on the suit so framed. About a month after the institution of the suit the auction-purchaser was put into possession of the property, which he had purchased. Then the suit came on for hearing, the plaintiff was directed to amend his plaint by adding a claim for possession of the property and to pay the proper Court-fee upon a suit for possession, and on his declining to do so his suit was dismissed with costs. On appeal by the plaintiff it was held, that the suit when instituted being in every respect regular and properly stamped, no action on the part of the defendants subsequent to the institution of the suit could affect or prejudice the right of the plaintiff and the suit was remanded under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure to the lower Court for determination according to law. *Surjan Singh v. The plaintiff asked for a declaration that the house was not liable to sale in execution of the decree obtained by the first defendant. Held, that s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act was no bar to the suit, the plaintiff not being obliged to seek any other relief (as, for example, cancellation of the deed of mortgage) than that which he had claimed. Plaintiff was not the nearest reversioner, there being certainly one and apparently two sets of reversioners, who would be entitled to take in succession before him. Plaintiff's father had not brought any suit, though he could have done so, and the father's right to bring such a suit had become barred. The nearest reversioner had concurred in the improper alienation and all the reversioners nearer than plaintiff had omitted to sue and were barred from doing so by limitation. They were all parties to the suit:—Held, that the suit was not barred by limitation. Where there are several reversioners entitled successively to succeed to an estate held for life by a Hindu widow, no one of such reversioners can be held to claim through or derive his title from another reversioner, even if that other happens to be his father, but each derives his title from the last full owner. Plaintiff was therefore entitled to the benefit of s. 7 of the Limitation Act. There is no privity of estate between one reversioner and another as such, and, consequently, an act or omission by one reversioner cannot bind another reversioner, who does not claim through him. Bhagwanta v. *Sukhi, I. Relief Act to bring a declaratory suit is not limited by illustration (E) of that section or by Art. 125 of the Limitation Act to suits by a person presumptively entitled to possession. The general words of a section should not be limited to the illustations given in the Act or by reference to the suits specially enumerated in the Limitation Act. Though it was doubtful whether the lower Court should, in the exercise of its discretion, have allowed the suit to proceed, having regard to the remoteness of plaintiff's interest, the High Court made the declaration prayed for, as the finding of fact was that the alienation had been made without necessity and was improper, and it might be that, when the widow should die the plaintiff would be the presumptive reversioner, and the declaration now made would save him from having to prove the impropriety of the alienation again. Per DAVIES, J.—The declaration made in the present suit would serve the purpose of perpetuating testimony for whomsoever might happen to be the next reversion on the death of the widow. C. 61 67, 68,* referred to. Where the facts alleged in a plaint are totally inconsistent with decisions pronounced on the amplest materials, in litigation extending over three quarters of a century such a plaint ought to be dismissed summarily in the exercise of such inherent power. The discretionary power to grant declaratory decrees under the Specific Relief Act ought not to be exercised when the plaintiff seeks to have declared as invalid and void a transaction which, on his own allegations, would be but a brutum fulmen so far as his rights are concerned. Thakurain Jaipal Kunwar v. Bhaiya Indar Bahadur Singh, L. R. 31 I. A. 67, 69. It will be no ground for the grant of such discretionary relief, that the transaction in question may furnish a piece of evidence against the plaintiff. 1. ——— s. 10—Construction of section. An objection to the validity of a document under Regulation XVIII of 1827, as distinguished from its inadmissibility in evidence, or from a prohibition to Courts of Justice or public officers to Act upon it, was an objection on the merits under Act VIII of 1859. Where two documents were executed in the Island of Bombay, respectively, under date the 29th August 1851 and 4th August 1852, and did not appear to have been originally expressly intended to operate within any of the zillahs subordinate to the Presidency of Bombay:—Held, that they did not come within the scope of Regulation XVIII of 1827. That Regulation, being an enactment imposing stamp duties upon the subject, must be strictly construed, and although the High Court believed that those documents were actually intended to operate, so far as the particular property in question in the suit was concerned, in the zillah of Tanna, the High Court declined to hold "expressly" to mean the same as "actually," as nothing appeared on the face of the documents to show where the property mentioned in them was situated. 2. ——— Intention to evade stamp laws. A bond, executed between a plaintiff who sued upon it and the defendants, contained the following clause: "And inasmuch as we (the defendants) are urgently in want of money, and are unable to procure a stamp at the moment, we have executed the bond on plain paper. Should it be necessary for you (plaintiff) to bring a suit against us, whatever penalty you may have to pay shall be made good by us, with interest." The Small Cause Court Judge, before whom the case was tried, considered the above clause in the bond to be evidence of an intention between the parties to avoid the stamp laws, and refused to receive evidence to the contrary. He also refused to admit the bond in evidence. Held, on reference to the High Court, that the clause in question did not amount to an agreement to evade the stamp laws. The Judge might have inferred from it that it was the intention of the parties to evade the stamp laws, but in that case he should have heard evidence to the contrary. 5. ——— Hundi—Inadmissibility in evidence for want of stamp. The plaintiff brought a suit against three defendants under the following circumstances: The third defendant was the tenant of a village under the second defendant, the first defendant being the agent and manager of the second defendant. The third defendant owed the second defendant a sum of money on account of rent and drew a hundi on the plaintiff for R1,000 to be paid to the first defendant or order, and containing these words: "For which amount I shall deliver over to you grain in that village and its hamlets, and for which the Dewan (first defendant) will issue an order to the above effect." The hundi was upon a one-anna stamp. Plaintiff, on receipt of this hundi, drew upon the back of it another hundi upon his mother-in-law in the following terms: "On demand please pay to Mahomed Radhamatulla Shaib, Dewan of Venkatagiri (first defendant), or to his order, the within-mentioned amount for grain to be supplied me by Mr. Ward (third defendant) on the order of the said Mahomed Radhamatulla Shaib, the Dewan of Venkatagiri." the plaintiff, and beneath his signature was that of the first defendant. The amount mentioned in the hundi was paid to the first defendant; the second hundi was unstamped. The plaintiff's case was, that the first defendant entered upon a binding engagement with him to deliver, or permit the delivery, of grain of the value of R1,000, and that he failed to fulfil his engagement. The Civil Judge decreed for the plaintiff. On appeal:—Held, by the High Court, reversing the decision of the Civil Court, that the second hundi was not admissible in evidence, not being stamped, and that there was no evidence of such an agreement as that relied on by the plaintiff. 7. ——— Insufficiently-stamped document—Procedure—Admissibility in evidence. The plaintiff sued his elder brother for a share in certain family property. The defendant raised a question of family custom, and relied on a certain deed of release which he said the plaintiff had given him, but the existence of which the plaintiff denied. That document was not stamped, though, on the face of it, it stated that it was to be stamped. No objection was taken on that score to the document before the first and lower Appellate Courts, who considered that the document was a genuine document executed by the plaintiff. After its production, it had an insufficient stamp of two annas put upon it. The High Court, on appeal, left the deed as part of the evidence in the case, but qualified its effect and the extent of its operation by making it a deed of release releasing so much of that which the plaintiff might otherwise claim as would be covered by the insufficient stamp of two annas. Held, that the High Court might either have refused to admit the document for want of a stamp, or—which would be more correct—it might have required it to be properly stamped and the penalty paid into Court; but the course taken was entirely without precedent, without principle and without authority. The plaintiff claimed in the present suit from the defendant R200, and interest on that amount at 12 per cent. per annum from the 14th November ber 1877 to the date of suit. Held, by STUART, C.J., and PEARSON, OLDFIELD, and STRAIGHT JJ., treating the suit as one for a debt, that although such instrument was not admissible in evidence as a promissory note, as it was insufficiently stamped, it was nevertheless admissible as proof of an acknowledgment of such debt. Per SPANKIE, J., treating the suit as based upon a promissory note, that such instrument, being insufficiently stamped, was not admissible in evidence. 2. ——— and Sch. I, Art. 14, and Sch. II, Art. 36—Admissibility of unstamped document for collateral purpose. The plaintiff, as administrator of D, sued to recover from the defendants the sum of R3,000, alleging that, in February 1878, the said sum had been entrusted to defendant Nos. 1 and 2 for investment on D's account, and had been advanced by them as a loan to defendant No. 3. The defendants alleged that the money was originally the property, not of D but of the plaintiff himself ; that he had made it over as a gift to his daughter P, by whom it had been lent to defendant No. 3 and that defendant No. 3 had duly repaid it to P. In the defendants' written statement it was alleged that the gift to P had been made in the month of February 1878, and evidence to this effect was given at the trial. At the trial, however, the defendants also alleged that in July 1878 the plaintiff had executed an instrument of gift of R3,000 to P and they produced a document, dated 3rd July 1878, purporting to be signed by the plaintiff, whereby he made over R3,000 to P, of which R1,000 was to be held by P, in trust for D during D's life, and to be paid back to plaintiff on D's death, and the remaining R2,000 were to be the property of P absolutely. When tendered in evidence, the document was objected to as being unstamped, and therefore inadmissible. Held, that the document, though unstamped, was admissible in evidence on the ground that the purpose for which it was tendered was collateral to the object

A bill for the monthly salary of a Government official was sent to the treasury for payment, when it was discovered that the one-anna receipt stamp affixed thereto was not cancelled, and a prosecution was thereupon instituted by the Collector against the official in question, who had executed the instrument, under s. 62 of the General Stamp Act. The accused was convicted under that section by the Deputy Magistrate, and the District Magistrate on appeal, holding that, upon the evidence, the conviction should have been for abetment and not for the principal offence, altered the finding accordingly to a conviction under s. 109 of the Penal Code, read with ss. 11 and 62 of the General Stamp Act. Held, that the receipt to the salary bill in question was an instrument which was required to be stamped before or at the time of execution, and was not of the kind contemplated by the first paragraph of s. 11 of the General Stamp Act; that consequently there was no abetment of any offence under ss. 11 and 62 of the Act; that the offence which appeared to have been committed was one under the second paragraph of s. 61; but that, no sanction having been given by the Collector under s. 69 for a prosecution under s. 61, it was not advisable to interfere further than by setting aside the conviction and sentence. I of that Act, liable to stamp duty is the sum of the purchase-money and the principal money so due on the mortgage. The certificate of sale therefore, whenever it is possible, should set out the exact amount that is due, at the time of the sale, in respect of the principal sum secured by the mortgage. Semble: It is otherwise if the mortgage be only recited in the proclamation of sale, and not expressly set out, as an existing incumbrance on the property sold, in the certificate of sale. As a fact, only R2,301 of that amount were actually advanced by Z, the balance R4,800, being advanced by R. In 1868 Z sold the mortgagee's interest in the deed of mortgage to R for R2,301, the transfer being by endorsement and not being stamped. In April 1869 G transferred a portion of the mortgaged property to A. In September 1869 R sued to have such transfer set aside, claiming in virtue of the deed of mortgage and the transfer endorsed thereon. On the 23rd September 1871 the Court of first instance refused to receive the transfer by endorsement in evidence and to proceed with the suit, because such transfer was not stamped. On the 20th April 1872 Z executed a stamped transfer of the mortgagee's interest in the deed of mortgage in favour of R. R, treating the order of the 23rd September 1871 as an interlocutory one, presented the instrument of the 20th April 1872 to the Court, and prayed that it would proceed with the suit. The Court proceeded with the suit, and gave R a decree. This decree was reversed by the Court of first appeal, on the ground that that instrument did not cure the defect of the transfer by endorsement, and that the order of the 23rd September 1871 was final. The decree of the Court of first appeal was affirmed by the High Court in June 1873. Thereupon R made a criminal charge against Z of cheating in respect of the transfer by endorsement. This charge was eventually dropped, and was followed by a reference to arbitration by R and Z. According to the agreement to refer, which was dated the 17th August 1874, the dispute between the parties was whether R should return the deed of mortgage to Z, and Z return the R2,301 to R or not. The arbitrators made an award, which was dated the 18th August 1874, which directed, inter alia, that R should return the deed of mortgage to Z and Z return the R2,301 to R. The deed was returned to Z, but the money was not returned to R. In 1875 Z applied, under Regulation XVII of 1806 to foreclose the mortgage. In 1880 the mortgage having been foreclosed, S as Z's representative sued for proprietory possession of the mortgaged property. The lower Courts held that all the Acts of R and Z subsequent to the disposal of R's suit of 1869 were fraudulent and collusive, and done with a view to evade the stamp law, and the person actually interested in the deed of mortgage was R and not S, and on this ground, as well as on other grounds, dismissed S's suit. Per STRAIGHT, J.—That the transfer by endorsement of the deed of mortgage, notwithstanding such transfer was not stamped, transferred to R the mortgagee's interest in the deed; that such interest could not be re-transferred to Z except by a formal instrument stamped according to law, inasmuch as any other mode of re-transfer would leave Z under the same disabilities as regards the stamp law as R, as any suit instituted by Z would, strictly speaking, be based, not on the deed of mortgage, but on the re-transfer; and that therefore, under these circumstances, and having regard to the fact that Z had not returned the R2,301 to R, S actually, though not ostensibly, based his suit upon a re-transfer of the mortgagee's interest in the deed of mortgage, which was not stamped, and for which he had not given any consideration, and consequently his suit was not maintainable. Also that the award could not alter the effect of the transfer by endorsement. Per MAHMOOD, J.—That the lower Courts were not justified in their findings as to the fraudulent and collusive nature of the acts of R and Z after the disposal of R's suit of 1869, or in finding that the person actually interested in the deed of mortgage was R, and not Z, such findings being based upon pure conjectures. That the unstamped transfer by endorsement was inadmissible to show that Z had transferred his interest in the deed of mortgage to R, whether R or the mortgagor wished to use it in order to show that fact, and consequently Z must be still regarded as the person interested in the deed, and S was therefore entitled to maintain the suit. 5. ——— Suit on an unstamped promissory note—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 65, cl. (b), and 91. The plaintiff sued to recover from the defendant the balance of a debt due on an unstamped note passed to him by the defendant for the consideration of R38. The note recited that the defendant had received the amount, and would repay it after three months from the date of its execution. The defendant admitted, by his written statement, execution of the note, and the receipt of R37 in the shape of paddy, but alleged that he had paid off the debt. He also contended that the note, being unstamped, could not be admitted in evidence. The plaintiff contended that the note was a bond and could be admitted on payment of the stamp duty and the penalty, under s. 34 of the Stamp Act (I of 1879), which he offered to pay. The Subordinate Judge was of opinion that the note in question was a promissory note, but the defendant's admission of the consideration enabled the plaintiff to sue, although the note itself was inadmissible. On reference to the High Court :—Held, per JARDINE, J., that the document sued on was a promissory note, and that, the suit being brought on it as the original cause of action, the admission of its contents by the defendant did not avail the plaintiff, the document itself being inadmissible for want of a stamp. Held, per BIRDWOOD, J., that the plaintiff could not recover irrespectively of the promissory note, as he did not seek to prove the consideration otherwise than by the note, which was inadmissible in evidence. The admission contained in the defendant's written statement did not amount to an admission of the claim as for money lent. The case was one in which no secondary evidence under s. 65, cl. (b), of Act I of 1872 was admissible, the primary evidence, the document itself, being forthcoming. The plaintiff not having offered any independent evidence of the advance alleged by him, and the defendant not having admitted by his written statement that any money was lent to him, as alleged by the plaintiff, but having set up an entirely different transaction in respect of which he admitted no remaining liability, the plaintiff's suit should be rejected. 12. ——— Admission of document in evidence—Unstamped promissory note admitted as a bond on a payment of stamp duty and penalty—Subsequent rejection too late. The plaintiff sued to recover the amount due on three khatas. The defendant objected that the khatas were not duly stamped. The Subordinate Judge held that the instruments were bonds, and as such admitted them in evidence on payment of the proper stamp duty and penalty under s. 34, proviso I, of the Stamp Act (I of 1879). At a subsequent stage of the same suit his successor in office was of opinion that the khatas in question were promissory notes; that as such they could be stamped only at the date of their execution, and that they had been illegally admitted in evidence under s. 34, proviso I. He accordingly dismissed the suit. On appeal, the District Judge agreed with the Subordinate Judge that the instruments sued on were promissory notes, but held that, after they had once been admitted in evidence on payment of the stamp duty and penalty, the question of their admissibility could not be subsequently raised in the suit under proviso III to s. 34 of the Stamp Act. He therefore reversed the decree of the Subordinate Judge, and remanded the case for trial on the merits. Against this order of remand, defendants appealed to the High Court. Held, that the promissory notes, having been once admitted in evidence, could not afterwards be rejected on the ground of their not being duly stamped. XVIII of 1827, s. 10.* Where a Court of first instance has admitted a document in evidence as duly stamped, s. 34, cl. 3, of the Stamp Act (I of 1879) precludes the Appellate Court from questioning the admission of such document. If the Appellate Court considers the document to be insufficiently stamped, it can only proceed under s. 50 of the Act. S. 34 of Act I of 1879 applies to instruments whenever executed, and must therefore be held to override the special provision of s. 10 of Bombay Regulation XVIII of 1827, according to which no instrument requiring a stamp thereunder was valid unless duly stamped. On a petition being preferred for the revision of the order of dismissal:—Held, that s. 34 of the Stamp Act did not render the document inadmissible in evidence, that section being applicable only to an instrument which is "chargeable with duty." There is no provision of law which requires a promissory note executed out of British India to be stamped before it is sued on or used in Court, where the holder of the note has not done any of the acts referred to in ss. 5 and 18 of the Act, and, in consequence, the obligation to stamp has not arisen. An ordinary agent authorized to sign on behalf of his principal would fall within the description, and consequently within the purview of the section. Where, therefore, a person signed a firm's name to certain letters under the authority of the firm, the circumstance that the body of the letters were written at the dictation of the manager of the firm was held not to be sufficient to distinguish his case from that of any other agent. 5. ——— Acknowledgment of debt—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), s. 19—Intention. The question whether or not an allusion to a debt contained in a letter from a debtor to his creditor amounts to an acknowledgment of the debt within the meaning of Art. 1, Sch. I of the Stamp Act, 1879, is a question in each case of the intention of the writer. Hence, where such a letter, written ante litem motam, before limitation in respect of the debt had expired, and at a time when other evidence of the debt was subsisting, was tendered in evidence as an acknowledgment of the debt for the purpose of saving limitation under the provisions of s. 19 of the Limitation Act, 1877:—Held, that the said letter was not inadmissible in evidence by reason of its not having been stamped. 1. ——— Sch. I, Art. 4—Agreement to lease—Correspondence containing agreement to lease—Complete agreement. Certain correspondence passed between the plaintiff and defendant relating to the lease of a flat in premises in occupation of the plaintiff, which admittedly contained an agreement for a lease for one year, with an option of renewal for another year. The terms in which the option was given were as follows: The defendant in one letter wrote: "So I expect you will give me the option of renewal for another year, respectively five months on the same terms." To which the plaintiff replied: "You may have the option of retaining it (the flat) for another year on the same terms, but not for a shorter period." In pursuance of an arrangement, the defendant had a draft lease prepared embodying the terms agreed on, which he sent to the plaintiff for approval, and which was in due course returned by him "approved." The defendant then had the lease engrossed and properly stamped, but the plaintiff eventually refused to execute it, and it was never signed by the defendant. The option of renewal was given in the unexecuted lease in the following terms: "Also with option to renew for another twelve months certain." The defendant having entered into possession and disputes having arisen, the plaintiff gave him notice to quit, and sued to eject him, alleging that at the most he was a mere monthly tenant. The defendant pleaded that under the lease he was entitled to hold for a year. The year expired before the suit came on to be heard, and the defendant, not having exercised the option to renew, vacated the premises. At the hearing the defendant, in support of his case, tendered the correspondence and the stamped unexecuted lease. It was objected that the correspondence was inadmissible in evidence because it was unstamped.

and on behalf of the defendant it was argued that the stamped unexecuted lease must be treated as part of the correspondence, and as it was properly stamped, no further stamp was necessary. Held, that, as the correspondence contained a complete agreement independently of the draft and engrossed lease, the latter could not be treated as part of the correspondence, and that consequently the correspondence must be stamped and the penalty paid before it could be admitted in evidence. The Collector of Poona was of opinion that the rent note in question was a lease and sufficiently stamped with four annas. The Inspector-General of Registration held the document to be an agreement falling under Art. 5, cl. (c), Sch. I of the Stamp Act, and chargeable with a stamp duty of eight annas. On reference by the Commissioner to the High Court:—Held, per BIRDWOOD and PARSONS, JJ. (NANABHAI HARIDAS, J., dissenting), that the rent-note in question was an agreement, and as such chargeable with a stamp duty of eight annas under cl. Should, however, growing grass be not regarded as immoveable property, the instrument was an agreement for, or relating to, the sale of goods, the price being fixed with reference to the quantity to be consumed by the cattle and, as such, was exempt from stamp duty under Sch. 1. ——— Sch. I, Art. 44, cls. (a) and (b)—Mortgage-deeds—Covenants for quiet enjoyment—Per Curiam. Cl. (a) of Art. 44 of Sch. I of the Stamp Act, 1879, applies only to those deeds in which possession of the mortgaged property is given, or agreed to be given at the time of the execution of the deed, or, in other words, where immediate possession of the property is given, or agreed to be given, by the terms of the deed to the mortgagees. Per GARTH, C.J. The principle of the distinction between the two classes of mortgages named in Art. 44 is that, where the title to the land and the possession or immediate right to possession both pass to the mortgagee, the same duty is charged as upon a conveyance by way of sale, but when the title only passes, and possession, or the right to possession, does not, the lower duty is chargeable. Per MITTER, J. The word "given" in cl. (a) of Art. 44 points out that only those transactions are intended to be covered where the transfer of possession takes place in consequence of the agreement on the part of the mortgagor to deliver over possession as part of the security for the mortgage-money; but where the mortgagee becomes entitled to enter upon possession irrespective of the consent of the mortgagor to make over possession, cl. (a) will not apply. Per FIELD, J. The Stamp Act is a Revenue Act, and the rule of construction of such Acts is, that in case of a doubt, the construction most beneficial to the subject is to be adopted. The words "agreed to be given" in Art. 44, cl. (a), can only apply where there is an express or implied agreement to give possession; they will not apply where there is no such agreement, express or implied, but the effect of the document is such that a mortgagee has merely a right which he can enforce in a Court of law to obtain possession. 2. ——— Construction. A mortgage-deed, dated the 4th August 1883, stipulated that possession was to be given to the mortgagee after the 31st May 1818, if the mortgage loan was not entirely repaid by that date. On the question being referred to the High Court, whether cl. (a) or cl. (b) of Art. 44, Sch. I, Stamp Act I of 1879, applied to the case:—Held, that cl. (b) applied. The intention of cl. (a) is to cover cases of mortgage with possession, and the words "agreed to be given" are to be read as if the words "at the time of execution" immediately followed and qualified the word "given." Cl. (a) should be read as if it were worded "when possession of the property . . . . . is given by the mortgagor at the time of execution, or is agreed to be then given, and not . . . . . is then agreed to be given." 3. ——— Stipulations not creating fresh obligations. Under the ordinary law of mortgage, the mortgagor is bound, so long as the equity of redemption remains with him, to indemnify the estate against expenses incurred in protecting the title. So that where a mortgage-bond contains stipulations under which the mortgagor engages to repay to the mortgagee any costs he may incur in suits brought against him by the mortgagor's co-sharers, and also any debts charged upon the mortgaged property which the mortgagee may pay, the stipulations do not create any fresh obligation, and require no additional stamp duty. ——— Sch. I, Art. 46, and s. 34, and Sch. At the hearing, in order to prove the terms of the contracts, the plaintiffs tendered two notes, or memoranda of the contracts, which purported to be signed by the broker and also by the defendant. These notes were, in fact, the sold notes which the broker had given to the plaintiffs. Each of these notes had been stamped with an anna stamp, but the stamp on one of them had not been cancelled at all, and the stamp on the other was without any mark of cancellation except a small part of the first letter of the defendant's signature, consisting of a slightly curved line. On these notes being tendered in evidence, it was objected that they were inadmissible, being unstamped, having regard to ss. 11 and 34 of the Stamp Act. The Court allowed the objection, and rejected the notes. The plaintiffs then contended that the documents were only memoranda of parol contracts and might be regarded as agreements for the sale of goods, and exempt from stamp duty, under cl. 2, Sch. II, or at all events admissible on payment of a penalty—ss. 7 and 34. Held, that the documents in question were documents of the nature of a note or memorandum chargeable under Art. 46 of Sch. 1. ——— s. 2 (l) (b)—Promissory Note. The defendant passed to the plaintiff a document to this effect: "I have this day taken from you in cash R48 (forty-eight). "I have received this amount. I shall repay this money without taking any objection, when you should demand [it]." The document was attested by two witnesses. It bore a one-anna adhesive stamp. Held, on a construction of the document, that it was a bond within the meaning of s. 2 (5) (b) of the Indian Stamp Act (II of 1899); since the document was attested and was not payable to order or bearer, and the executant obliged himself to pay the money to another. 2. ——— Transactions comprised in a document—Agreement to lend money for improvement, additions and repairs and for working mortgaged mills—Agreement to lend money to partnership not capable of specific performance—Breach of the agreement—Claim for damages—Stamp duty to the document. The transanctions comprised in a document consisted of a transfer of a mortgage secured on a cotton mill and an agreement that the transferee should lend money at the request of the transferor to the mortgaged mill for making improvements, additions and repairs and for the working of the mill. A question having arisen as to what was the proper stamp duty payable on the document. Held, that the document was only liable to stamp duty as a transfer of mortgage and as an agreement, that is, to R5-8-0 in all. An agreement to lend money does not create an obligation to pay money within cl. (5) (b) of s. 2 of the Indian Stamp Act (II of 1899). An agreement to lend money to a partnership is not capable of specific performance and it creates no debt although the breach of it may give rise to a claim for damages. Each list was signed by three brothers and not by the fourth, who ratained it. A question having arisen whether the lists constituted a partition between the brothers and required to be stamped as such under the Stamp Act (II of 1899): Held, that the four documents formed, when read together, an instrument of partition within the meaning of s. 2, cl. 15, of the Stamp Act II of (1899). Each document formed the title of the brother retaining it against the other three brothers with regard to the property, which came to his share when the partition was effected. By the indenture, each intended executant, for a consideration of one rupee and a royalty, granted to the company a license to prospect and work upon a piece of land belonging to him, and covenanted to sell or lease the mining rights over it, if required. Upon the face of it, the instrument dealt with several distinct matters, namely, with agreements with several persons with regard to their separate property; and the proper stamp to be affixed was an eight-anna stamp, or as many such stamps as there were separate landholders who were made parties to the agreement. Held, also, that the instrument did not contain distinct agreements with any one raiyat. This letter was written on an unstamped paper. On a reference by the Subordinate Judge, to ascertain the requisite stamp upon it: Held, that, as the document in question effected a transfer of property by defendant to his creditor (plaintiff) in consideration of a debt due to the latter, it fell within the definition of "conveyance" in the Indian Stamp Act (II of 1899), and should be stamped as such. accountability of the first defendant, who was their cashier, to the plaintiffs, and constituted a mortgage executed as security for the due fulfilment of his duties as cashier, and for the repayment of any sum that first defendant might be found liable for, as cashier, to an extent not exceednig R6,000. At the date of suit, first defendant was liable to plaintiffs in a sum of over R8,000, which plaintiffs now claim. Held, that s. 26 of the Stamp Act of 1899 had no application to this case, the transfer of the mortgage being liable to a fixed duty under Art. 62 (c) of Sch. I of the Act, and the duty payable in respect of the other portion of the instrument being also a fixed sum under Art. 57 (b). Though the latter instrument contained a promise by first defendant to pay plaintiffs the amount payable by him under the previous mortgage, this was not a fresh contract, entered into for consideration, but must be understood to operate only as an admission that what McDowell and Company had purported to transfer was a subsisting debt due by first defendant. As the sustenance of the present claim did not involve giving effect to the promise in the later document, the claim was unaffected by it even if it could have been treated as one requiring the payment of an ad valorem duty. 4. ——— Refund of excess of stamp duty—Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), ss. 13, 14, and 15. The plaintiff brought a suit for declaration of his maliki right over a certain patni tenure, and he alleged that the defendants had executed a hiba in his favour in consideration of a diamond ring worth R30,000. He valued his suit at R5,600, being twenty times the malikana of R280, to which the petitioner alleged he was entitled. The Subordinate Judge held that the plaintiff was bound to value his suit at R30,000, the consideration mentioned in the hibanama. The plaintiff paid the deficiency, and his suit was ultimately dismissed. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court, and valued his appeal at R5,600, which valuation was accepted by the High Court. On an application by the plaintiff for a certificate authorizing him to receive back from the Collector the excess of stamp duty paid by him :—Held, that the Court had no power to grant it, its power being limited to cases specified in ss. 13, 14, and 15 of the Court Fees Act; but that there is nothing in the law preventing the Government from refunding any amount which they may think the plaintiff was improperly ordered to pay. In the matter of the petition of ZOYNOODDEEN HOSSEIN KHAN . . . . . 11 B. Held, by the Privy Council on appeal, that it is not required that in a consolidating statute each enactment, when traced to its source, must be construed according to the state of things which existed at a prior time when it first became law; the object being that the statutory law bearing on the subject should be collected and made applicable to the existing circumstances; nor can a positive enactment be annulled by indications of intention, at a prior time, gathered from previous legislation on the matter. 28. ——— Acts relating to procedure—Retrospective operation of Act—Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879), s. 73—Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief (Amendment) Act (VI of 1895). In this suit the Subordinate Judge of Karmala held that the defendant was an agriculturist, and that therefore the suit could not be maintained without a certificate under s. 47 of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879). Under s. 73 of that Act the finding of the Subordinate Judge upon the point was final. The plaintiff appealed, the appeal including other points of objection to the decree as well as that with regard to the status of the defendant. Pending his appeal, Act VI of 1895 was passed, which repealed s. 73. At the hearing of the appeal the Judge considered the question of the statutes of the defendant, and held that he was not an agriculturist, overruling the decision of the Subordinate Judge upon that point. Held, that the Judge in appeal was right in entertaining the question. The provisions of Act VI of 1895 altered the procedure, and were therefore applicable to proceedings already commenced at the time of their enactment. Held, also, that, even if the General Clauses Act (I of 1868), s. 6, applied to acts not conferring rights, but simply concerning judicial procedure, it could not affect the present case, as the repeal is not one of Act itself, but only of a section in the same relating to procedure. 30. ——— Retrospective effect of Acts, principle as to—Mad. Act VIII of 1865. In a suit for rent for 1865, 1866, it was objected that pottahs and muchalkas were not exchanged as required by Act VIII of 1865, which came into force on 1st January 1866. Held (reversing the decision of the Civil Judge), that Act VIII of 1865 was inapplicable to the case. The general principle is that rights already acquired shall not be affected by the retro-action of a new law. Rules as to procedure are not exceptions, but the question here was not one of processual, but of material law. MORRIS v. SAMBAMURTI RAYAR . . . . . 6 Mad. 122

31. ——— Retrospective operation—Gujarat Talukhdars' Act (Bom. Act VI of 1888), s. 31, cl. 2—Collector refusing to confirm sale without sanction under act passed whilst decree was under execution. A decree upon a mortgage-bond passed against part of a talukhdar's estate on the 15th August 1887 was transferred under s. 320 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) to the Collector for execution. The property was sold on the 5th August 1889, but the Collector refused to confirm the sale, as the sanction of the Governor in Council under cl. 2, s. 31 of the Talukhdars Act (Bombay Act VI of 1888), which came into force on the 25th March 1889, had not been obtained. Held, that the section was not retrospective in its operation, and that the sale should be confirmed, although no sanction had been obtained. When the Act passed, the plaintiff had already acquired a vested right by the decree to have the property sold, and the presumption was that the Legislature did not intend to interfere with that vested right. That presumption was not rebuted by any intention to interfere appearing in the Act itself. KALIAN MOTI v. PATHUBHAI FALJIBHAI I. L. R. 17 Bom. 289

37. ——— Implied repeal—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 187—Act IX of 1850, s. 101. A special enactment is not impliedly repealed by a subsequent general enactment, if the two enactments are not so repugnant as to be incapable of standing together. 39. ——— Effect of repeal—Retrospective effect—Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, 1879—General Clauses Consolidation Act, 1868, s. 6. The general rule is that a repealed statute cannot be acted on after it is repealed; but, as provided in s. 6 of the General Clauses Act, 1868, all matters that have taken place under it before its repeal remain valid. But a new order of a Court, not ancillary or provisional, but directing a further substantive step in the execution of a decree, is a new proceeding which should be governed by the law in force when the order is made, and not by the law which it repeals. An Act passed to promote some public important object, such as the protection of the property of the Dekkhan agriculturists, may be given on that account, a retro-active operation, if necessary, as the rule against such operation rests itself on such a general public interest, which may, under the circumstances, be deemed of less importance than the one embodied in the Act. At the date of the agreement Act XVI of 1842 was in force. The settlement of the district, where the land in respect of which the agreement was made was situate, expired on the 1st of July 1870, before when Act XVI of 1842 was repealed by Act VIII of 1868, which Act was repealed by Act XIV of 1870, both Acts saving any right or title which had already accrued. Held, that no right of action to avoid or right to repudiate the engagement of the 27th of June 1866 accrued to the zamindar before the passing of those Acts. I, c. 16.* Where words have been long used in a technical sense, and have been judicially construed to have a certain meaning, and have been adopted by the Legislature as having a certain meaning prior to a particular statute in which they are used, the rule of construction of satutes requires that the words used in such statute should be construed according to the sense in which they have been so previously used, although that sense may vary from the strict literal meaning of the words. The words in the Statute of Limitations, 21 Jac. I, c. 16, s. 7, "beyond the seas," are synonymous in legal import with the words "out of realm," or "out of the land" or "out of the territories," and are not to be construed literally. 50. ——— Road Cess Act (Beng. Act X of 1871)—Interpretation clause, construction of. In a suit on a bond by which certain land, admittedly lakhiraj, was mortgaged, the purchaser of a portion of the mortgaged property at an auction-sale for arrears of road cess due under Bengal Act X of 1871 was added as a defendant, and the lower Courts, holding the effect of such a sale was to pass the property to the defendants free of encumbrances, made a decree excluding that portion from liability in respect of the mortgage-bond. Held, on the construction of Bengal Act X of 1871, that the sale had no such effect, and that the whole of the property was liable to be sold in satisfaction of the plaintiffs' claim. Although the effect of an interpretation clause is to give the meaning assigned by it to the word interpreted in all places in the Act in which that word occurs, it is not the effect of an interpretation clause that the thing defined has annexed to it every incident which may seem to be attached to it by any other Act of the Legislature, It does not follow therefore, that, because lakhiraj property is defined in the Road Cess Act, 1871, to be a tenure, all the interests and consequences attached by other Acts to tenures generally, or to particular classes of tenures, become annexed to lakhiraj property. both upon the tax-payer and upon the Municipal Commissioners, and those duties as to the tax-payer enforceable by penalties, are to be performed at a particular time:—Held, that there was implied a "latent proposition of law," which is as clear and binding as if it had been explicitly declared. That proposition is that there shall be a legally sanctioned tax at the period at which the duties are to be performed. LEMAN v. DAMODARAYA . . . I. L. R. 1 Mad. 158

52. ——— Acts imposing taxes—Ambiguity in Acts. In order to impose a tax, due, rate, or toll upon a subject, the framers of the Act or bye-law under which such tax, etc., is imposed must use clear and unambiguous words to effect their purpose. When the words used are ambiguous, the intendment of the Courts will be in favour of the subject upon whom the tax is sought to be imposed. Thus where the framers of the Surat bye-law imposed a tax of R1 per Surat mân upon "copper" imported into Surat for consumption, it was held that copper wrought up into pots did not fall within the words of the bye-law. Semble: That when a tax is imposed upon goods imported into a town for consumption, and such goods, after having been subjected to the tax upon being imported into the town, are afterwards taken out for sale into the neighbouring villages and brought back unsold, such goods are not liable to be subjected to tax a second time. His legislative powers are not limited to those territories which, at the date when the Indian Councils Act (24 & 25 Vict., c. 67), received the Royal assent (i.e., the 1st August 1861), were under the dominion of Her Majesty. In the preamble to the 28 & 29 Vict., c. 17, and in s. 1 of the 32 & 33 Vict., c. 98. Parliament has placed this construction upon s. 22 of the Indian Councils Act. Even if that construction was erroneous, it has been so declared by Parliament as to make its adoption obligatory. 62. ——— Jurisdiction—Construction of—Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871), s. 4—Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876), s. 4, proviso. The general presumption is against construing a statute as ousting or restricting the jurisdiction of the superior Courts. The intention must be expressed in clear terms, not merely implied, but necessarily implied: the general rights of the Queen's subjects are not hastily to be assumed to be interfered with and taken away by Act of Parliament. Such statutes are to be strictly construed when their language is doubtful. A construction, which would impliedly create a new jurisdiction, is to be avoided, especially where it would have the effect of depriving the subject of his free-hold or of any common law right, or of creating an arbitrary procedure. No doubt when a power has been conferred in unambiguous language by statute, the Courts cannot interfere with its exercise and substitute their own discretion for that of persons or bodies selected by the Legislature for the purpose. Nor does any presumption arise against the finality of a decision by an authority with statutory powers to pronounce in respect of a duty or liability created by the statute. The defendant was the Chairman of the Hinganghat Mill Company. The plaintiff had been for some years secretary and manager of that Company. In April 1888 he was dismissed from his appointment, and shortly afterwards he filed a suit (No. 1 of 1888) in the Court of the Deputy Commissioner at Wardha, in the Central Provinces (which was the Court of the district in which Hinganghat is situated), for wrongful dismissal. The present suit was filed in July 1888. The defendant took out a summons calling on the plaintiff to show cause why the suit should not be stayed and the plaint returned to the plaintiff, in order that, if he thought proper, it might be presented in the Court at Wardha. The defendant relied on the following points: (i) that neither he nor the plaintiff resided or carried on business at Bombay; (ii) that all the defendant's witnesses resided at Wardha; (iii) that the other suit (No. 1 of 1883) was pending at Wardha, and that the decree of that suit would decide the present case also. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to sue in Bombay. 1. OFFENCES RELATING TO.

1. ——— Concealment of stolen property—Penal Code, ss. 411, 414. Held, that the prisoner, who, having received stolen property, concealed it in his house, could not be charged and convicted for two offences, viz., of having dishonestly received stolen property under s. 411, Penal Code, and of assisting in the concealment of stolen property under s. 414, which applies to persons whose dealing with the stolen property is not of such a kind as to make them guilty of dishonestly receiving or retaining it. GOVERNMENT v. NOWLIA 1 Agra Cr. 9

2. ——— Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 411—Evidence—Pointing out stolen property concealed in a place not under the accused's control. Where the sole evidence against a person charged with an offence under s. 411 of the Penal Code consisted of the fact that the accused had pointed out the place where some of the stolen property was concealed in the field of another person. Held, that this was not in itself sufficient evidence to support a conviction under the above-mentioned section. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. GOBINDA I. L. R. 17 All. 576

3. ——— Assisting in concealing or disposing of—Guilty knowledge. Where persons are charged with assisting in concealing or disposing of property which they know or have reason to believe to be stolen, the nature of the property, as well as the circumstances under which it was being made away with, must be taken into consideration. REG. v. HARISHANKAR FAKIRBHAT 2 Bom. 136 : 2nd Ed. 130

4. ——— Voluntarily assisting in the disposal of stolen property—"Believe"—"Suspect"—Penal Code, s. 414. The word "believe" in s. 414 of the Penal Code is much stronger than the word "suspect," and involves the necessity of showing that the circumstances were such that a reasonable man must have felt convinced in his mind that the property, with which he was dealing, was stolen property. It is not sufficient in such a case to show that the accused person was careless, or that he had reason to suspect that the property was stolen, or that he did not make sufficient inquiry to ascertain whether it had been honestly acquired. EMPRESS v. RANGO TIMAJI . . . . I. L. R. 6 Bom. 402

5. ——— Penal Code, ss. 193 and 414—Intention to get innocent person punished—Separate offences, conviction of. Where the petitioner was convicted of having voluntarily assisted in concealing stolen railway pins in a certain person's house and field, with a view to having such innocent person punished as an offender:—Held, that the Magistrate was right in convicting and punishing the petitioner for the two separate offences of fabricating false evidence for use in a stage of a judicial proceeding under s. 193 of the Penal Code, and of voluntarily assisting in concealing stolen property under s. 414, Penal Code. 8. ——— Evidence—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 411. To constitute the offence of receiving stolen property there must be some proof that some person other than the accused had possession of the property, before the accused got possession of it. ISHAN MUCHI v. QUEEN EMPRESS . . I. L. R. 15 Calc. 511

QUEEN v. SHUNKUR 2 N. W. 312

10. ——— Property stolen at dacoity—Penal Code, s. 412—Proof of commission of dacoity. In order to sustain a conviction, under s. 412 of the Penal Code, of receiving property stolen at a dacoity, it is necessary to prove that the prisoner knew, or had reason to believe, that dacoity had been committed, or that the persons from whom he acquired the property were dacoits. 12. ——— Habitually receiving stolen property—Penal Code, s. 413. A person cannot be said to be an habitual receiver of stolen goods who may receive the proceeds of a number of different robberies from a number of different thieves on the same day. In order to support a conviction under s. 413 of the Penal Code of being an habitual receiver of stolen property it must be shown that the property was received on different occasions and on different dates. Appropriation of bull. A person was convicted and sentenced under s. 411 of the Penal Code for dishonestly receiving a bull, knowing the same to have been criminally misappropriated. It was found that, at the time of the alleged misappropriation, the bull had been set at large by some Hindu, in accordance with Hindu religious usage, at the time of performing funeral ceremonies. Held, that the bull was not, at the time of the alleged misappropriation, "property" within the meaning of the Penal Code, inasmuch as not only was it not the subject of ownership by any person, but the original owner had surrendered all his rights as its proprietor; that it was therefore "nullius proprietas," and incapable of larceny being committed in respect of it; and that the conviction must be set aside. 14. ——— Doli incapax—Penal Code, ss. 83, 411—Discharge of child-thief—Proof of theft—Conviction of receiver. The fact that a child has been tried for theft and discharged under s. 215 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1872, on the ground of want of understanding within the meaning of s. 83 of the Penal Code, is no bar to the conviction of a person charged under s. 411 of the Penal Code with receiving the property alleged to have been stolen. QUEEN v. BEGARAYI KRISHNA SARANU . . . I. L. R. 6 Mad. 373

15. ——— Possession of stolen property—Evidence of theft. Possession of property which has been stolen from the owner is generally at best only evidence of theft when the date of the theft is so recent as to make it reasonable to presume in the absence of explanation, that the person in whose possession the property is found must have obtained the possession by stealing. QUEEN v. POROMESHUR AHEER . . 23 W. R. Cr. 16

16. ——— Guilty knowledge, inference of. Where property sufficiently identified to be the property of one person is found to be in the possession of another person without leave or license or any legal permission of the owner, it is for the party in whose possession the property is found duly to account for its possession, and unless he can do so a jury may fairly infer, in such circumstances, that it was with a guilty knowledge that the prisoner took that which he knew to be not his own. 18. ——— Presumption—Penal Code, s. 411—Receiver of stolen property—Presumption as to possession of property after the theft. A common brass drinking-cup was stolen in October 1883, and was discovered in the possession of the accused in September 1884. Held, in a case in which the accused was tried for receiving stolen property, that his possession of the stolen property, coupled with the fact that he had failed to give an account as to how he became possessed of the property, would, under ordinary circumstances, raise a probable presumption of his guilt, but where, as in this case, such possession was not a recent possession, but one eleven months subsequent to the act of theft, the presumption against him was so slight that, taken by itself, he ought not to be called upon to explain how his possession was acquired. The question of what is or is not a recent possession of stolen property is to be considered with reference to the nature of the article stolen. Rex v. Adam, 3 C. & P. 600; Rex v. Cooper, 8 C. & P. 318; Rex v. Partridge, 7 C. & P. 551, followed. 20. ——— Presumption—Dishonest receipt of stolen property—Dacoity—Jury. In considering whether the possession of stolen goods raises a presumption of dishonest receipt of stolen property, the attention of the jury should be drawn to the necessity of satisfying themselves that the possession is clearly traced to the accused. The fact of stolen property being found concealed in a man's house would be sufficient to raise a presumption that he knew the property to be stolen property, but it would not be sufficient to show that it had been acquired by dacoity. EMPRESS v. MALHARI . . I. L. R. 6 Bom. 731

21. ——— Possession of members of joint family—Finding stolen property in joint family house. Held, that the bare finding of stolen property and arms in the house of a joint Hindu family is not such evidence of possession on the part of each of its members as would form a sufficient basis for a conviction. 23. ——— Res nullius—Bull set at large in accordance with Hindu religious usage—Penal Code, ss. 410, 411. A Hindu who, upon the death of a relative, dedicates or lets loose a bull, in accordance with Hindu religious usage, as a pious act for the benefit of the soul of the deceased, thereby surrenders and abandons all proprietary rights in the animal, which thereafter is not "property" which is capable of being made the subject of dishonest receipt or possession within the meaning of ss. 410 and 411 of the Penal Code. Queen-Empress v. *Bandhu, I. Such an animal can therefore be the subject of theft and criminal misappropriation. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. NALLA I. L. R. 11 Mad. 145

27. ——— Penal Code, s. 411—Proof that the property is stolen property necessary—Guilty knowledge of retainer. Where a person is accused of an offence under s. 411 of the Penal Code, he cannot, where the circumstances do not raise the presumption that he received the property knowing it to be stolen, be convicted of that offence merely because he is in possession of the property and does not account for his possession. 28. ——— Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 114—Presumption—Possession of stolen property. Held, that the finding in the possession of a person six months after the commission of a dacoity, of articles stolen in that dacoity, such articles consisting of jewelry of a very ordinary type and by no means distinctive appearance, is not sufficient to form the basis of a conviction for participation in the dacoity. Queen-Empress v. Burke, *I. Though it be true that, before a man can be convicted of receiving stolen property knowing it to be stolen, it must be shown that property has been stolen:—Held, that the disappearance of the document from the record plus the substitution of an imitation of it in its place showed that it must have been taken with a dishonest object. Where, therefore, a person, whose bullock had been stolen in his absence, traced it to the house of the thief, and there and then arrested him, and made him over to a chaukidar, from whose custody he escaped, it was held that this was not an escape from lawful custody within the meaning of s. 224 of the Code. Semble: That, if the owner of the bullock had himself been entitled to make the arrest, the subsequent custody of the prisoner by the chaukidar would have been a lawful custody. Queen-Empress v. *Potadu, I. The note was produced in evidence at the trial, and the Court directed it to be given up to S from whom it had been stolen. Held, that the Sessions Court was wrong. 7. ——— Disposal of, by Criminal Court—Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, Ch. XXX, ss. 415, 416, 417—Restoration of property made over by the police. A was charged before the police with theft of certain property. The police considered that no theft had been committed, and reported the matter to a second class Magistrate, who, agreeing with the police, ordered the property to be restored to A. On application by the complainant, the District Magistrate found that A had removed, though not dishonestly, the property from B, a deceased person, and ordered the property to be given by the police to B's heirs. It was so given. Held, that the provisions of Ch. XXX of the Code of Criminal Procedure do not apply to such a case. Ss. 415, 416, and 417 contemplate proceedings preliminary to, and independent of, inquiry. Upon general principles, where there has been an inquiry, or a trial, and the accused person is discharged or acquitted by any Criminal Court, that Court is bound to restore that property into the possession of the person from whom it is taken, unless, as provided for by s. 418, such Court is of opinion that "any offence appears to have been committed" regarding it, then such order as appears right for the disposal of the property may be made. The reference to a Magistrate under s. 115 of the High Court's Criminal Procedure Act, X of 1875, is not a trial for the final determination of the rights of the parties, and it is not incumbent upon the Magistrate on such reference to hear witnesses, but he may rightly order the delivery of property to that one of the rival claimants whom he considers, upon the statements of their respective cases, to have made out a primâ facie case, and it is not competent to the High Court to review the decision at which the Magistrate so arrives. 13. ——————— Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), ss. 517 and 523—Disposal of property produced before a Court during an inquiry—Restoration of previous possession if no offence has been committed. S. 517 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is the only section under which a Court can make an order for the disposal of property produced before it in the course of an inquiry or trial. And it has jurisdiction to pass the order only if the case falls within the section, that is, if it is property "regarding which an offence appears to have been committed, or which has been used for the commission of an offence." Otherwise, the only legal order which the Court can pass is one restoring the previous possession. A Presidency Magistrate, finding the evidence not sufficient to warrant a conviction, discharged the accused, but ordered the property which had been produced during the inquiry to be detained until the title of the rightful owner was proved before a Civil Court. On a subsequent day he, apparently acting under s. 523 of the Code, ordered the property to be delivered to the complainant, from whose possession it had not been taken. Held, that both the orders were ultra vires. The Magistrate was therefore directed to dispose of the property in a legal manner. The Magistrate ordered possession of the land to be restored to the complainant, but attached the crops under Ch. XLIII of the Criminal Procedure Code. Thereupon one V intervened and claimed the crops as having been sown by himself. His claim was disallowed, and the crops were ordered to be sold and the proceeds credited to Government under ss. 523 and 524 of the Code. Held, that the order passed under ss. 523 and 524 with reference to the crops were illegal. The corps were not property in respect of which the offence was committed, nor were they used in the commission of the offence. They were not such property as is referred to in s. 517, 523, or 524 of the Criminal Procedure Code. NARAYAN GOVIND v. VISAJI . I. L. R. 23 Bom. 494

An order, after trial, made by a Criminal Court for the restoration of property under s. 517 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882) is conclusive as to the immediate right to possession ; where an order has to be made under s. 523, the Magistrate may in the inquiry proceed on such evidence as is available and make an order for handing the property to the person he thinks entitled. This does not conclude the right of any person. The real owner may proceed against the holder of the articles or for damages as for conversion. The High Court declined to interfere with an order, made by a Magistrate under s. 523 of the Criminal Procedure Code, for the delivery of property where the Magistrate made such order upon the mere evidence of a confession of the accused to the police that the property was stolen from the adjudged owner. 16. ——— Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, s. 517—Order for the disposal of property by first class Magistrate—Appeal from such order to the Sessions Court. A decree-holder preferred a complaint against his judgment-debtors, charging them, under s. 207 of the Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), with concealing certain moveable property for the purpose of screening it from execution. Some property was found by the police to have been so concealed in the house of a third person. The chief constable took possession of it, and kept it in his custody pending the inquiry which the first class Magistrate was about to make in the matter. Before the Magistrate entered upon the inquiry, the complainant caused the property in the custody of the police to be attached and sold in execution of his decree against the accused. At the Court-sale the complainant himself purchased the property, and thereupon the Magistrate ordered the property to be handed over to him. This order was reversed on appeal by the Sessions Judge. Held, that the order of the first class Magistrate for the disposal of the property was not, and could not have been, made under s. 517 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), as the Magistrate did not hold any inquiry, nor form any opinion on the conclusion of such inquiry as to whether "any offence appeared to have been committed regarding such property." The Sessions Judge had therefore no jurisdiction to hear any appeal from the first class Magistrate's order. In re ANANT RAMCHANDRA LOTLIKAR

The accused was convicted, and at the close of the trial the Court, under s. 517 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ordered the money to be restored to the complainant from whom it had been stolen. Held, that the order was right. The stolen coins were not current coin of the realm, and were neither by statute nor by the law of merchants in British India legal tender. The property in them did not, therefore, pass by mere delivery, but remained in the complainant. Collector of Salem, 7 Mad. H. C. Rep. 233, and Empress v. *Joggessur Mochi, I. L. When brought before the Court, R applied to be declared an insolvent under s. 344 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877). The plaintiff then moved the Court to strike off his application for execution, and to send his decree to the second class subordinate Court of Vita for execution. The Satara Court accordingly sent the decree to the Vita Court and granted a certificate to the plaintiff under ss. 223 and 224 of the Civil Procedure Code. The Satara Court also informed the Vita Court that proceedings were pending in the Satara Court regarding the insolvency of R. On the application of the plaintiff, the Vita Court attached certain immoveable property belonging to N and R. Thereupon one V T claimed a mortgage lien on it for R9,415-9-3. The Vita Court therefore referred for the opinion of the High Court the question whether it had jurisdiction to inquire into the validity of the mortgage lien claimed by V T, and whether the execution of the decree in the Vita Court was to be stayed, pending the inquiry into the alleged insolvency of R in the Satara Court. Held, that the Vita Court had jurisdiction to inquire into the validity of the alleged mortgage lien; that execution in that Court against R was to be stayed pending the inquiry in the Satara Court regarding his alleged insolvency, but that there was no reason for staying the execution of the decree against N in the Vita Court. Judge of a Small Cause Court under s. 28 of Act XIV of 1869 do not thereby become "Courts of Small Causes constituted under Act XI of 1865." They merely exercise a similar jurisdiction. This makes their decisions final in the cases to which the jurisdiction extends, but it does not imply that the variations of procedure prescribed expressly for the Courts constituted under Act XI of 1865 are applicable to Courts constituted under a different Act and subject to different conditions. The Court of a Subordinate Judge exercising Small Cause Court powers is, under s. 5 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), one of the "other Courts exercising jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes," and, as such, its procedure is governed by the Civil Procedure Code without the variations provided by Act XI of 1865. Under s. 223 (d) of the Civil Procedure Code, the Court which has passed a decree in its Small Cause Court jurisdiction may, for any good reason to be recorded in writing, transfer its decree to the other branch of the same Court, as it might to a different Court, for execution without requiring a certificate under s. 20 of Act XI of 1865. For this purposes, the two branches or sides of the Subordinate Judge's Court may be regarded as different Courts. BHAGVAN DAYALJI v. BALU . I. L. R. 8 Bom. 230

18. ——— Execution of decree—Transfer of decree for execution—Act XI of 1865, s. 20—Act XIV of 1869, s. 28. The plaintiff having obtained a money-decree against H and others in a suit in the Subordinate Judge's Court at Dhulia, applied for execution by attachment and sale of their immoveable property. That property was accordingly sold, but before the realization of the assets the defendant, who also had obtained a money-decree against the same judgment-debtors in the same Court in its Small Cause jurisdiction, applied for the execution of his decree by attachment and sale of the immoveable property which had already been attached at the instance of the plaintiff. The Court, under s. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), reteably distributed the proceeds of the sale between the plaintiff and the defendant. The plaintiff now brought this suit in the Small Cause jurisdiction of the Subordinate Judge's Court at Dhulia to recover from the defendant the amount paid to him, alleging that it had been illegally paid, as the procedure laid down in s. 223 of the Code had not been followed. Held, that, as ruled in Rhagavan Dayalji v. Balu, I. L. R. 8 Bom. 230, a Subordinate Judge invested with Small Cause Court powers has generally to follow the procedure prescribed in the Code of Civil Procedure. This governs his proceedings both in trial and execution, whether the suit is a Small Cause suit or not. If the two jurisdictions assigned to the Subordinate Judge's Court and to the Subordinate Judge personally are locally co-extensive, there is no distinction of sides or branches. But where, as in some cases the ordinary jurisdiction is wider locally than the Small Cause jurisdiction, the Court is, in that part of its territory which lies outside the Small Cause Court jurisdiction, to be regarded as a separate Court so far that a decree in a Small Cause should not generally be executed on property beyond the Small Cause jurisdiction without a transfer, i.e., a dealing with the execution as in a suit tried in the usual way for reasons to be recorded in writing. As all is done by the same Judge, a suggestion and an order recorded in the case are sufficient without a formal transmission as to a distant Court. DHARAMDAS SANTIDAS. v. VAMAN GOVIND

20. ——— Appeal—Suit cognizable by a Court of Small Causes—Act XI of 1865, ss. 2, 6, 12, 21—Bombay Civil Courts Act (XIV of 1869), s. 28—Final decision. The plaintiff sued to recover R5 as damages for the wrongful removal of a tree. The suit was filed in the Court of a second class Subordinate Judge, who was invested under Act XIV of 1869, s. 28, with the jurisdiction of a Judge of a Court of Small Causes. The case, which was in itself of the nature of a Small Cause, was, however, tried as an ordinary suit according to the rules of the Civil Procedure Code. The Subordinate Judge rejected the plaintiff's claim. An appeal was made to the District Court, which reversed the Subordinate Judge's decree, and awarded the claim. Held, that, the suit having really been a Small Cause, no appeal lay to the District Court, though the Subordinate Judge did not use the procedure of Act XI of 1865. Having the Small Cause Court jurisdiction, the Subordinate Judge must be taken to have dealt with the case under that jurisdiction, even if he was not quite alive to it at the time. A suit taken cognizance of under s. 2, 6, or 12 of the Mofussil Small Cause Court Act (XI of 1865) does not cease to be a suit tried under the Act, because of some divergence from its summary procedure. A surplusage of form and elaborateness does not change the character of the decision for the purpose of its finality. S. 28 of the Bombay Civil Courts Act (XIV of 1869) does not, when jurisdiction is given under it, necessarily divide the Court into two separate Courts ; but still it creates an additional and distinct jurisdiction. Since Act IX of 1887 came into force, the Court is to be regarded as two Courts in such cases. PITAMBAR VAJIRSHET v. DHONDU NAVLAPA I. L. R. 12 Bom. 486

to create in the District Judge, Subordinate Judge and Munsif concurrent jurisdiction up to R1,000. Per PETHERAM, C.J.—S. 15 of the Civil Procedure Code is a proviso to those sections. The word "shall" in that section is imperative on the suitor. The word is used for the purpose of protecting the Courts. The suitor shall be obliged to bring his suit in the Court of the lowest grade competent to try it. The object of the Legislature is that the Court of the higher grade shall not be overcrowded with suits. Whenever an Act confers a benefit, the donee may exercise the same or not at his pleasure. The proviso is for the benefit of the Court of the higher grade, and it is not bound to take advantage of it. If it does not wish to try the suit, it may refuse to entertain it. If it wishes to retain the suit in its Court, it may do so ; it is not bound to refuse to entertain it. Per DUTHOIT, J.—The words in s. 57 of the Civil Procedure Code "shall be" are an instruction which the Court is bound to follow, and they are therefore a restraint upon jurisdiction. The effect, therefore, of the concurrent jurisdiction of Subordinate Judges and Munsifs is not to allow to a Subordinate Judge discretion as to accepting or not accepting for trial by himself suits cognizable by the inferior tribunal. BRODHURST and MAHMOOD, JJ.—S. 15 of the Civil Procedure Code is a rule of procedure, not of jurisdiction, and whilst it lays down that a suit shall be instituted in the Court of the lowest grade, it does not oust the jurisdiction of the Courts of higher grades. Russick Chunder Mohunt v. Ram Lall Shaha, 22 W. R. 301, and Sulee-ool-lah Sircar v. Begum Bibee, 25 W. R., 219, followed. Per OLDFIELD, J.—S. 15 of the Civil Procedure Code is a provision entirely of procedure as distinct from jurisdiction, and its effect on s. 19 of the Bengal Civil Courts Act is that the jurisdiction of the District Judge and Subordinate Judge extends to all original suits cognizable by the Civil Court, subject in its exercise to a certain procedure, namely, that the suits be instituted in the Court of lowest grade competent to try them. Held, therefore, by PETHERAM, C.J., and OLDFIELD, BRODHURST, and MAHMOOD, JJ., where a Subordinate Judge had tried a suit which a Munsif, a Court of a lower grade, might have tried, that the Subordinate Judge had not acted without jurisdiction. The plaint in such suit had been in the first instance presented to the Munsif, who had returned it, to be presented to the Subordinate Judge. Per DUTHOIT, J.—The decree of the Subordinate Judge would not be liable to be reversed in appeal for want of jurisdiction, for the jurisdiction was there, though it ought not to have been exercised. This view of the matter was consistent with the received canon of construction, that unless the Legislature uses negative words, or words showing an intention to treat the observance of a rule of procedure as essential, the rule will ordinarily be treated as a direction only. Under the circumstances, therefore, the District Judge had, in appeal, correctly refused to entertain the plea of defect in jurisdiction. NIDHI LAL v. MAZHAR HUSAIN . . . I. L. R. 7 All. 230

Findings having been duly returned, the District Judge transferred the appeal to the Subordinate Judge, who heard and determined it. Held, that the District Judge had no power to transfer to a Subordinate Judge an appeal which was part heard and pending before him. The only inherent jurisdiction that a Subordinate Judge has is in original suits under s. 12 of the Civil Courts Act. In appeals he only acquires jurisdiction under the last clause of s. 13 of the said Act, which enables a District Judge to transfer appeals to him, and, unless that section is complied with, the Subordinate Judge has no jurisdiction to hear or determine any appeal. S. 13 does not authorize the transfer to a Subordinate Judge of an appeal part heard and pending before the District Judge. The fact that objection was not taken to the jurisdiction of the Subordinate Judge did not confer jurisdiction upon him, the Subordinate Court not having inherent jurisdiction. The plaintiff, having obtained a decree against the defendant in a suit in which the subject-matter of the suit and the amount of the decree exceeded R5,000 in the Court of a Subordinate Judge of the first class, presented it in that Court for execution. The Subordinate Judge transferred it for execution to the second class Subordinate Judge who had been appointed, under Act XIV of 1869, to assist him, and whose jurisdiction extended to R5,000 only. The second class Subordinate Judge ordered execution to issue. The defendant appealed, and this order was reversed. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court, and raised, for the first time, an objection that the second class Subordinate Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain the application for execution. The defendant contended that this objection was taken too late on second appeal. Held, that the second class Subordinate Judge has no jurisdiction to entertain and deal with the plaintiff's application for execution, and that the plaintiff's

The plaintiffs were convicted and sentenced by a Magistrate, but on appeal were acquitted by the Sessions Judge. The plaintiffs thereupon brought this suit in a Subordinate Judge's Court to recover damages from the defendant for malicious prosecution. The jurisdiction of the Subordinate Judge to try the suit being questioned, he referred the case to the High Court. Held, that the Subordinate Judge had jurisdiction to try the suit. The defendant was sued in his individual, and not in his official, capacity ; and the fact that he was a Mamlatdar when he prosecuted the plaintiffs could not affect the character in which he was sued. 31. ——— Malicious prosecution—Prosecution, when official—Bombay Civil Courts Act (XIV of 1869), s. 32—Bombay Act X of 1876, s. 15—Prosecution instituted by order of superior officer. An officer of Government who prosecutes for an injury personal to himself is not generally acting in his official capacity as prosecutor. If any particular class of interests is placed specifically under his tutelage, with a direction to guard them by the appropriate legal proceedings, suits instituted in the fulfilment of the duty thus assigned to the functionary are of course instituted in his official capacity. A similar remark applies to criminal proceedings. A prosecution by a functionary is official when in carrying it on he is discharging a duty expressly or impliedly assigned to him by law. If the duty of prosecuting in any particular case is not assigned to an officer as such, the consent or the order of his superior will not make the act an official one which in its nature is not so, lying outside his official functions. The defendant was a forest officer in the service of Government. He prosecuted a certain person for theft in the Magistrate's Court at Sirsi. The accused was defended by the plaintiff, who was a pleader. During the hearing of the case the defendant in open Court made use of certain expressions towards the plaintiff, which it was alleged were defamatory, and were calculated to lower him in the estimation of the public, to injure his reputation, and to mar his professional prospects. The plaintiff sent him a notice claiming R4,500 as damages for the injury done to him by the defendant. The defendant thereupon lodged a complaint before the Divisional Magistrate at Sirsi, charging the plaintiff, under s. 189 of the Penal Code, with holding out a threat, etc., to a public servant for the purpose of inducing him to refrain from doing his duty as such public servant. The Magistrate dismissed the charge, and the plaintiff then filed the present suit against the defendant for malicious prosecution. The defendant pleaded that in lodging the complaint against the defendant he had acted in his official capacity and under the orders of his superior officer with reasonable and probable cause, and not maliciously; that the suit was brought with reference to an act done by him in his official capacity as forest officer ; and that therefore the Court of the Subordinate Judge had no jurisdiction. The Subordinate Judge held that he had no jurisdiction, being of opinion that the defendant had prosecuted the plaintiff in his character as a public servant, and that therefore the present suit against the defendant was one in which an officer of Government in his official capacity was a defendant, and as such was cognizable by the District Judge only, under s. 32 of the Bombay Civil Courts Act (XIV of 1869). He therefore dismissed the suit. On appeal, the Acting District Judge was also of opinion that the Subordinate Judge had no jurisdiction ; but he held that the Subordinate Judge was wrong in dismissing the suit, instead of returning the plaint for presentation to the District Court. He, therefore, reversed the decree of the Subordinate Judge, and referred the plaintiff to the District Judge. On appeal by the plaintiff :—Held, by the High Court, that the defendant was sued as a private person for an alleged wrong to the plaintiff, and that the suit was rightly brought in the Court of the Subordinate Judge. The order appealed from was therefore reversed, and the District Judge was directed to dispose of the appeal on its merits. GOPI MAHABLESVAR BHAT v. SHESO MANJU I. L. R. 12 Bom. 358

Among the property seized (it was alleged) was certain property belonging to the widow. She brought this suit against the Collector and Mamlatdar, claiming damages for these wrongful acts. The suit was filed in the Court of the Subordinate Judge. Held, that the acts complained of were done by the defendants in their official capacity, and that under s. 32 of the Bombay Civil Courts Act (XIV of 1869) the Subordinate Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit. The defendants pleaded (inter alia) that the Subordinate Judge had no jurisdiction to try the suit under the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876). Held, that the suit was properly instituted in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, as the defendants were sued in their private capacity. It is not clear that the rules about impressment of carts found in Ch. I of Nairne's Revenue Handbook actually order village patils to impress carts against the owner's will; neither it is clear what officers are to be supplied. There is nothing to show that any law ever imposed this duty on a kulkarni, or that provision was made after the repeal of the Regulation of 1818 as regards patils except for military bodies. From time to time defendant borrowed money from the plaintiff and, inter alia, four sums amounting to R385 which he paid as wages to labourers working under him. It was not proved, however, that he had borrowed the moneys as Supervisor, and the defendant did not plead that he borrowed them in his official capacity. Held, that, inasmuch as a Public Works Supervisor has not usually authority to borrow money for the purpose of the work of which he may be in charge, or any way to pledge the credit of Government, the mere statement of the defendant when he borrowed the moneys that he wanted them to pay the labourers was not under the circumstances enough to show that the defendant borrowed them in his official capacity, and that the Subordinate Judge had authority to entertain the suit in respect of them. 5. ——— Right of debtor to discharge—Omission to make order for allowance—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss. 276, 278. A debtor, having been imprisoned on a writ of ca. sa., was brought up on a habeas corpus, and applied for his discharge on the ground that his arrest and imprisonment were illegal, as no order for his allowance under s. 276 of Act VIII of 1859 had been made. Sufficient subsistence-money, however, was paid to the Sheriff previous to the arrest, and he was kept amply supplied with it. Held, that ss. 276 and 278 of Act VIII of 1859 applied as much to the execution of a mofussil decree as to an arrest by writ of the High Court; that no one is to be imprisoned in execution of a decree unless subsistence-money for a month in advance be paid to the person to whose custody he is committed; that a similar payment must be received in advance every successive month pending the imprisonment; that if any such payment be not made, the prisoner is entitled to be released; that the "allowance" referred to in s. 276 of Act VIII of 1859 meant subsistence-money of 4 annas per diem; that s. 276 of Act VIII of 1859 enacted only that the prisoner shall have an allowance of 4 annas per diem paid monthly, unless the Court shall specially fix a less amount; that an order for an allowance to the prisoner was not necessary, and was intended only as a relief to the execution-creditor; that the omission to have such order made did not render the arrest and imprisonment illegal; that in the absence of such order, s. 278 of Act VIII of 1859 ensured 4 annas a day as subsistence-money for the prisoner. 7. ——— Application for discharge on non-payment of subsistence-money—Petition for discharge—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 278. A prisoner was arrested on the 30th of December on a ca. sa. dated the 24th of December, on which day the execution-creditor paid subsistence-money for thirty days. This failing, on the 29th of January, the prisoner made a fruitless application to the Sheriff for more, and then applied to the Court for his discharge, upon which notice was directed to be given to the execution-creditor. Held, that no particular form of petition of discharge was required from a prisoner applying for his discharge for non-payment of subsistence-money; that subsistence-money must be paid in advance by the execution-creditor before putting a writ of ca. sa. in force; that the discharge by the Sheriff of a prisoner detained on a writ of ca. sa. was equally imperative on the happening of any of the contingencies specified in s. 278 of Act VIII of 1859; and that on failure of subsistence-money the prisoner should be released, and further detention of him by the person in whose custody he is was illegal. 8. ——— Non-payment of subsistence-money in advance—Act VIII of 1859, ss. 276, 278. A prisoner was arrested on August 4th, and committed to prison on the evening of the same day. Before his committal, the execution-creditor paid into the hands of the Jailor a sum sufficient for his subsistence-money for twenty-seven days, at the established rate of 4 annas per day. On the 5th August a writ of habeas corpus was applied for to bring the prisoner up, and on the 6th a further sum of 4 annas was paid to the Jailor to cover any deficiency in the former payment. Held, that the requirements of s. 276, Act VIII of 1859, had not been fulfilled, and that the prisoner was entitled to his discharge under s. 278. Act IV of 1865.* Where the defendants were arrested though the Munsif's Court in execution of a decree, but were released at the request of the execution-creditor before they had been sent to the civil jail, it was held that the execution-creditor was entitled to a refund of the balance of subsistence-money advanced by him that remained in the Munsif's hands at the time of his debtor's release. S. 10 of Act IV of 1865 (Bombay) was not applicable to such a case. Ex parte KASHINATH BALAL OK 5 Bom. A. C. 84

1. ——— Nawab of Tonk—Primogeniture—Impartible estate—Special family custom—Effect of British settlement on tenure and its customs—Estates appurtenant to Nawabship of Tonk—Grant of villages by Nawab as maintenance. Held, upon the evidence, that succession to the chiefship of Tonk went, by special family custom, in the line of primogeniture, and that the ownership of the lands of the ilaka in suit went with the chiefship. Accordingly, the title of the respondent, being in the elder line, was preferred to that of the appellant, who was nearer in degree. Held, that the effect of the British settlement of the villages in suit with the appellant's father was not to create a fresh estate subject to the ordinary law of inheritance, but to continue to the chief for the time being, as it were jure coronæ, the proprietorship thereof, subject to succession by the said family custom. The appellant being grantee from the Government of a pension fund, part of an hereditary cash allowance originally graned to his father, and also grantee of a village from his father for his subsistence : Held, that, these grants being independent of each other, and derived from different sources, there was no ground for putting the appellant to his election, and that he was entitled to keep both. After the Vagya's death his Murali daughter, who lived by prostitution and had children by promiscuous intercourse, claimed her father's property as heir to the exclusion of her sisters under the rule of Hindu Law that an unmarried daughter inherits to her father before his married daughter. The first Court allowed the claim. On appeal by one of the defendants (married daughters) the Judge varied the decree by allowing the plaintiff a third share in the property. On second appeal by the plaintiff the appellate decree was confirmed, there being no appeal or cross-objection by the defendants against that portion of the decree whereby the plaintiff was allowed to share her father's property equally with her married sisters. Held, further, that a woman, who in her maiden condition becomes a prostitute, being neither a kanya (unmarried) nor a kulastri (married), but being at the same time, notwithstanding her prostitution, a qualified heir as held in Advyapa v. *Rudrava, I. The interpretation put by WESTROPP, C.J., upon Balambhatta's texts in Sakharam Sadashiv Adhikari v. *Sitabai, I. L. These observations apply more or less to Nanda Pandita also. It is a well established rule of the Bombay High Court that where the Mitakshara is silent or obscure, the Court must, generally speaking, invoke the aid of the Vyavahara Mayukha to interpret it, and harmonise both the works, so far as that is reasonably possible. If a bequest has failed ab initio, s. 116 applies. A testator by his Will authorised adoptions in a manner which, in a suit brought by the adopted son, was held to be invalid under the Hindu Law. The Will further directed that in case "some of such adopted sons surviving his wife and dying under the age of 18 years without leaving a son or sons, his executors should make over and divide the whole of the estate both real and personal into and between his daughters in equal shares, to whom and their respective sons he bequeathed the same." Held, that s. 116 of the Succession Act, incorporated in the Hindu Wills Act, applied and this constituted a gift over to the daughters. That the gift, a valid gift to the adopted sons, having failed, the daughters became entitled to the estate absolutely and in equal shares, and the words "their respective sons" in the above clause were words of limitation and not words of purchase. Though under the Hindu Law a Hindu married daughter takes by inheritance a limited estate, she takes an absolute estate under a devise by Will, unless her interest is curtailed by express words or by necessary implication. Ramasami v. *Papayya, I. ——— Will—Application by legatee for letters of administration—Grant limited to recovery of legacy only—Suit by another legatee to recover legacy—Maintainability—Proof of Will only essential. Letters of administration with a copy of the will annexed in respect of the entire estate left by the testator was granted by the District Judge to a legatee to whom the testator had bequeathed an allowance for maintenance. On appeal, the High Court directed that the letters should be limited to the realisation by the grantee of that allowance only. But before fresh letters in terms of the High Court's order could be issued by the District Judge the legatee died. Subsequently another legatee to whom also the testator had bequeathed an allowance for maintenance brought a suit for recovery of the same. Held, that s. 187 of the Succession Act was no bar to the recovery of the plaintiff's claim. If a will is once proved and probate or letters of administration granted, that would entitle any one of the legatees or any one claiming under the will to obtain relief from Court. S. 187 of the Succession Act does not contemplate that every legatee claiming under a will should have to obtain separate probate or letters of administration in respect of the estate or a portion of the estate in order to be entitled to maintain a claim for the legacy. There is nothing in the Act which either expressly or by necessary implication requires the Court granting a certificate to hold an enquiry into the existence of any debt alleged by the person applying to be due as a preliminary condition of the grant. The Court has merely to ascertain the representative title of the applicant for the certificate and not the existence or non-existence of the debt. The fact that the amount of the debt to recover which a certificate is applied for is paid into Court does not extinguish the debt or affect the necessity of taking out the certificate under the Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889). In opposition to this application an alleged will of the deceased was set up, and it was proved that the deceased, being of sufficient testamentary capacity, had, shortly before his death caused a draft will to be prepared, that he had had the draft read to him twice and explained to him, that he made it over to a person appointed a trustee under the will telling him to have it faired out and brought to him for signature, but that he died before this was done without having expressed any intention, except in one small particular, of wishing to alter the draft so made. The Court below found in favour of the will and dismissed the application for a certificate. Held, on appeal, that, although the lower court ought not to have tried any question beyond that of the existence of the will, as the conclusion that the deceased had made a will in the terms alleged by the objectors was justified by the evidence, the application for a certificate was rightly dismissed. C. J.*—The words "as determinable" in s. 6 of the Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887) mean, as determinable by the Court which has to try the case. Per ASTON, J.—S. 4 of the Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887) seems to indicate that the principle adopted by the Legislature for valuing a suit, mentioned in Sch. II, Art. 17, of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), which relates to land or an interest in land is that the value of such a suit for purposes of jurisdiction shall be governed by the value of the land or interest in land. It being nowhere enacted in the Act that where such value is not determined by rules made under s. 3, the value shall be such as the plaintiff chooses to adopt, I am of opinion that the value must be (where disputed) determined by judicial decision in the suit, such determination being subject to the provisions of s. 11 of the Suits Valuation Act (VI of 1887). Practice condemned. The action of Magistrates in not trying accused persons for offences which the acts attributed to them constitute, but in trying the case as one under s. 143, Penal Code, for the purposes of holding the trial under summary procedure is highly improper. The Sessions Judge, on the Magistrate's own judgment, recommended that the convictions should be set aside, on the grounds (i) that the facts showed that the accused should have been convicted under s. 353 or under s. 342, and (ii) that the Magistrate had no power to convict of the lesser offence, and so give himself jurisdiction to try the case summarily. Held, in concurrence with the Sessions Judge, that the accused ought to have been tried under s. 353: the Magistrate's summary proceedings were accordingly set aside and a fresh trial directed. 24. ——— Magistrate, power of, to try case summarily—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), s. 260. A complainant applied to a Magistrate for process against certain persons under ss. 447, 146, 148, and 149 of the Penal Code. The Magistrate, having perused the petition of the complainant and examined him on oath, issued summonses against the persons named under those sections. The complainant was not himself an eye-witness of the occurrence, and merely stated in his petition and evidence what he had been told by his servants. Subsequently, before the accused appeared, the Magistrate examined an eye-witness, and issued a fresh summons under s. 447 only, and then proceeded to try the case summarily and convicted one of the accused. It was contended that he had no power so to try and dispose of the case. Held, that that the Magistrate had power to try the case summarily. When a Magistrate ascertains that the facts which are alleged to have taken place disclose only an offence triable summarily, he can dispose of such case summarily, and the mere fact that a complainant enumerates sections of the Penal Code relating to offences not triable summarily does not affect the jurisdiction of the Magistrate, unless the facts of which he really complains disclose such offences. that only an offence under s. 323 of the Indian Penal Code had been made out, he proceeded to deal with the case summarily. Held, that, inasmuch as the evidence adduced was not sufficient to justify a committal, but clearly disclosed an offence over which he had summary jurisdiction, the Magistrate was right in acting as he did. Such a course is different to disregarding part of a charge for the purpose of dealing with a case summarily. 23. ——— Service of summons on agent—Principal and agent—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), ss. 76 and 37, cl. (c)—Carrying on business. To satisfy the conditions of s. 76 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) as to service of summons on an agent there must be a person residing without the local jurisdiction, but carrying on business or work within those limits by a manager or agent, and sued on account of of such work, that is, business either actually itself carried on by the agent or manager, or forming part of the business in the sense of a connected course of transactions to the management of which he has been duly appointed. S. 76 and s. 37, cl. (c), are to be construed together, and are intended to carry out the scheme of relief which rests upon the idea that where an agent has been put forward substantially to take the place of his principal within a particular jurisdiction, he should take the place of such principal (at the option of any person who has dealt with him) in any legal proceedings that may arise out of the business or work in which the agent has been virtually a local principal. The manager or agent contemplated by the Code is one who has an initiative and independent discretion, albeit subject possibly to principles and general orders prescribed for his guidance. A mere servant employed to carry out orders or to execute a particular commission, or a factor or common agent who is not identified with the firm for which he acts, is not such an agent. The firm of G S carried on business at Agra. It had no place of business in Bombay, but it employed G as its agent in Bombay, in certain dealings which it had with the plaintiff. The letters and telegrams of the firm to G were sent to the plaintiff's place of buisness, or addressed to G as an individual, not in the name of the firm. G did not himself initiate any business or in any way stand between his employers' firm and the plaintiff. Held, that G was not the defendants' manager or agent within the meaning of the Civil Procedure Code, s. 76, and that in an action against the defendants service of summons upon him was not due service. G in particular instances drew hundis on the firm of G S which that firm duly accepted and paid. Held, that he might reasonably be deemed their agent or manager for this particular kind of business, if for no other, and service on him might probably suffice in the case of a plaintiff suing on hundi transactions as with the firm through him. Service unduly made under s. 76 does not become effectual by reason of the fact of service being subsequently notified to the parties really interested as defendants. Semble : Service duly effected under s. 76 is effectual without reference to the circumstances of its being or not being communicated to the real defendants. Acting on this letter, Messrs R S & Co. obtained freight for the Rialto, signing the shipping orders in their own name as agents for the master of the Rialto. Messrs. R. S. & Co. held no other authority from the owner of the Rialto than that contained in the above letter. Held, that Messrs. R S & Co. did not carry on business for, and in the name of, the owner of the Rialto, and were not therefore his recognized agents within the meaning of s. 17, cl. 2, of the Code of Civil Procedure, to accept service of a summons on his behalf in respect of a cause of action that arose out of the loading of the Rialto. Whether, in order to constitute a recognized agent within the meaning of the above section, the business carried on by him must be continuous, and not an occasional or desultory business. Semble : A Bombay firm simply employed by the owners of ship visiting Bombay to procure freight for her for a particular voyage cannot, under ordinary circumstances, be regarded as carrying on business in the name of the owners of such ship. 31. ——— Summons transmitted to local Court for service—Issue of summons—Return of local Court when sufficient evidence of service— Form of return to be made by Civil Court. Where the service of summons has been effected on a defendant by affixing a copy of the summons on the door of his dwelling-house, the Court must decide whether the summons has been duly served by such affixing or not, and if it decides in the negative, a new summons must be issued, or substituted service directed. Before the Court can decide in favour of the sufficiency of this mode of service, it must be satisfied that the defendant is keeping out of the way for the purpose of avoiding service. Where a summons has been transmitted by one Court to another for service by the latter, the transmitting Court is not bound, in every case, to satisfy itself that the law as to service has been strictly followed. The presumption in favour of the proceedings of a Court of justice is that everything has been duly performed, and if the return made by the Court serving the summons states that the summons has been duly effected, that presumption must prevail, unless the return discloses some patent irregularity or clear divergence from the law. As a rule, on a return from a competent Court that summons has been duly effected it may be presumed that either personal service has been effected, or substituted service under s. 82, or under ss. 80 and 82 combined, of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). As proof of due service of summons, a return from the Court of Small Causes at K was relied upon in the High Court. The return was in the following words : " Read balliff's endorsement on the back of the process stating that the summons has been affixed to the defendant's house on the 22nd December 1884, at 9 A.M.; and proof of the same having been duly taken by me, it is ordered that the summons be returned." Held, that there was no sufficient service. The return itself proved the insufficiency. There was no statement, under the hand of the Judge, that the summons had been duly effected, and did not appear that anything had been done beyond fixing the summons on the defendant's door. That affixing was not sanctioned after inquiry by the local Court, as required by s. 82. SUNDERBUNS BOUNDARY.

——— Beng. Reg. III of 1828, s. 13. S. 13, Regulation III of 1828, was intended to make provision for the immediate settlement of the limits of the Sunderbuns ; hence it fixed peremptorily a period after which the demarcation of those limits, made by the special Commissioner to that end appointed, should be final. No person could come in after that period (namely, three months from the date of the Commissioner's proceeding fixing boundary) pleading infancy or other ground for re-opening the question of boundary, since the geographical boundary line was necessarily to be one and the same for all the world. Even within the period of limitation allowed, no one could be heard to object to the line, unless he declared and offered proof that at the time of the survey he was in the occupation of a definite quantity of land cleared and under cultivation within the line. After the line had once become final, no party could be heard to say that even cultivated lands within it were part of his settled zamindari. BARADAKANT ROY v. COMMISSIONER OF THE SUNDERBUNS

1. ACT XXIII OF 1861, S. 35.

1. ——— Exercise of superintendence —Orders of Court of first instance and Appellate Court. The High Court could interfere, under s. 35, Act XXIII of 1861, with the order of the Court of first instance, as well as of the Appellate Court where the orders of both the Courts appeared to be without jurisdiction. 2. ——— Case tried in two Courts without jurisdiction. Where a case properly cognizable by a Small Cause Court had been heard and determined by the Subordinate Judge, and on appeal by the District Judge, the High Court, in the exercise of its extraordinary jurisdiction, annulled the proceedings of the two lower Courts. 5. ——— Act X of 1859 s. 108—Sale by Deputy Collector—Appeal. A Deputy Collector sold an under-tenure in execution of a decree for rent. An appeal was made to the Collector on the ground that the tenure could not be sold unless execution had been previously issued against the moveable property of the judgment-debtor. The Collector affirmed the decision of the Deputy Collector, but on review set aside his former order, on the ground that he had no jurisdiction, the sale having taken place under the provisions of Act X of 1859. An application was made to the High Court under s. 35 of Act XXIII of 1861 to set aside the order of the Collector, on the ground that the Collector had no power to review his own judgment, and consequently his first order stood, which the High Court ought to set aside, and pass such order as it might think right, and reverse the order of the Deputy Collector. The question was referred to a Full Bench whether s. 35 applied to the order of the Collector. The Full Bench refused to consider the question referred, on the ground that it was the intention of Act X of 1859 that the sale by the Deputy Collector should be final. In the matter of the petition of DOCOWRI KAZI

6. ——— Order illegally made—Appeal entertained without jurisdiction. In execution of a decree, the District Munsif made an order which he was not legally authorised to make at the instance of the purchaser of the property sold in execution. No appeal could be made against the order, but the Civil Judge entertained an appeal and reversed the order of the District Munsif. The High Court set aside the order of the Civil Judge under s. 35, Act XXIII of 1861, but, by virtue of the powers given by the section, the order of the District Munsif was also annulled. 7. ——— Court exceeding its jurisdiction—Appeal heard without jurisdiction. The true construction of s. 35 of Act XXIII of 1861 was, that the High Court might call for the record in any case in which a subordinate Court exercised a jurisdiction when it had none, or exceeded it when it had jurisdiction. The words in s. 35, "the Sudder Court may set aside the decision passed on appeal in such case by the subordinate Court, or may pass such other order in the case as to such Sudder Court may seem right," meant that, where a Court exceeds its jurisdiction, the High Court may set aside that part of the order which is in excess of jurisdiction, and that, where the decision of the subordinate Court is made on appeal in a case in which it has no appellate jurisdiction, the proper order is to set aside the decision altogether. If an appeal be heard by a subordinate Court which has no jurisdiction to hear it, when it ought to be heard by another subordinate Court which has jurisdiction to hear it, the Court may set aside the decision of the Court which had no jurisdiction, and may, if it think right, refer the case to the Court which had jurisdiction, even if it be too late to prefer a fresh appeal to that Court. The Judge having entertained an appeal where none lay, is no ground for interfering with a decision which the legislature intended to be final. 19. Act XXIII of 1861, s. 35—Order made without jurisdiction—Interference with order of lower Courts. Petitioner bought at a Court-sale certain property which had been attached in O. S. No. 30 of 1860 on the file of the District Munsif's Court. Before, however, the sale certificate was issued to him, the plaintiff in O. S. No. 79 of 1866 presented a petition praying for a re-sale of the property, on the ground that it had been sold at an undervalue. On this petition the Munsif cancelled the former sale and ordered a re-sale. Before this re-sale took place, the property was sold in execution of the decree in suit No. 3 of 1866 on the file of the Civil Court, and purchased by the plaintiff in that suit. Thereupon petitioner applied to the Munsif to re-sell the property in satisfaction of his claim. The Munsif refused to do so, and the Civil Judge, upon appeal, confirmed the Munsif's order. Held, on special appeal, that the Munsif's first order, annulling the sale, was a nullity, and the subsequent attachment and sale under the decree in O. S. No. 3 of 1866 was inoperative against the property; that consequently the appellant was entitled to have these proceedings set aside and the validity of his sale upheld, if the respondent's objection that the orders were not open to question in the High Court should not prevail. Upon the latter point:—Held, that no right of appeal existed, but that therefore the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal to the Court, and, giving effect to the petition of special appeal as a petition under s. 35 of Act XXIII of 1861, that the orders of the lower Courts should be annulled and the petitioner declared entitled to an order and certificate perfecting his title. ——— Plaint, presentation of—Return of plaint for presentation to proper Court — Jurisdiction of Subordinate Judge—High Court, power of, to interfere under Bom. Reg. II of 1827, s. 5, cl. 2. A second class Subordinate Judge returned a plaint for presentation in the proper Court on the ground that the subject-matter exceeded his pecuniary jurisdiction. The first class Subordinate Judge, to whom the plaint was then presented, also returned it for presentation in the proper Court on the ground that the subject-matter was below his pecuniary jurisdiction. The plaintiff thereupon presented the plaint to the successor of the second class Subordinate Judge who had originally returned the plaint. That Judge held that he had no jurisdiction to review the order passed by his predecessor. The plaintiff appealed, and the Judge rejected the appeal, holding that no appeal lay against an order refusing to grant a review. The plaintiff applied to the High Court under its extraordinary jurisdiction. Held, that the case was one in which the High Court ought to interfere under cl. 2, s. 5 of Bombay Regulation II of 1827. The order of the second class Subordinate Judge was set aside with a direction that he should admit the plaint as of the date of its original presentation. GIRDHARLAL HARGOVANDAS v. LALLU JAGJIVAN

The rejection of an application under s. 15 does not necessarily amount to a decision on the merits. Where a suit for rent was thrown out by a Munsif and subsequently thrown out by a Small Cause Court and in either case the High Court refused to interfere under s. 15, but a different Munsif interpreted the second order of the High Court as a variation of the first and entertained the suit:—Held, that, though the action of the High Court did not affect the merits, yet, as plaintiff had a substantial claim, the second Munsif did right in receiving it. 27. ——— Order rejecting document under s. 129, Civil Procedure Code, 1859. The High Court refused to interfere under s. 15 of the Charter Act to set aside an order rejecting a document made by a Court under Act VIII of 1859, s. 129, an appeal from such order being barred by s. 363. In the matter of ERSKINE 18 W. 29. ——— Error of law—Case where no appeal lies to High Court. Mere errors of law committed by a lower Appellate Court in cases in which the High Court has no appellate jurisdiction do not give the latter Court power to interfere under s. 15 of the Charter Act, its interference being restricted to cases in which the lower Court exercises a jurisidiction which it has not, or refuse to exercise a jurisdiction which it has. 30. ——— Court acting without jurisdiction—Error in law. The interference of the High Court under s. 15, 24 & 25 Vict., c. 104, should be confined to cases in which the lower Court has acted without jurisdiction, or has improperly declined jurisdiction, and should not be extended to cases in which the Court, though competent in respect of the subject-matter, has misconceived the law in deciding a case. In re KASINATH ROY CHOWDHRY 7 B. 31. ——— Error in law—Injustice, Prevention of. Where there has been a manifest error of law, and to prevent manifest injustice, the High Court in the exercise of its extraordinary jurisdiction will remand a case to the lower Court, though the value of the claim may be under R500 and the case may be one in which a special appeal is not allowed. RAMABAI v. TRIMBAK GANESH DESAI . . 9 Bom. 283

32. ——— Erroneous order in law made in consequence of false statement of party. The High Court will interfere, under s. 15 of the Charter Act with an order made by a lower Court which is merely contrary to law, when that order has been passed in consequence of a wilfully false statement made by the opposite party. ROGHO NUNDUN LALL v. MOHESH LALL 3 C. L. R. 137

33. ——— Wrong decision where no special appeal lay. Where the lower Court's decision was fundamentally wrong in law, and the liability of the defendants in the essential matter of the suit had not been properly tried, the High Court, although not warranted in interfering in special appeal (by reason of the suit being a money claim under R500), was justified in interfering under its general powers of supervision. SHAMDANEE v. BHOJOO RAM . 22 W. R. 44

34. ——— Refusal of order of confirmation of sale—Error of law. A certified purchaser of property sold in execution of a decree applied to the Judge for an order of confirmation of sale, and was refused. Held, that the High Court had no power to interfere with the Judge's decision, even though erroneous on a point of law, upon a matter entirely within his jurisdiction, and from which there was no appeal. In the matter of the petition of DURGA CHARAN SIRKAR 2 B. 35. ——— Error of law. The High Court will not, under s. 15 of 24 & 25 Vict., c. 104, interfere with judgments, decrees, or orders of lower Court on the bare ground that they are erroneous at law, or are based upon a wrong conclusion of facts; there must be some special ground justifying the High Court to exercise such powers. 36. ——— Error of law—Revision of judicial proceedings—Jurisdiction. The High Court is not competent, in the exercise of the powers of superintendence over the Courts subordinate to it conferred on it by s. 15 of 24 & 25 Vict., c. 104, to interfere with the order of a Court subordinate to it, on the ground that such order has proceeded on an error of law or an error of fact. Where, therefore, on appeal by the judgment-debtor against an order confirming a sale of immoveable property in the execution of a decree, the lower Court set aside the sale on a ground not provided by law, and the auction-purchasers applied

37. ——— Revision of judicial proceeding—Jurisdiction of High Court—Civil Procedure Code, s. 622. Held by EDGE, C.J., and OLDFIELD and BRODHURST, JJ., that under s. 15 of 24 & 25 Vict., c. 104, it is competent to the High Court, in the exercise of its power of superintendence, to direct a subordinate Court to do its duty or to abstain from taking action in matters of which it has no cognizance; but the High Court is not competent, in the exercise of this authority, to interfere with and set right the orders of a subordinate Court on the ground that the order of the subordinate Court has proceeded on an error of law or an error of fact. The High Court's power to direct a Subordinate Judge to do his duty is not limited to cases in which such Judge declines to hear or determine a suit or application within his jurisdiction. Held, by STRAIGHT and TYRRELL, JJ., that the word "superintendence" used in s. 15 of the Charter Act contemplated and now includes powers of a judicial or quasi-judicial character, apart from those conferred on the Court by s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code; but that the last-mentioned provision may properly be accepted as indicating the extent to which the Court should ordinarily interfere with the findings of such subordinate tribunals as are invested with exclusive jurisdiction to try and determine all questions of law and fact arising in suits within their exclusive cognizance, and in which their decisions are declared by law to be final. Tej Ram v. *Harsukh, I. 38. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 622—Failure of duty by a Subordinate Court. Where a subordinate Court had signally failed to do its duty, and there had been no patent neglect on the part of the petitioner:—Held, on an application for revision, that it is competent for the High Court under the general powers of supervision vested in it by s. 15 of 24 & 25 Vict., c. 104, to direct the subordinate Court to do its duty, and complete the case according to law. Muhammad Suleman Khan v. *Fatima, I. 39. ——— Error of law—Rejection of claim to attached property without decision on necessary questions. Where it was found that the Court below was wrong in disallowing the claim without determining certain questions of law which it should have determined, the error was held to be not such that it ought to be rectified by the High Court in the exercise of its power of revision under s. 15 of the Stat. 24 & 25 Vict., c. 104, or under s. 622, Civil Procedure Code. S. 15 of the Stat. 24 & 25 Vict., c. 104, gives the High Court, in general terms, power of "superintendence over all Courts which may be subject to its appellate jurisdiction." The law having advisedly and wisely left this power unlimited, it is not desirable to limit it by any hard-and-fast rule, and it is not every error of law that would be a ground for the exercise of this power, and a party's claim to the interference of the High Court is very much weakened when he has another remedy provided for him by law. Madhub Chunder Giree v. *Sham Chand Giree, I. 40. ——— Execution-proceedings —Supervision as to execution of order. The High Court has jurisdiction to direct a lower Court in what manner its own (the High Court's) decree or order shall be carried into effect by that Court, and to see that the lower Court does not pervert the order or do that which was not intended to be done, even when such order constitutes a part of the order in execution of a decree which the lower Court ought to have passed. 44. ——— Assignment of decree—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss. 246, 265—Duty of Judge. Where a judgment-creditor seeks to attach and sell a decree on the allegation that the assignment of it was not a bonâ fide conveyance, and the conveyance purports to be one of property specified in s. 265, Act VIII of 1859, it is the duty of the Judge under s. 246 to enquire whether the assignee of the decree was or was not in bonâ fide possession of the property. If the Judge inquires into the facts, no appeal lies from his order; but if he refuses an inquiry, the High Court, under its general powers of superintendence, can and ought to require the Judge to make the inquiry. 49. ——— Execution of decree, refusal to stay—Allegation of fraud and finding against it. W got a decree against M in the Court of the Sudder Ameen, and in execution attached certain property of the judgment-debtor J, who had a decree against the same judgment-debtor in the Court of the Principal Sudder Ameen, to stay its proceedings, on the ground that W's decree had been obtained by fraud. The Sudder Ameen refusing the application, J appealed to the Judge, who saw no ground for the imputation of fraud. Held (by HOBHOUSE, J.), that the Judge's judgment was on the face of it good and in a case within his jurisdiction, and that it did not call for an exercise of the extraordinary power given to the High Court by s. 15 of the Charter Act. JUMAL ALI v. WAHED ALI . . . 11 W. R. 97

He obtained a decree, but the decree was reversed on appeal. On special appeal the Court, though holding that no special appeal would lie, set aside the decrees of both the lower Courts as having been passed without jurisdiction. TARINI CHARAN MOOKERJEE v. PURNA CHANDRA ROY 6 B. L. R. 717 : 15 W. R. 397

53. ——— Order made without jurisdiction—Appeal in rent suit to wrong Court. A suit to recover R254 as arrears of rent having been decreed by the Deputy Collector for R49, the defendant appealed to the Judge, but plaintiff appealed to the Collector. The Judge dismissed the defendant's appeal, and the Collector gave plaintiff a decree for the full amount originally claimed. The High Court, under s. 15 of the Charter Act, set aside the Collector's decree as made without jurisdiction. ROOKNEE ROY v. AMRITH LALL . . . 14 W. R. 254

54. ——— Order of Collector made without jurisdiction. N sued his gomashta M and M's surety C under s. 24, Act X of 1859, and got a decree ex parte as against the surety. Upon N's proceeding to execute the decree, C applied for a revival of the suit, which was granted and a re-hearing was appointed for the 4th May 1869, but subsequently postponed to the 8th, on which date the case was struck off by the Deputy Collector, under the provisions of s. 54. Subsequently N applied for a fresh execution of his original decree to the Collector, who sent the record to the Deputy Collector, with instructions to carry out the execution. Thereupon C obtained a rule from the High Court calling on N to show cause why the Collector's order should not be set aside. Held, that the Deputy Collector's order striking the case off the file annulled the decree so far as C was concerned, and that the Collector's order directing execution was without jurisdiction and the High Court would set it aside under their powers of superintendence. 55. ——— Order contrary to law from which no appeal lay—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 246. Where an order was made by a Munsif under s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859, and a regular appeal was preferred, and then a special appeal to the High Court, that Court, while refusing to entertain the appeal, on the ground that the Munsif's order was final, or to set aside the order under s. 15 of 24 & 25 Vict., c. 104, expressed an opinion that the order was contrary to law, and left it to the Munsif to act upon such opinion. 56. ——— Order contrary to law—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 246—Want of jurisdiction—Act VIII of 1859, s. 246, order under. In a case decided by the Munsif, in which it was found by the High Court that there was no appeal to the Judge, the Judge's order was set aside as passed without jurisdiction, and the Munsif's order was also set aside as not having been passed under s. 246, Act VIII of 1859, under which section the objection had been perferred. 57. ——— Order passed without jurisdiction—Claim overvalued for purpose of giving jurisdiction. The plaintiff brought a suit in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Dacca, under s. 15, Act XIV of 1859. The defendant pleaded that the Judge had no jurisdiction, inasmuch as, if the suit had been properly valued, it was one cognizable by the Munsif. The Judge found that the value of the property did not exceed R500, and that the plaintiff had over-estimated the value of the claim in order to exceed the jurisdiction ; but instead of returning the plaint, he proceeded to try the case on its merits, and dismissed the suit. On an application on behalf of the plaintiff to set aside the judgment as passed without jurisdiction, the High Court refused to interfere under s. 15 of 24 & 25 Vict., c. 104. In the matter of the petition of WISE . . 10 B. 58. ——— Order passed without jurisdiction—Revival of suit—Act X of 1859, ss. 54, 55, and 58. A suit for arrears of rent was dismissed by the Deputy Collector for default under s. 54, Act X of 1859. Thereupon a fresh suit was brought by the same plaintiff for the recovery of the said arrears, and a decree was obtained. On appeal, the Judge reversed the decision of the Deputy Collector and dismissed the suit. The plaintiff then applied under s. 58, Act X of 1859, for revival of the former suit, but the Deputy Collector rejected the application. On appeal, the Judge held that the suit might be revived, and remanded the case for trial. The High Court, under its general power of superintendence, set aside the order of the Judge as passed without jurisdiction, holding that, although the Deputy

The Munsif, without going into evidence, rejected the application, and the Judge, in the same manner, reversed the Munsif's judgment and gave the applicant possession. The High Court on application set aside both decisions as not being decisions on the investigation of a suit within the section. The question still remained for decision whether the property was bonâ fide in the possession of the applicant on his own account or on account of some person other than the defendant. decided an appeal, which had meanwhile been pending, the result of which was that counter-petitioners were held to be entitled to much less than they had been awarded by the District Court and had received from petitioner. This sum was also less than had been realized by the sale of the six items of property. Petitioner, in consequence, applied to the District Court for restitution of the six items of property, which had been sold by the Court and for other relief. The District Court held that the sale could not be set aside as a nullity and that the petitioner was only entitled to receive back the balance, which had been paid in excess. On an appeal being preferred to the High Court :— Held, (i) that no appeal lay from the order of the District Court. The order was not a decree ; the parties were not parties to a suit ; and the order was not one from which a special right of appeal was allowed by the Code. The right of appeal must not be assumed to exist in every matter, which comes under the consideration of a Judge, but must be given by statute or by some authority equivalent to statute. Nor does s. 647 of the Code of Civil Procedure confer any right of appeal not expressly given elsewhere by the Code ; (ii) that the High Court had no power to revise the order. The District Court had jurisdiction to decide the matter and had done so, though perhaps wrongly ; (iii) that petitioner should have been held entitled to some restitution. The principle, which should have been followed, was : "The Court in making restitution is bound to restore the parties, so far as they can be restored, to the position, which they were in at the time when the Court, by its erroneous action, had displaced them from it." Inasmuch as the property sold had realized more than was due under the Court's order, the sale was illegal at any rate in so far as it was unnecessary ; and semble : that it was entirely illegal. 126. ——— Charter Act—Revocation of sanction—Power of High Court. Under sub-s. (6) of s. 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure a petition by way of appeal lies to the High Court in every case in which a Civil or Criminal Court subordinate to it, within the meaning of sub-s. (7) (a), gives or refuses a sanction, whether in respect of an offence committed before it or of one committed before a Court subordinate to it, and, in the latter case, whether it gives a sanction refused by the Subordinate Court or revokes a sanction accorded by such Court. Under cls. (b) and (c) of sub-s. (1), the sanction may be accorded in the first instance by the Court to which the Court in which the offence was committed is subordinate, even though no application for sanction has been made to the latter Court. For the purposes of cls. (b) and (c) of sub-s. (1), a sanction accorded by the High Court would operate as a sanction accorded by a Court subordinate to it, such as the District Court. An order passed by an Appellate Court is, in law, the order which ought to have been passed by the Subordinate Court, and will in consequence, have the same efficacy and operation as the order which ought to have been passed by the latter. S. 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure provides that the High Court, as a Court of revision, may exercise the powers conferred on a Court of Appeal by s. 195. In a case in which both the Original Criminal Court and the Appellate Criminal Court refuse sanction, the High Court, as a Court of revision, may call for the record and if the refusal proceeds on an error of law, it may accord the sanction which ought to have been granted by the Appellate Criminal Court and such sanction will be operative for the purposes of cls. (b) and (c) of sub-s. (1). A plaintiff in a suit applied for attachment before judgment and filed an affidavit in support of that application, in which he stated that the defendants intended to alienate their properties with mala fide intentions. He did not state in the affidavit that this statement was based on what he had been told. He was, however, orally examined, and then deposed that he had heard that the defendants were intending to alienate property. The petition was dismissed. Thereupon sanction was asked for, the Subordinate Judge according sanction only for an offence under s. 199 of the Penal Code, and refusing sanction for offences under ss. 193, 196 and 200. The sanction accorded was not based on the oral evidence, but on the statement in the affidavit. The defendants appealed (under s. 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure) against the refusal to grant sanction for offences, under ss. 193, 196 and 200, to the District Judge who accorded sanction for the prosecution of the petitioner under those sections also. Held, on revision, that the District Judge had not exercised a sound discretion in according the sanction, for although the petitioner had not stated in his affidavit that the statements therein were made on hearsay, he had stated so in his oral evidence and the affidavit was not inconsistent with that evidence. Quœre : Whether a Village Magistrate is a Magistrate within the meaning of s. 197, cl. The Joint Magistrate struck the case off his file, giving as his reason for so doing that the suo motu quashed the Sub-Magistrate's sanction under s. 195 (b) of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Held, that the Joint Magistrate's action in striking the case off his file was legal and proper, though the reason given by him for so doing was erroneous and his act in quashing the sanction ultra vires. A Joint Magistrate, though authorised under s. 407 (2) to entertain appeals preferred by persons convicted on a trial by the Stationary Magistrate, is not the Court to which appeals from the Court of the Stationary

The Joint Magistrate could not, therefore, revoke the sanction given by the Stationary Sub-Magistrate, the District Magistrate alone having the power to revoke or grant a sanction given or refused by the Stationary Sub-Magistrate. Nor was it competent to a District Magistrate, under s. 407, to direct that applications for revoking or granting a sanction given or refused by a Sub-Magistrate may be presented to the Joint Magistrate. 129. ——— Sanction—Notice to accused—Reference to High Court—Revisional power. S. 215 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is not applicable to a case in which a commitment in question has not been made under any one of the four sections therein specified, but has been made under the directions of the High Court under s. 526 (1) IV. An order of a Sessions Judge or District Magistrate passed under s. 436, directing commitment, may be quashed by the High Court in the exercise of its revisional powers, though not under s. 215. But an order passed by the High Court itself under s. 526 cannot be so revised. Sanction accorded by Government under s. 197 is not null and void for the reason that no notice was given to the accused to show cause, why it should not be given. It is a matter left to the discretion of Government whether such opportunity should be given to the person concerned before sanctioning his prosecution. There is a marked distinction between the classes of offences dealt with in s. 195, cls. (b) and (c), and those dealt with in s. 197. A Court granting sanction under s. 195 (b) and (c) does so in connection with offences committed in or in relation to any proceeding in such Court, and the Court therefore acts in its judicial capacity in granting the sanction on legal evidence. But the Government in according or withholding sanction under s. 197 (for the prosecution of a public servant in respect of an offence alleged to have been committed by him as such public servant), acts purely in its executive capacity and the sanction need not be based on legal evidence. 8. ——— Case where other specific remedy exists—Bom. Reg. II of 1827, s. 5—Certiorari—Mandamus—Prohibition—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877) Ch. VIII. A Division Bench (PINHEY and NANABHAI HARIDAS, JJ.) of the High Court referred the following question for the determination of the Full Bench: "Whether the High Court should exercise its extraordinary jurisdiction under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, or otherwise, on behalf of persons who feel themselves aggrieved by orders passed by Courts below in cases in which it appears the law has specifically prescribed another remedy by suit or otherwise?" Held, that the question did not admit of a precise categorical reply; that the High Court could not impose on itself limitations without regard to circumstances; but that the general principles governing the exercise, by the High Court, of its visitatorial or superintending powers to be deduced from a general survey of the authorities on the subject might be reduced to the form of the following seven propositions, the fifth of which would ordinarily govern in the class of cases alluded to in the question; (i) The visitatorial or superintending power of the High Court is so necessary and almost indispensable, that it is not to be wholly excluded even by a clause in a statute withdrawing cases under the statute from its control. When such a statute has been made a mere pretext, or has been wholly misapplied, the case will be treated as one not really arising under the statute, but on an evasion or perversion of the statute, and as such subject to the general control of the Court. (ii) The Court having called up the record or proceedings of a subordinate Court, will itself investigate the fact on which a jurisdiction has been assumed or declined; on which it depends whether the subordinate Court could or could not legally deal with the matter in question, either at all or on the principle to which it has referred the case; or according to which its mode of inquiry or of action may or may not have been in contradiction rather than obedience to the rules of procedure, or the principles implied in them, to such a material extent as to defeat the purpose of the law. (iii) If the Court finds that the external conditions of jurisdiction, of investigation, and of command, have been satisfied by the inferior Court, it will not substitute its own appreciation of evidence, or its own judgment thereon, for the determination of the inferior Court in any matter committed by the Legislature to the discretion of such Court. (iv) Where an appeal is provided, the Court will not.

interfere by any peremptory order with the ordinary course of adjudication, save in cases wherein a defeat of the law and a grave wrong are manifest, and are irremediable by the regular procedure. (v) Where a decree or order of a subordinate Court is declared by the law to be, for its own purposes, final or conclusive, though in its nature provisional, as subject to displacement by the decree in another more formal suit, the Court will have regard to the intention of the Legislature that promptness and certainty should, in such cases, be in some measure accepted instead of juridical perfection. It will rectify the proceedings of the inferior Court where the extrinsic conditions of its legal activity have plainly been infringed; but where the alleged or apparent error consists in a misappreciation of evidence, or misconstruction of the law intrinsic to the inquiry and decision, it will respect the intended finality, and will intervene peremptorily only when it is manifest that by the ordinary and prescribed method an adequate remedy, or the intended remedy, cannot be had. (vi) The Court will, in all cases, regard its exercise of the extraordinary jurisdiction as discretional, and subject to considerations of the importance of the particular case, or of the principle involved in it of delay on the part of an applicant, and of his merits with respect to the case in which the interference of the Court is sought. Should other special causes appear for or against the Court's intervention, due weight is to be given to them, regard being always had to the principles already enunciated. (vii) The Court will "sedulously abstain" from making any order or refusing to make it on grounds the appreciation of which is exclusively assigned by law to some other authority, provided the legal competence be exercised in good faith on matters that may reasonably be understood as within its lawful range. 11. ——— Order amending decree under s. 206, Civil Procedure Code, 1882—High Court's powers of revision. A District Judge, by an order passed under s. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code, altered a decree passed by his predecessor in the terms, "I dismiss the appeal," to read "I accept the appeal," on the ground that his predecessor had obviously meant to say that he accepted the appeal, and that the decree as it stood failed to give effect to the judgment. Per OLDFIELD, J.—That the order passed by the Judge under s. 206 could not be made the subject of revision by the High Court under s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, because there was an appeal from the amended decree, which became the decree in the suit, and superseded the original decree. Per MAHMOOD, J.—That an order passed under s. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code constituted an adjudication separate from that concluded by a decree under the Code passed after the parties had been heard and evidence taken, and that the order in the present case was therefore a separate adjudication, and was not appealable under s. 588. Also that, in saying that by "dismissed" his predecessor meant "decreed," the Judge had altered the decree in a manner not warranted by the terms of s. 206; that he had therefore exercised his jurisdiction "illegally and with material irregularity," within the meaning of s. 622 of the Code; and that the Court was consequently competent to revise his order. Raghunath Das v. *Raj Kumar, I. 12. ——— Civil Procedure Code, s. 206—Order amending decree in respect of Court-fee in pre-emption suit. An order as to costs contained in a decree for pre-emption directed that the pleader's fees should be calculated with reference to the value of the claim as set forth in the plaint. Subsequently the Court, professing to act under s. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code, passed an order directing the amendment of the decree by calculating the pleader's fees upon the actual value of the property. Held per OLDFIELD, J.—When an original decree is amended under s. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code, it, as amended, is the decree in the suit; and an appeal therefore lies from it under the provisions of s. 540, when the validity of the amendment can be questioned. The matter of amending a decree under s. 206 does not by itself constitute a "case" within the meaning of s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, but forms part of the proceedings in the suit in which the decree is made. Held, therefore, per OLDFIELD, J., that where an original decree, which was appealable, was amended by the Court of first instance, under s. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code, the High Court had no power to revise such amendment under s. 622 of the Code. Per MAHMOOD, J. (contra). 4. CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1882, S. 622 —contd.

Held, on appeal under the Letters Patent, that the alteration of the decree was improper, and was not an amendment of the kind authorised by s. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code. An order passed under s. 206 amending a decree is a separate adjudication, and is not merely a part of the original decree, and such an order is not appealable under s. 588 of the Code. Such an order therefore can be revised by the High Court under s. 622. The judgment of OLDFIELD, J., reversed, and that of MAHMOOD, J., affirmed. RAGHUNATH DAS v. RAJ KUMAR I. L. 13. ——— Civil Procedure Code, s. 206—Amendment of decree—Munsif acting illegally but in exercise of jurisdiction. The holder of a decree passed in a suit on a hypothecation-bond applied under the Civil Procedure Code, s. 206, to have the decree amended by bringing the description of the land contained therein into accordance with that contained in the hypothecation-bond, and the Court made an order accordingly. On a revision petition preferred under the Civil Procedure Code, s. 622, by the judgment-debtor:—Held (reversing the judgment of PARKER, J., but on different reasoning by the two learned Judges constituting the Court), that the High Court had no power to interfere on revision. 14. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 44—Order refusing leave to join claims—Rejection of plaint. In a plaint filed in the Court of a Subordinate Judge, the plaintiff claimed to recover possession of a house, together with some grain which was stored in it. The plaintiff applied to the Subordinate Judge for leave, under s. 44, rule (a), of the Civil Procedure Code, to join the claim for grain with the claim for possession of the house. The Subordinate Judge refused leave and returned the plaint, with directions that the plaintiff should institute two suits for recovery of the house and the grain, respectively, in the Court of the Munsif:—Held, that the Subordinate Judge's order was substantially an order rejecting the plaint, on the ground that the plaintiff had joined a cause of action with a suit for recovery of immoveable property; that, although this might have been a misapplication of s. 44, rule (a), of the Code, its effect was to reject the plaint; that such an order was a decree with reference to the definition in s. 2, and was appealable as such to the District Judge, and that therefore a second appeal lay in the case to the High Court, and that Court was not competent to interfere in revision under s. 622. The decree-holder thereupon applied under s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code to set aside the order of the Munsif. Held, that, inasmuch as an appeal lay, under s. 558 (cl. 6), from the order of the Munsif, the court ought not to interfere under s. 622. The decree-holder thereupon brought a suit to contest the order allowing the objection. He did not seek in this suit relief in respect of the costs. He obtained a decree setting aside the order allowing the objection. He then applied to the Court which had made the order to order a refund of the amount of the costs which had been paid to the objector. Held, that, the application regarded as one with regard to a portion of an order made under s. 280 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Court was functus in the matter, and could not make or enforce such an order as was sought for; and that its order disallowing the application was not appealable as it was not one made under s. 244, and if taken to be one passed with reference to s. 280, an appeal was barred by s. 283: the Court therefore would interfere under s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. In the matter of the petition of RAGHU NATH DAS. Six weeks' time was allowed for the return of the award. No application was made for extension of time. The award having been returned on 8th May, the Court refused to give judgment in accordance with it under s. 522 of the Code of Civil Procedure, on the ground that it was not valid. The plaintiffs then petitioned the High Court under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure:—Held, that the award was invalid, and the Court had not failed to exercise jurisdiction within the meaning of s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The plaintiff then applied to the Subordinate Judge to have the award filed in Court under the provisions of s. 525 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The defendants came in and objected to the award on the following amongst other grounds: (i) That the value of the property in suit was R500 only, and therefore that the application should have been made in the Munsif's Court and not in that of the Subordinate Judge. (ii) That the agreement of submission was vague and indefinite, and did not clearly set out the matters in dispute. The Subordinate Judge overruled the objection without taking any evidence, and directed the award to be filed and a decree to be passed thereon. The plaintiff appealed. The defendants contended that no appeal lay, and that, if it did, it lay to the District Judge, and not to the High Court. Held, that, assuming that on a proceeding under ss. 525 and 526 the Court has power to consider such objections as are mentioned in ss. 520 and 521, the above objections did not fall under either section, but that the Subordinate Judge, before entertaining the application, was bound to satisfy himself that he had jurisdiction to entertain it, and for that purpose to take evidence regarding the value of the property; and that, even if no appeal lay, the High Court could interfere under its revision powers, because the Subordinate Judge had acted in the exercise of his jurisdiction illegally in assuming jurisdiction without taking such evidence. 4. CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1882, S. 622 —contd.

The defendant failing to deliver, the plaintiffs sued for damages as of the 31st May. The learned Judge of the Small Cause Court, on this statement of facts, and before evidence was gone into, ruled that the damages were assessable as of the 25th April, on which day it was admitted the market rate was as high or higher than the contract rate. The plaintiffs, on this ruling, without going into their case further, accepted judgment for nominal damages, and took out a rule for a new trial on the ground that the Judge was in error in assigning the 25th April, and not the 31st May, as the date which ruled the question of damages. On the argument of the rule, the Full Court decided against the plaintiffs, not on this point, which they did not decide one way or the other, but on another point altogether, viz., that the plaintiffs ought to have given defandant notice of L M & Co.'s refusal to give delivery on the 25th April, and, not having done so, could not call on the defendant to deliver. The plaintiffs now moved the High Court under s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) to set aside the order of the Full Court of the Small Cause Court as one which at that stage of the proceedings that Court had no right to make. Held, that in making the order in question under the circumstances of the case, and the state of the record, the Full Court had acted with material irregularity within the meaning of s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that the case must be remanded to be dealt with according to law. Upon this certificate the purchaser applied to the Subordinate Judge to give him possession of a larger amount of property than that specified in the certificate, and, upon the refusal of the Court to do so, applied to the Collector to amend the certificate. The amendment having been made as desired, the purchaser again applied to the Subordinate Judge for possession of the amount claimed by him, and the Subordinate Judge again rejected the application, holding that only the lesser amount had been sold in execution of the decree. The Court held that the Subordinate Judge had jurisdiction to decide the question :—Held, that, inasmuch as the Subordinate Judge had jurisdiction to decide the question, and inasmuch as, even if his decision were wrong, the purchaser had a remedy by bringing a regular suit, the matter did not fall within s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, so as to call for the interference of the High Court in revision. Shivanathaji v. *Joma Kashinath, I. The Court of first instance gave the plaintiffs a decree for possession of the property, on payment of an amount less than that mentioned in the deed; and this decree was affirmed on appeal. The mortgagees appealed to the High Court on the following grounds: "(i) Because it was for the respondents to prove that any portion of the consideration was not paid. (ii) Because the lower Court has not considered the evidence of the appellants. (iii) Because the finding of the lower Court is based on conjecture." Held, on the question whether such grounds not being grounds on which a second appeal is allowed by Ch. XLII of the Civil Procedure Code, the appeal should not proceed rather under Ch. XLVI, s. 622 of that Code, that the appeal could not proceed under s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, in consequence of the decision of the Privy Council in Amir Hassan Khan v. *Sheo Baksh Singh, I. The plaintiffs applied in execution to recover the total amount The application was rejected by the Subordinate Judge, on the ground that the Court had no jurisdiction under s. 24 of Act XIV of 1869. On appeal the District Judge made an order confirming the decision of the Subordinate Judge. The plaintiffs filed a second appeal in the High Court. Held, that no second appeal lay to the High Court from such an order; but as the Subordinate Judge was wrong in refusing to exercise his jurisdiction, the High Court would give

The subject-matter of the suit was within the jurisdiction of the Subordinate Judge, and his jurisdiction continued, whatever might be the result of the suit, in all such matters in the suit as were within his cognizance, amongst which were matters in execution in the suit. The applicants were not parties to the suit. The decree was executed, and the opponents were put into possession. Thereupon the applicants, on the 19th May 1884, presented a petition in the Mamlatdar's Court, under s. 4 of Bombay Act III of 1876, alleging that they had been in actual possession of the lands and had been ousted from them in execution of the decree, and praying that they might be again put into possession. The Mamlatdar was of opinion that the matter was res judicata, and dismissed the petition. He relied on a circular of the Executive Government as his authority. The applicants applied to the High Court under its extraordinary jurisdiction. Held, that it was not a case for the exercise of the extraordinary jurisdiction of the High Court. The Mamlatdar was no doubt guilty of a formal error. In the exercise of his judicial functions he was bound to be governed by the law as he understood it, or as it had been expounded by superior judicial authority, not as it was understood or expounded by unjudicial persons. This, however, was merely an irregularity on the part of the Mamlatdar not apparently involving an injustice to the applicants, who might bring a suit on their title if they had a title. In that suit he applied to the Court in which his suit was brought for an injunction under s. 492 of the Civil Procedure Code to stay the sale of the property attached by B in the execution-proceedings; but that application was rejected, and R thereupon applied for and obtained from the Court of the First Subordinate Judge an order staying the sale of the attached property until the hearing of the suit brought by him to establish his right to it. Held, in an application under s. 622 of the Code to set the latter order aside, that s. 492 of the Code of 1882 has, and was intended to have, a wider application than s. 92 of Act VIII of 1859 had, and provides a remedy where property is "in danger of being wrongfully sold:" if the circumstances justified it, an order could have been obtained under that section from the Court of the Second Subordinate Judge to stay the sale. There being this alteration in the law, and such a remedy provided and no express provision in the Code for stay of execution by a Court executing a decree on the application of third party, the order of the first Subordinate Judge was made without jurisdiction, and should be set aside. In the matter of the petition of BRAJENDRA KUMAR RAI CHOWDHURI. 58. ——— Sale in execution of decree set aside—Material irregularity—Indequacy of price—Exercise of jurisdiction by District Judge. A judgment-debtor applied to have a sale in execution of a decree set aside on the ground that the sale proclamation had not been duly published and that it referred to only 5 bighas instead of some 700, the actual amount, and that in consequence thereof a grossly inadequate price had been obtained for the property. The Munsif found these allegations to be proved and set aside the sale. On appeal the District Judge, while agreeing with the Munsif as to these findings, held that there was no proof that the inadequacy of price was due to irregularities alleged and proved, and that such could not be presumed. He accordingly reversed the Munsif's order. The judgment-debtor, having appealed to the High Court against the order of the District Judge and failed in such appeal by reason of no second appeal lying from such order, applied to the High Court under the provisions of s. 622 of the Code to have the order set aside. Held, that the District Judge having full jurisdiction to determine whether the sale was good or bad, it was impossible to say that, in arriving at the decision he did, he either acted without jurisdiction or illegally in the exercise of his jurisdiction, and that the High Court could not therefore interfere with the order under that section. The District Munsif decreed payment against S ; mesne profits, and, in default of payment by S, a sale of the land against V ; and costs against S, V, and C. V and C appealed against this decree. The Subordinate Judge found that the debt had been paid, and held that, even if the debt had not been paid, K had no cause of action against V or S, but, if at all, against C, and dismissed the suit as against V. The Subordinate Judge also held that he had no jurisdiction to interfere with the decree against S, and saw no reason to interfere with the decree against C. S appealed against the decree. Held, that, even if S was not entitled to appeal in order to have the decree against him set aside, the error of the Subordinate Judge could be corrected under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure by a direction to exercise the discretionary power given by s. 544 of the said Code. 67. ——— Jurisdiction, interference with exercise of—"Illegality"—"Material irregularity." A suit was instituted in the Court of a Munsif to recover from the defendants a sum of R49, being the amount due under a bond and which the plaintiff alleged had been recovered on her account by one of the defendants from the obligor. The Munsif, being of opinion that the determination of the plaintiff's right to the bond involved the question of her heirship to the estate of a certain deceased person, and that consequently the case before him raised a question affecting the title to property exceeding R1,000 in value, held that he had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, and accordingly returned the plaint for presentation to the proper Court under s. 57 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held by the Full Bench, that the Munsif had acted upon an erroneous view, as the only subject-matter of the suit was the R49; that he had consequently failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in him, and the High Court was therefore competent to revise his order under s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. The result of Amir Hassan v. Sheo Bahsh Singh, I. L. R. II Calc. 6, and Magni Ram v. Jiwa Lal, I. L. R. 7 All. 336, is that the questions to which s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code applies are questions of jurisdiction only. The meaning of the decision of the Privy Council in the former case is that, if the Court has jurisdiction to hear and determine a suit, it has jurisdiction to hear and determine all questions which arise in it, either of fact or law, and that the High Court has no jurisdiction under s. 622 to inquire into the correctness of its view of the law, or the soundness of its findings as to facts; but that, when no appeal is provided, its decision on questions of both kinds is final. Per STRAIGHT and TYRRELL, JJ.—Clauses (a) and (b) of s. 584, specifying the grounds on which a second appeal lies to the High Court, embody what s. 622 refers to in the word "illegally," that is to say, to cases where the Court below has, in the exercise of its jurisdiction, come to a decision which is contrary to some specified law or usage having the force of law, or failed to determine some material issue of law or usage. Cl. II, Art. 178.* In execution of a decree for partition of immoveable property passed in 1872, a dispute arose as to the execution in reference to portion of the property, and in 1881 it was finally decided that the decree was defective in its description of the property, and therefore incapable of execution. In May 1885, on application by the decree-holder, the Court passed an order amending the decree, the amendment having reference to an arithmetical error. The judgment-debtor applied to the High Court for revision of this order, on the grounds that the amendment of the decree was barred by limitation, and that the decree itself being barred by limitation and finally pronounced to be incapable of execution, the Court had acted beyond its jurisdiction in amending it. Held, that the application for revision must be rejected. Per OLDFIELD, J., that the High Court had no power to entertain the application under s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code with reference to the decision of the Privy Council in Amir Hassan Khan v. *Sheo Baksh Singh, I. The meaning of the term "jurisdiction" used in s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code must not be confined to the territorial or pecuniary limits of the powers of a Court or to the nature of the class to which the case belongs. During the pendency of this suit the two infant sons died, and the widow was made a defendant as representing the estate of her deceased sons. The suit was decreed in favour of the plaintiffs in 1875, and on the plaintiff's applying for execution the widow objected that $\frac{5}{15}$ ths of the properties, against which execution was sought, was the property of her adopted son, whom she alleged to have adopted in 1874. The adopted son was not made a party to the suit: this objection was overruled, but the same objection was taken by the adopted son through his natural father as his guardian and next friend and the Court released the $\frac{1}{10}$ th share from attachment, and allowed the objection. Against this order some of the plaintiffs appealed, but pending the appeal another of the plaintiffs applied to the High Court, under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to have the order set aside. The Court refused to interfere with the order, inasmuch as there appeared to be no material irregularity therein. SOTISH CHUNDER LAHIRY v. NIL COMUL LAHIRY . . I. L. R. 11 Calc. 45

Sixty-three days after the death of the defendant the plaintiff applied to the Court to enter on the record the legal representative of the deceased defendant. On the 22nd November 1880 the Court rejected the application under the provisions of Art. 171B of Act XV of 1877, and ordered the suit to abate. On the same day the plaintiff applied to the Court to set aside the order directing the suit to abate, but the application was also rejected on the 20th September 1881. The defendant then applied to the Court of first instance to order restitution of the shares, which had been realized by the plaintiff. Upon being ordered to produce the shares, R made an application to the Court, professedly under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, in which he alleged that, pending the appeal to the Privy Council, he had transferred the shares to G, his counsel in the case, who had failed to restore them, and he prayed "that the said person might be brought upon the record, and that execution for recovery of the said shares might be given against him." The Court passed an order upon this application, calling on G to show cause why he should not be called upon to restore the shares made over to him by R, and he thereupon filed an answer denying that he was the custodian of the shares, and alleging that he was their purchaser for value. The Court passed an order directing that G's name should be placed on the record, so that the decree might be executed against him. Held, that the application by R was meant to be and actually was one praying that, in respect of the scrip, restitution of which was being enforced against him, the person to whom some interest in it, more or less, had come pending the suit, might, in addition to himself,

The Mamlatdar found that the money had been tendered to the applicant, but had been wrongfully refused by him. He ordered execution to issue as to costs, but declined to make any order as to possession. The applicant thereupon applied to the High Court in its extraordinary jurisdiction, and alleged that the money had not been duly tendered Held, that the decrees were such as the Mamlatdar could not legally make under the provisions of the Mamlatdars' Act (Bombay Act III of 1876), and the consent of parties could not give him power to do so. Held, also, that the High Court would not go into the question as to the due tender of the money. 106. ——— Mamlatdar, jurisdiction of. The plaintiff sued in a Mamlatdar's Court for possession of certain lands, alleging that the defendants held them under a lease, the time of which had expired. The Mamlatdar found the execution of the lease proved, but held it to be colourable, and that the defendants did not hold under it. He therefore rejected the plaintiff's claim. The plaintiff applied to the High Court in its extraordinary jurisdiction and obtained a rule to set aside the order, contending that the Mamlatdar had no jurisdiction to decide that the lease was colourable, and that he ought not to have admitted evidence upon that point. Held (discharging the rule), that the matter was not one for the extraordinary jurisdiction of the High Court under s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The Mamlatdar had not declined jurisdiction. He had considered the materials laid before him, and had come to a conclusion. That conclusion, if erroneous, ought to be corrected in a regular suit and not by an application to the High Court under s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The defendant in his written statement, as well as in his deposition, admitted execution of the bonds in question, but pleaded non-receipt of the consideration. The Subordinate Judge held that the bond for ₹200 was not proved, but awarded the claim upon the other bond. On appeal, one of the issues raised by the Assistant Judge was—are the bonds in suit proved? He held that the plaintiffs had failed to prove execution of the bonds, and dismissed the claim in toto. On an application to the High Court under s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882),—Held, reversing the decision of the lower Court, that the defendant having admitted execution of the bonds in question, the Assistant Judge acted illegally in the exercise of his jurisdiction in raising the question of the execution. The first rule of adjudication is that a Judge shall decide secundum allegata et probata. The only question that could be tried in the present case was non-receipt of consideration. 110. ——— Passing decree unsupported by proof—High Court's powers of revision—Bailment—Negligence. A Judge has no jurisdiction to pass, in a contested suit, a decree adverse to the defendant where there is no evidence before him to support the decree, and where the burden of proof is not or has not continued to be upon the defendant. If he passes such a decree it is liable to be set aside in revision under s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. Moulvi Muhammad v. Syad Husain, I. L. R. 3 All. 203, and Harnam Tewari v. Sakina Bibi, I. L. R. 3 All. 417, referred to. S hired a horse from W, and while it was in his custody, it died from rupture of the diaphragm, which was proved to have been caused by over-exertion on a full stomach. In a suit by W against S to recover the value of the horse, the defendant gave evidence to the effect that the horse became restive and plunged about, that he might then have touched it with his riding cane, that it shortly afterwards again became excited, bolted for two miles and at last fell down and died. This evidence was not contradicted on any point, nor was any other evidence offered as to how the horse came to run away. There was evidence that the horse was a quiet one, that for some time previously it had done hardly any work, that it was fed immediately before it was let out for hire, and that rupture of the diaphragm was a likely result of the horse running away while its stomach was distended with food. The Court of first instance held that the defendant was bound to prove that he had taken such care of the horse as a man of ordinary prudence would under similar circumstances have taken of his own property, that he must have used his whip freely or done something else which caused the horse to bolt, and that in so doing he had acted without reasonable care and had thus caused the animal's death. The Court accordingly decreed the claim. Held, by EDGE, C.J., that if the burden of proof was originally upon the defendant, it was shifted by the explanation which he gave and which was neither contradicated nor primâ facie improbable; and that the decree of the lower Court, being unsupported by any proof, and based on speculation and assumption, was one which that Court had no jurisdiction to pass, and should consequently be set aside in revision under s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. Per BRODHURST, J., that as the decree was not only unsupported by proof but opposed to the evidence on the record, the lower Court had "acted in the exercise of its jurisdiction illegally" within the meaning of s. 622. Collins v. Bennett, 46 New York Rep.; Byrne v. Boadle, 2 H. & C. 722; Gee v. *Metropolitan Railway Company, L. They claim in this suit for themselves and the other fishermen of their village the exclusive right of fishing in the Nagothna Creek between high and low-water marks, within certain limits set forth in the plaint, and, under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act, 1 of 1877, they sought to recover possession of that right from the defendants, who, they alleged, had dispossessed them within six months before this suit was filed. The Subordinate Judge held that they had established their right, and made an order directing that possession should be restored to them. The defendants then applied to the High Court under its extraordinary jurisdiction, contending that the order made by the first Court was beyond its jurisdiction, the right of fishing not being immoveable property within the meaning of that section. Held, that the first Court did not act without jurisdiction, the right claim coming within the denomination of immoveable property. It was contended by the defendants that the plaintiffs, who claimed on behalf of other fishermen of the village, should have proceeded under s. 30 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Held, that the objection was a good one; but, inasmuch as it was still open to the defendants to establish their right by a regular suit, the irregularity in the present suit was not such as to call for the exercise of the powers of the High Court under s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. No order under s. 25 transferring the case to the Subordinate Judge was on the record, nor was it otherwise shown how he obtained jurisdiction to deal with it. Held, that the High Court, in the exercise of its revisional powers under s. 622 of the Code, should not presume that the Subordinate Judge had taken up the case without jurisdiction: that the proper remedy of the petitioner was an application under s. 103, read with s. 647, or a suit under s. 283, and that the High Court should not interfere in revision. 117. ——— Limitation—High Court's revisional powers—Material irregularity. On the 29th November 1886 this suit was filed on a bond dated the 29th November 1881, payable in two years. The Subordinate Judge dismissed it as time-barred, being of opinion that the cause of action had accrued on the 28th November 1883. Against this decision the plaintiff applied to the High Court under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). Held, reversing the decision of the Subordinate Judge, that the suit was not barred by time, the cause of action having accrued on the 29th November 1883, that is, the day of the month corresponding with the day on which the bond was dated. Held, further, that, the decision of the Subordinate Judge being palpably wrong and illegal, the High Court had jurisdiction to exercise its revisional powers under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). Where a Court, with a full and correct apprehension of the questions which it is necessary for it to decide in any case, errs, in law or in fact, in its decision of any such question with which it has jurisdiction to deal, its errors can only be corrected in due course of appeal; and where no appeal is permissible, there is no remedy under s. 622 of the Code or under the provisions of s. 15 of Stat. 24 and 25 Vict., c. 104, whatever remedy there may be, in the Bombay Presidency, under cl. 2 of s. 5 of Regulation II of 1827. But it is otherwise in any case where the Court, having a mistaken and wrong apprehension of the questions at issue proceeds to determine an issue, which does not really arise in the case, and bases its decision of the case on its determination of that issue. If it does so, it acts with material irregularity in the exercise of its jurisdiction. VENKUBAI v. LAKSHMAN VENKOBA KHOT

138. ——— Discretion of Court in exercising revisional powers—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 623 et seq.—Review of judgment granted on ground not allowed by s. 629. A Munsif granted a review of judgment on a ground which was no ground in law for granting a review, but his order in review had the effect of making the decree in the suit a right decree instead of a wrong decree. The District Judge allowed an appeal from that order on grounds which, having regard to s. 629 of the Code of Civil Procedure, were not open to him. On an application for revision of the Judge's appellate order, it was held that the proper course was to set aside only the District Judge's order and to leave standing the order of the Munsif granting a review of judgment, which order, though wrong in principle, was, it appeared, right in its results. 139. ——— Land Acquisition Act (X of 1870), ss. 3, 24, and 25—Exercise of jurisdiction by Judge under the Act—"Material irregularity"—Mistake in regard to the principle of calculation of the value of the land acquired. If a Judge and assessors, sitting to determine the amount of compensation to be awarded for land acquired under the Land Acquisition Act of 1870, have refused to take into consideration any of the matters prescribed by s. 24 of that Act, or have improperly taken into consideration any of the matters prohibited by s. 25 thereof, such procedure would amount to material irregularity in the exercise of their jurisdiction, and would justify the intervention of the High Court under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Having regard to the definition of "land" contained in s. 3 of Act X of 1876, there is nothing illegal in a Judge taking into account the value of works of the land which make it suitable for a salt factory; and even if, in making his estimate of the market value of the land, he took into consideration the price paid for neighbouring pans, and was in error in so doing, his mistake would be only one concerning the principles of valuation, and not an irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction. 4. CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1882, S. 622—contd.

When a Court can be said "to have acted in the exercise of its jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity." A District Judge disposed of some suits on a point taken by himself on appeal, without affording the parties an opportunity of proving what was necessary to meet the point, and admitted other appeals after they had become time-barred. Held, by the majority of the Full Bench, that where a Subordinate Court, having applied its mind to a question of law or procedure, arrives at an erroneous decision, such decision is not by itself any ground for the exercise by a High Court of the powers given by s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh, I. L. R. 11 Calc. 6, followed. Held, further, (BEST and DAVIS, JJ., dissenting), that the case contemplated by the words "act . . . . illegally or with material irregularity" in s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure is that of a perverse decision on a question of law or procedure, a decision being perverse where it is a conscious departure from some rule of law or procedure. Per BEST, J.—The words in question of s. 622 of the Code are applicable to illegalities or irregularities which are the result merely of ignorance of law or carelessness, and the disposal of a suit on a point taken by the Court itself on appeal without affording the parties an opportunity of proving what is necessary to meet the point, is an irregularity in procedure within the meaning of s. 622; and that the inadvertent admission of an appeal that is time-barred is an illegality in procedure within the meaning of that section. Per DAVIES, J.—The clause of s. 622 in question is applicable only to errors of procedure, and it is not in every case that the High Court would, in the exercise of the discretionary power granted it by the section, interfere in revision. The interference would be confined to cases where the illegality or irregularity was such as had occasioned or might occasion a substantial failure of justice, as in the present case. 141. ——— Error of procedure—Mode of applying powers of superintendence of Court under s. 622. The words "acting with material irregularity" in the third clause of s. 622, Civil Procedure Code, imply only the committing of an error of procedure, but "acting illegally" does not mean the same thing. The third clause of s. 622, Civil Procedure Code, is intended to authorize the High Court to interfere and correct gross and palpable errors of subordinate Courts so as to prevent grave injustice in non-appealable cases, and the question whether any case comes under the clause has to be determined with reference to the grossness and palpableness of the error complained of, and to the gravity of the injustice resulting from it. Kristamma Naidu v. *Chapa Naidu, I. (a), Civil Procedure Code, the Court of Appeal, acting under s. 588, cl. (6), Civil Procedure Code, set aside such order and directed the original Court to hear the cause:—Held, that the High Court had no jurisdiction to interfere with such appellate order under s. 622, Civil Procedure Code, for it could not be said that the lower Appellate Court acted in the exercise of its jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity simply because its decision as to the jurisdiction of the first Court to entertain the suit was erroneous in law. Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh, I. L. R. 11 Calc. 6: 11 I. A. 237; Birj Mohan Thakur v. Ray Uma Nath Chowdhry, I. L. R. 20 Calc. 8: 19 I. A. 154; Jugobundhu Pattuck v. Jadu Ghose, I. L. R. 17 Mad. 410, referred to. Held, per BANERJEE, J.—The scope of the third clause of s. 622, Civil Procedure Code, is not limited merely to cases of material irregularity of procedure, for the third clause not only refers to cases, where a Court has acted with material irregularity but also to those in which it has acted illegally. The clause is evidently intended to authorize the High Courts to interfere and correct gross and palpable error of subordinate Courts, so as to prevent grave injustice in non-appealable cases. Bhagwan Ramanuj v. *Khetter Moni Dassi, I. 144. ——— Error in distribution of proceeds of sale in execution of decree—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 295—Jurisdiction—Powers of revision by High Court. An application by a decree-holder under s. 295 for rateable distribution was refused by the Judge in the lower Court on the grounds (i) that the decree was not a bonâ fide one; (ii) that the decree in favour of the petitioner, which was sent down by the High Court for execution to his Court, was sent down by the High Court with direction merely to hold under attachment the property of the judgment-debtor, but not to proceed to sell the property until further instructions were received, and the petitioner could not be regarded as one who had applied for execution of decree within the meaning of s. 295; and (iii) that the petitioner had not obtained satisfaction of her decree in whole or in part of any of the other districts to which her decree had been simultaneously sent for execution. Held, per MACLEAN, C.J., that, as the Court below had jurisdiction under s. 295, Civil Procedure Code, to divide the assets, and if, with a view to the division of assets, he had made a mistake in the principle upon which they ought to have been divided, such an error was one of law merely, and not subject to review under s. 622, Civil Procedure Code. Held, further, that a mere mistake in law by a lower Court does not bring a case under s. 622, Civil Procedure Code. Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh, I. L. R. 11 Calc. 6, followed. Birj Mohun Thakur v. Rai Uma Nath Chowdhry, I. L. R. 20 Calc. 8, referred to. Held, per BANERJEE, J., that the third clause of s. 622, viz., "acted illegally or with material irregularity," is not limited to cases of procedure only. This clause is intended to empower the High Court to interfere in non-appealable cases with orders or decisions of lower Courts where the orders or decisions are vitiated by an error which is so gross and palpable, and which has led to injustice so grave and manifest that it is desirable that the High Court should interfere with them. Held, that, assuming that the lower Court had no jurisdiction to enter into the question of the bonâ fides of the decree, the order of the lower Court might stand upon the other two grounds, for the error, if any, does not come within the scope of this clause and having regard to the fact that s. 295, Civil Procedure Code, provides a remedy by a regular suit, the case is not one which, so far as the decision rests upon the second and third reasons, can be said to come within the scope of the third clause of s. 622, Civil Procedure Code. Amir Hassan Khan v. *Sheo Baksh Sing, I. area. The judgment-debtors possessed property in those villages over and above that sought to be sold. The decree-holder purchased the property so sold and applied for possession thereof, but in their application they inserted a detail of the specific shares of property held by the several judgment-debtors over which they prayed for possession. The Court executing the decree went into the question of the specification of shares and ordered possession to be delivered over certain specific shares of the several judgment-debtors. Held, that, under the circumstances described above, the High Court would interfere in revision under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, although it was possible that the matters complained of might be grounds for a separate suit. Guise v. Jaisraj, I. Per FARRAN, C.J.—When Courts in the exercise of their judicial functions decide that a document is inadmissible in evidence, having exercised their judgment upon the questions of its admissibility or inadmissibility, we have no jurisdiction to interfere in the matter under s. 622. What the Courts do in such a case, assuming the document tendered to be erroneously rejected, is to make a mistake upon a question of law, and it does not appear to me to be material whether the mistake in law is made during the hearing of the case or in the final decision. A mere error in law is not, I think, an illegality or a material irregularity within the meaning of s. 622 of the Code. MADHABRAV GANESHPANT DYE v. GULABBHAI LAKABHAI . . I. L. R. 23 Bom. 177

The plaintiff moved the High Court under s. 622, Civil Procedure Code, on the ground that, under s. 34, sub-s. (3), of the Stamp Act, the document, although unstamped, was admissible in the lower Appellate Court, inasmuch as the first Court admitted the same. Held, by MACLEAN, C.J., that s. 622, Civil Procedure Code, did not apply. That an error of law does not amount to acting, in the exercise of jurisdiction, N. 617,* referred to. Held by BANERJEE, J., that the error of the lower Appellate Court in rejecting the document, admitted by the first Court, as not stamped, in contravention of s. 34 of Act I of 1879, comes within that part of s. 622, Civil Procedure Code, which speaks of a Court's acting with material irregularity in the exercise of its jurisdiction. That the rejection of the document is more in the nature of a materially irregular act than an erroneous decision on a point of law. The case of Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh, I. L. R. 11 Calc. 6, must be taken to have settled that it is not every error of law that will come within the scope of s. 622, Civil Procedure Code, but it does not follow that no error of law, unless it is also an error of jurisdiction, can come within the operation of that section. The suit was contested by defendants 1 and 2 only, and plaintiff obtained a decree. Defendants 1 and 2 preferred an appeal to the Subordinate Judge's Court and a second appeal to the High Court, with the result that the judgment of the first Court was upheld; the other defendants, who were no parties to the appeal, applied to set aside the ex parte decree; the Munsif ordered that "the ex parte decree be set aside and the original regular suit be restored." By a later order defendants 1 and 2 were allowed to defend the suit de novo and to file fresh defences. Held, that the Munsif had no jurisdiction to set aside the decree as against defendants 1 and 2, which was not an ex parte decree and was not a decree of his Court, but that of a superior Court; and that the High Court had jurisdiction, under s. 622, Civil Procedure Code, to set aside the order of the Munsif. The Judge was bound to hold an enquiry under s. 3 before appointing a curator under s. 5. The provisions of s. 3 are mandatory, and not merely directory.

that "in cases of Mahomedans or Gentoos their inheritance and succession to lands, rents, and goods, and all matters of contract and dealing between party and party, should be determined, in cases of Mahomedans, by the laws and usages of the Mahomedans; and where the parties are Gentoos, by the laws and usages of the Gentoos, or by such laws and usages as the same would have been determined by if the suit had been brought in a native Court," and the 37th section directs that "the Court shall frame such process, and make such rules and orders for the execution of the same, in all suits, civil and criminal, to be commenced, sued, or prosecuted, within their jurisdiction, as shall be necessary for the due execution of all or any of the persons thereby committed thereto, with an especial attention to the religion, manners, and usages of the native inhabitants living within its jurisdiction, and accommodating the same to their religion, manners, and usages, and to the circumstances of the country, so far as the same can consist with the due execution of law and the attainment of substantial justice." Held, upon a construction of these sections, that as the law of the limitation is a matter of procedure and the Supreme Court at Bombay had power to frame its procedure different from the native Courts, the Court was right in allowing the plea of the English statute of limitations in an action between Hindus upon a Hindu contract, as the judgment of the Court on such plea was no determination relating to any right arising out of any contract or dealing involved in the cause of action. Semble:—The mere allegation in the plaint that the parties are Hindus is a sufficient averment of the fact to raise an objection to the cause being decided by the English law of limitations. Where, therefore, a party resident at Benares was indicted with others before the Supreme Court for a conspiracy in procuring the prosecutor to be arrested in a fictitious action at law, and the instructions for the arrest were proved to the satisfaction of the jury to have originated with the appellant, it was held by the Judicial Committee that the offence having been completed within the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court at Calcutta, that Court had rightly assumed jurisdiction over the parties privy to it, though from the slight nature of the evidence they directed a new trial. 5. ——— Extent of liability—Security bond given for faithful discharge of duties by moharrir —Misconduct other than misappropriation. The defendant executed a bond which, after reciting that the President of the Allahabad Municipal Committee required security to the extent of R100 from Sheikh Akbur Ali, mohurrir in the Ocrtoi Department, for the honest and faithful discharge of his duties to Government, went on to say that the defendant of his own free will and pleasure pledged a certain dwelling house in lieu of security for the mohurrir, and to promise that, if any sort of embezzlement or misappropriation was proved against the mohurrir in Court, the property might be seized. There was a proviso that, if he deposited R100, the money, and not the property, would be liable; if he failed to deposit the money, the property was to be liable for the payment of the amount of the security. The mohurrir fraudulently allowed certain goods to pass the choonghee without payment of duty, whereby, he caused the Municipality a loss of R8. He was convicted under s. 161 of the Penal Code. The plaintiff sued to recover the amount of the security. Held, that the defendant could only be liable under the bond for sums shown to have been misappropriated, and that he could not be held liable for losses which accrued to the Municipality from misconduct on the part of the mohurrir other than misappropriation; and that in any case he could only be liable for the actual damage sustained by the Municipality. 6. ——— Withdrawal of security placed with sureties to indemnify co-sureties. Where a surety, without taking precautions to see to its proper application, permits the party for whom he is surety to get possession of money, which by an arrangement with that party and the co-sureties had been placed in his (the surety's) hands for the purpose of indemnifying the co-sureties, he loses his remedy against the co-sureties to the extent of the security thus allowed to be withdrawn. Where money is permitted to remain in the hands of sureties in order to its being applied to the purpose to secure which they become sureties, it is the duty of each as between himself and co-sureties to see that the money is not misapplied. Before the expiration of that time the judgment-debtor died. The decree-holder thereupon obtained an order enforcing the decree as against the surety. Held, that the order was illegal. Such officer thereupon applied to the District Judge to postpone the sale, stating that such surety was willing to pay the amount of the decree by instalments within one year, and forwarding such bond. The District Judge ordered the sale to be postponed and the papers to be sent to the Munsif who had made the decree and ordered the sale of the property. The Munsif made no order regarding the security, but merely made an order that the amount of the decree should be paid by instalments within one year. The judgment-debtor did not pay the amount of the decree within the time fixed and the decree-holder therefore applied for execution of the decree against such surety. Held, that, inasmuch as the decree-holder had not been a party to the proceedings of the sale-officer or of the District Judge, and as the parties had not appeared before the Munsif, and as such surety had not of decree—Execution against surety—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 253, 545, 546. S. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code contemplates a suit pending at the time security is given for performance of the decree, and does not apply to a case where the litigation in the Courts of first instance and of first appeal has ended, and no second appeal had been instituted in the High Court when security is given. The holder of a decree affirmed on appeal by the District Court took out execution to recover costs awarded. Costs were deposited by the judgment-debtor and paid to the decree-holder and a surety gave a bond by which he undertook to refund the amount to the judgment-debtor in the event of the latter succeeding in appeal to the High Court and of the decree-holder failing to repay him. The judgment-debtor subsequently filed an appeal to the High Court and was successful, and he then applied in the execution department to recover the amount from the surety. Held, that the Court executing the High Court's decree had no jurisdiction to execute it against the surety. 21. _____ Civil Procedure Code, ss. 253 and 583—Stay of execution of decree appealed against on giving security—Surety for fulfilment of appellate decree—His liability—Mode of enforcing it—Execution-proceedings—Separate suit. Under Act VIII of 1859 and the supplemental Act XXIII of 1861, the ordinary mode of enforcing payment by a surety was by summary process in execution, not by means of a separate suit. This was so equally whether the security had been taken in the course of the original suit or of the appeal. The present Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) makes no alteration in the law on this subject. Reading s. 253 with s. 583 of Act XIV of 1882, it is clear that the Court has the power to proceed against a person who has become a surety under s. 546, for the fulfilment of the decree in appeal, in the same way as against a surety who has become liable under s. 253 to satisfy a decree of a Court of first instance. Subsequently to the passing of Act VII of 1888 the decree-holder made a fresh application for such execution under s. 46 of that Act. The Court, after referring to s. 6 of the General Clauses Act, rejected the application, on the ground that proceedings against the surety had been commenced before Act VII of 1888 had come into force. Held, on appeal, that the application should have been allowed. Under their surety-bonds they were bound, in default, "to pay the said Court such sum as the said Court may adjudge against the said defendant." The Court of first instance passed a decree in the plaintiff's favour for R229-14-0. Against this decree both parties appealed to the District Court. In that Court the defendant obtained an order for stay of execution of the original decree on his furnishing security, under s. 545, "for the due performance of such decree or order as may ultimately be binding on him." He accordingly gave fresh security. The Appellate Court passed a decree in plaintiff's favour for R800 and costs. Thereupon the decree-holder sought to enforce the apppellate decree against the sureties A and B under s. 253 of the Civil Procedure Code. The sureties contended, first, that the original decree having merged in the appellate decree, they were not liable at all under their bond which related only to the decree of the Court of first instance; secondly, that they were responsible only for so much as was by the original decree adjudged against the defendant; and, thirdly, that their original liability had been extinguished by reason of execution having been stayed without their assent by the Appellate Court on defendant's furnishing a fresh security. Held, that the liability of the sureties could not properly be extended beyond the amount, including costs, awarded to the plaintiff by the Court of first instance. That and no other sum was such "as the said Court may adjudge against the said defendant." The security given to the Court of first instance was for the satisfaction of its decree, not the possible decree of a higher Court. If an appeal was made, it was left to the Appellate Court to regulate the terms on which it would take security for the execution of its own decree. Held, also, that, so soon as the

decree of the Court of first instance was made, the liability of the securities was fully incurred, and they were severally bound to place at the disposal of the said Court, when required, the property specified in their bond, or, in default, to pay such sum as the said Court should adjudge against the defendant. This liability, having been incurred was not extinguished by the fact that an appeal had been brought against the decree. If the amount adjudged by the decree was reduced in appeal, their liability would be diminished to a like extent; or, if the decree was reversed, their liability did not cease, because the decree of the first Court merged in that of the appellate Court. 9. ——— Limitation—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 134 and 137—Creditor allowing remedy against principal debtor to become barred by limitation. "Mere forbearance on the part of the creditor to sue the principal debtor or to enforce any other remedy against him," as these words are used in s. 137 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, indicate a forbearance, for a more or less limited period, to exercise a subsisting right. The section does not cover such forbearance as results in the remedy of the creditor against the principal debtor becoming barred by limitation. Hence, where a judgment-creditor allowed his judgment-debtor to enter into an agreement for the satisfaction of his decree by instalments, certain persons becoming sureties for the due payment of such instalments, and the judgment-debtor, having made default in payment of the instalments, delayed taking out execution of the decree until execution had become time-barred, it was held that the creditor had forfeited his remedy against the sureties also. Hazari Lal v. R. sued upon the last bond and obtained a decree for a large sum of money against the heirs of U. S. The defendants appealed to the High Court, but, pending the appeal, entered into a compromise with the plaintiff on the 2nd of January 1900, whereby they agreed to pay to the plaintiff the sum of R51,000 and costs of the High Court. Upon the 5th of November 1902, the heirs of *U. In his bill for attorney and client's costs, K claimed extra payment for the additional and unusual work incurred by him: Held, in review of taxation, that K was entitled to be separately remunerated for the special work done by him, as it was in fact a charge for work done which would not ordinarily fall upon a solicitor in the preparation of the brief. 1. ——— Validity of tender—Contract Act, s. 38—Tender of interest on mortgage-debt. Under a mortgage-deed taken to secure the repayment within three years of a sum of R16,000 advanced by the plaintiff, with interest at 15 per cent. from the 2nd July 1874, the date of the mortgage, it was stipulated that interest should be paid every six months, but that, if a year's interest should be unpaid, then the whole amount due for principal and interest should become payable at once ; and also that the mortgagor might after payment of interest, pay towards satisfaction of the principal any sum not less than R1,000. The first year's interest was allowed to get into arrear, but in September 1875 the defendant went to the plaintiff with R19,000, a greater sum than was due for principal and interest, and told him to repay himself from that sum. The offer was refused, and the plaintiff thereupon brought a suit on the 9th July 1877 for R16,000, with interest from the date of the mortgage to the date of the suit and subsequent interest. Held, that the tender made by the defendant, although not valid according to English law, was valid under s. 38 of the Contract Act. Per WILSON, J.—S. 38 of the Contract Act substantially requires that there should be a genuine and unconditional offer, in case of payment, to pay unconditionally at a proper place, made by a person in a position to pay. TENDER—contd.

2. ——— Offer by letter to pay debt. A mere offer by a debtor by letter to pay an amount cannot be treated as a tender either in law or in equity. In order to stop interest, a strict tender should be proved. KAMAYA NAIK v. DEVAPA RUDRA NAIK . I. L. R. 22 Bom. 440

3. ——— Unconditional tender—Costs. In a suit to recover R1,323-15-6, the balance of the price of goods sold, on which an account had been come to between the parties, it appeared that the defendant had tendered before suit a sum of R1,043-5, stating in the letter of tender that the sum so tendered was the only sum due. At the trial the plaintiff obtained a decree for the full amount claimed by him. Held, both in the Court below and on appeal, that the tender was bad, and therefore the plaintiffs were entitled to their costs. Held, per KENNEDY, J., that the tender was bad, being a tender of part of an entire debt. Held, per GARTH, C. J. (MARKBY, J., concurring), that the tender was also bad, as the plaintiffs could not have accepted the sum tendered without giving up the remainder of their claim. B., 365*, that the tender of only a part of a debt must be treated as if it had never been made, applies only where the party making the tender admits more to be due than is tendered. A plea of tender before action must be accompanied by a payment into Court after action, otherwise the tender is ineffectual. ABDUL RAHMAN v. NOOR MAHOMED . . . I. L. R. 16 Bom. 141

5. ——— Agent—Cheque in payment of debt for rent—Suit for rent—Costs. The landlord of a house through his agent sent in rent-bills to his lessee. tendered it to the landlord's attorney, who refused to accept, and the money was returned to the lessee's attorney. Held, in a suit for the rent, that, under the circumstances, the tender amounted to payment. Held, further, that although, as a general rule, the amount of a tender not accepted ought to be paid into Court in order to entitle the defendant to costs, yet that, as the tender in this case amounted to payment, the defendant was entitled to have the suit dismissed with costs. The predecessor of the appellant defendant had full notice of the thak proceedings, and he objected to the boundary lines as laid between his and the plaintiff's estate, but the objection was disallowed. The defendant produced a survey map of 1855-56 of the district, which contained his estate, in support of his case, but he did not produce any thakbust map of the same year, and there was no evidence to support the accuracy of the survey map. Held, that the evidentiary value of the thakbust map, and the survey map produced on behalf of the plaintiff, was greater than that of the survey map produced on behalf of the defendant. Jagadindra Nath Roy v. *Secretary of State for India, I. On his return to his family, he lived in commensality with it, but he did not treat such property as joint family property, but as his own property. Held, that such property was his sole property, and his brother was not a joint owner of it, and could properly be convicted of theft in respect of it. It is irregular to convict and punish a person for abetment of theft, and at the same time to convict and punish him for receiving the stolen property. EMPRESS v. SITA RAM RAI . I. L. 10. ——— Bonâ fide belief as to title—Dispute as to possession of land—Cutting and carrying away crops sown by another—Facts constituting theft—Dishonest intention—Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898), ss. 429 and 439. An accused person alleged and claimed that certain paddy was grown upon his jote, and that he cut and removed it as a matter of right and in an assertion of a bonâ fide claim to the land. It was admitted by the complainant who also claimed the paddy and the land, that there had been a boundary dispute between his landlord and the landlord of the accused. The accused was convicted in a summary trial of the theft of the paddy. In an application for revision and to set aside the conviction:—Held per PRINSEP, J., declining to interfere, that, if the complainant's bargadars had grown the crops as found and nevertheless the accused cut and carried them off, there could be no bonâ fide belief that he was entitled to do so, to justify his action in regard to the complainant. With the fact found that possession was with the complainant by the growing by him of the crops cut by the accused, the accused was without justification in thus taking the law into his hands, even if he was entitled to hold the lands, because he was not in actual possession of them. Per STEVENS, J., —The findings of the lower Court taken as a whole amounted to a finding that the accused acted malâ fides, and the mere fact that he brought some witnesses to speak to his long possession of the land, and the cultivation of the crops by him, could not be taken as showing that a bonâ fide dispute as to title existed between the complainant and himself. To constitute theft, it is sufficient if property is removed against his wish from the custody of a person who has an apparent title or even a colour of right to such property. In the present case the complainant had an apparent title as tenant of the land, together with long possession, and he had on the strength of that apparent title and long possession raised the crops which the accused removed. The application should be dismissed. Queen-Empress v. Gangaram Santram, I. L. R. 9 Bom. 135, referred to. Per STANLEY, J.,(contra).—That the evidence as well for the prosecution as for the defence conclusively established that there was a bonâ fide dispute as to the title to the land upon which the paddy was sown. Once this was sown, the criminal charge failed. The fact, if it be the fact, that the paddy was sown by the complainant, would not give him the property in the crop, if it were sown on the land of the accused. If the land was the land of the accused, it was an act of trespass on the part of the complainant and to sow it with paddy, and the complainant had no right to complain if the accused resented his act of aggression by cutting and removing the crop. A dishonest intent is a necessary ingredient in the offence of theft. No such intention has been found on the part of the accused. The conviction and sentence should be set aside. At the trial they alleged that the land on which the paddy was grown was theirs, and that the crop was sown by one of their tenants, and not by the complainant. A suit by the complainant's landlord against some of the accused was then pending in a Civil Court. Held, that whatever might be the legal claim of the accused in respect of the land on which the paddy was sown, and they had never claimed the crop as belonging to them, they did not act in good faith believing the crop to be their own property, and were therefore guilty of the offences under ss. 143 and 379. Abdool Biswas v. Khator Mondal, 3 C. W. N. 332, distinguished. JAGAT CHANDRA ROY v. RAKHAL CHANDRA ROY . . . . . 4 C. W. N. 190

15. ——— Removal of family jewels by wife and persons coming to commit adultery with her. Two persons were committed for trial, the first prisoner for adultery, enticing away a married woman, and theft, and the second prisoner for abetment of the enticing away and theft. The first prisoner was acquitted of the charges of adultery and enticing away. The case for the prosecution was that the prosecutor's wife left her husband's house in company with the first prisoner, and that previous to her departure she, by means of false keys, supplied to her by the second prisoner, opened the room where the family jewels and money were kept and removed them. The jewels were deposited with the second prisoner for safe custody. Part of the money was handed to the first prisoner. Held, that notwithstanding the acquittal, the prisoners were not entitled to be discharged without trial on the charge of theft. 16 ——— and s. 114—Forcibly carrying off crop—Want of consent of owner. Where a Court finds that parties came with a number of armed men, and carried off a crop, the finding amounts to that of a forcible carrying off without the consent of the owner. The accused were not the defaulters, the demand having been made upon certain other persons in whose names the pottahs stood as the registered proprietors. The accused were acquitted. Held, that the acquittal was wrong in the absence of a finding whether or not the accused were aware of the distraint, and dishonestly removed the crops with such knowledge, on the ground that, under s. 8 of the Madras Rent Recovery Act, they were entitled to notice of the distraint which had not been served on them. 18. ——— Person acting under ill-founded claim of right. A person acting under a claim of right (however ill-founded such claim may be) is not guilty of theft by asserting it. QUEEN v. RAM CHURN SINGH . 7 W. R. Cr. 57

19. ——— Removing a thing with the object of causing trouble to the owner—Wrongful loss. The accused, who was charged by his master with having committed theft of a box, stated that he had removed the box and left it concealed in the cowshed to give a lesson to his master. The Sessions Judge in his charge to the jury said: "If the jury find that the accused removed the box to put the owner to trouble, that is causing wrongful loss to the owner, and the act is theft;" and the jury returned a verdict of guilty finding "that the taking was with the intention of putting the owner to trouble." Held, that the above charge and verdict were based on an erroneous view of the law. It cannot be said that removing a thing to put the owner to trouble is necessarily and in every case causing "wrongful loss." NABI BAKSH v. QUEEN-EMPRESS I. L. R. 25 Calc. 416 2 C. W. N. 347

20. ——— Dishonest intention—Wrongful gain—Wrongful loss. A charge of theft will lie under s. 378 of the Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) even where there is no intention to assume entire dominion over the property taken, or to retain it permanently. When a person takes another man's property, believing under a mistake of fact and in ignorance of law that he has a right to take it, he is not guilty of theft, because there is no dishonest intention, even though he may cause wrongful loss within the meaning of the Penal Code. The accused was the brother of a farmer or contractor of a public ferry on the Tadri river. He seized a boat belonging to the complainant while conveying passengers across the creek which flows into the river at a point within three miles from the public ferry. His intention was apparently to compel persons who had to cross the creek to use the ferry in the absence of the complainant's boat, and thereby increase his brother's income derived from fees to be paid by passengers crossing the creek. The accused had no reason to believe that he was justified in seizing the boat. Held, that the accused was guilty of theft, though it was not his intention to convert the boat to his own use, or deprive the complainant permanently of its possession. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. NAGAPPA

I. L. R. 15 Bom. 344

21. ——— Absence of dishonest intent—Cutting paddy under claim of right. The accused cut and removed paddy from certain land alleging that the land and paddy belonged to his uncle. He cited witnesses in support of his story, and also produced a deed of compromise in support of title. The Magistrate disbelieved the defence witnesses, and found that the land and paddy belonged to the complainant, and that the deed related to other land, but there was nothing in his judgment to show that the petitioner did not bonâ fide believe that the paddy belonged to his uncle. Held, that the findings did not support the conviction for theft. To constitute the offence, it was necessary that the taking away of the paddy should have been done dishonestly, i.e., with the knowledge that it belonged to the complainant and not to his uncle. ABDOOL BISWAS v. KHATER MONDAL . . . . . 3 C. W. N. 332

22. ——— and s. 143—Unlawful assembly and theft—Property in crop grown on another's land on contract to pay latter a certain sum for the crop when grown—Removal of such crop by owner of land. An indigo planter agreed with some cultivators that the former would grow rice on their land at his own expense and take the whole crop paying them R16 for each bigha. The owners of the land cut and carried away the crop so grown. Held, that on the agreement the crop remained the property of the owners of the land which the factory merely agreed to purchase, and that a removal of the crop did not constitute theft, but merely a breach of contract remediable in damages. As the acts did not amount to theft, which was said to be the common object of the accused, conviction for being members of an unlawful assembly could not stand. 23. ——— Removal of debtor's property by the creditor—Penal Code as drafted in 1837, s. 363. With a view to coerce the complainant to pay a sum of R14, which he owed to the accused, three head of cattle worth R60 were removed from the complainant's homestead under the order of the accused. Held, that the offence of theft was not committed by the accused. The illustration of s. 378 of the Penal Code indicate that it was the intention of the Legislature that, in order to have committed theft within the meaning of the section, the taker must have taken the thing with intention of keeping it himself, or disposing of it for his own benefit or in some way which would compel the owner to pay him money which he did not owe him in order to regain his property. The words "in order to take dishonestly any moveable property" in the above section, read with s. 23 and s. 24 of the Penal Code, mean "with the intention of gaining by unlawful means property to which he is not legally entitled." "To gain property

It was found that the tank in question was not enclosed on all sides, and was dependent on the overflow of a neighbouring channel which was connected with flowing streams for its supply of fish; that the fish were not reared and preserved in the tank, and that the occurrence complained of took place at a time when the floods were high and the tank was connected with the streams, so that the fish could leave it at pleasure. Held, that the fish were ferœ naturæ and not in "the possession of" the complainant, and consequently no offence had been committed. Held, further, that, had the fish been taken at a time when they were restrained of their natural liberty, and were liable to be taken at the pleasure of the owner of the tank, the conviction would have been upheld. *In the matter of the petition of Madhab Hari, I. 1. _____ Rule in Police Code, effect of—Assault to deter public servant from discharge of his duty—Right of private defence—Penal Code (Act XLVI of 1860), ss. 99, 351 and 353. —A rule in the Police Code, to the effect that when any surveillé is at home, proof of his presence can be secured by taking a thumb impression on the report, does not impose any obligation on the surveillé to give the thumb impression ; and he cannot be forced to do so. Before an act can amount to an assault, under s. 351 of the Penal Code, it is necessary that a gesture or preparation should be made by a person which would cause another to apprehend that the person was about to use criminal force to him then and there. A preparation taken with words which would cause him to apprehend that criminal force would be used to him, if he persisted in a particular course of conduct, does not amount to an assault. Where a surveillé on a domiciliary visit being paid to him by a police officer, refused to allow his thumb impression to be taken, and, on the officer attempting to take it, produced a lathi, saying he would not allow the impression to be taken, and, if anyone asked for it, he would break his head : Held, that the act of the surveillé did not amount to an assault, and that his conviction under s. 353 of the Penal Code should be set aside. Held, further, that, if his act had in itself amounted to an offence, s. 99 of the Penal Code would apply. Per CURIAM: The Courts in British India have no jurisdiction to decide the question as to who is entitled to succeed to the Raj of a foreign sovereign State. Where a suit was brought ostensibly for a declaration in regard to rights to immoveable property within British territory belonging to a foreign soveriegn, but with the real object of setting aside the appointment by such sovereign of his son as his immediate successor:—Held, that the Court had no jurisdiction to go into the question of the validity of such appointment. A person cannot sue for a declaration of his right, unless he has an existing right, and a mere contingent right, which may never ripen into an actual existing right is not sufficient to ground an action for such a declaration. A negative declaration that the defendant had no right on the ground amongst others that the defendant was illegitimate was, in the Court's discretions, refused, especially as the Raja, who was deepy interested in the question, was not made a party the suit having been instituted against the son. Neel Kristo Deb Burmono v. *Beer Chunder Thakoor, 12 Moo. The judge found that the estate was really let out in ijara to the plaintiff by the defendant, who had recovered rents and granted him receipts on account of the ijara mehal :—Held, that this was a complete finding in favour of the plaintiff's title, and that it was not necessary for him to sue for the pottah which had been wrongfully denied him by defendant. awarded. At and before the time of the Government taking such possession, the zamindar of Yettiapooram was in possession of certain lands adjacent to, and taken as a party of, the lands in dispute. The lands remained under attachment by Government for a period of nearly twenty years, no steps having been taken regarding them till the year 1855, when the zamindar of Yettiapooram brought a suit against the Collector of Madura and the zamindar of Ramnand to recover possession of the land so formerly occupied by him, and for the mesne profits thereof while in the possession of the Government. Although no clear title in this suit was proved by either zaminder, it was held by the Courts in India, and affirmed on appeal by the Judicial Committee, that the fact of possession of the lands by the zamindar of Yettiapooram before and at the time of the attachment by Government was, under the circumstances, evidence of title, and the Government was ordered to restore the lands to him. The lower Appellate Court agreed with the first finding, but further found that there was sufficient evidence of possession to show that both plots were parcels of the jammai:—Held, reversing the decision of Field, J., that on second appeal the High Court was not entitled to question the sufficiency of that evidence; and, further, that one plot having been found to be parcel of the jammai, it was sufficient to give evidence of possession and ownership to prove that the other plot was also parcel. Dadabhai Narsidas v. *Sub-Collector of Broach, 7 Bom., A. was all that could be resorted to as the ultimate test of right. The plaintiff relied on limitation. She asserted more than twelve years' adverse possession by having settled tenants on the disputed ground. To entitle her, it was necessary for her, the burden of proof being upon her, to prove that she had held a possession adequate in continuity, in publicity, and in extent of area. Upon all these points her case was deficient, and therefore her claim failed. It was also in evidence, which was the more substantial, that the defendant had occupied during that period a part of the land by tenants; and this, as proof of possession on his part, applied not only to the plots actually tenanted under him, but was contradictory to the whole theory of the plaintiffs' claim. 27. _____ Ownership, evidence of—Evidence of titles contested between rival purchasers—Benami transaction—Declaratory decree, suit for. Under the Land Registration Act (Bengal Act VII of 1876), registration of ownership was refused on the application of two rival purchasers of the same property, and a reference concering them was made to the High Court under s. 55. The one purchaser then sued the other claiming a decree declaratory of this title, under conveyances made to him in 1890 by a Mahomedan widow, since deceased, and by assignees and lessees from her of parts of her interest in the property. He alleged that a hiba-bilewaz, executed by her in 1858 to her son-in-law for no substantial consideration, was nothing more than a benami transfer, after which she had remained the owner with her former title. On that hiba, however, the defence was founded, the defendant averring that it was a real conveyance by the widow, and that through the son-in-law, from whose sons the defendant had purchased the property, the latter had obtained a good title. No actual possession was established by either of the parties. The property had been let in parcels to different tenants. Among other things disputed, it was the subject of conflicting evidence whether leases had been made in the past by the then real owner, or upon assumption of title by the adverse party. The Courts below differed in their conclusion as to which of the parties was entitled to a decree. The Judicial Committee maintained the decision of the Original Court in favour of the plaintiff. at a revenue-sale, the only evidence adduced by the plaintiff was two survey maps of the years 1846-47 and 1865-66. The lower Court gave the plaintiff a decree for only a portion of the land claimed, such portion being included in both of the maps. The remainder of the land claimed was not included in the map of 1846-47. Held, that a survey map is evidence of possession at a particular time, viz., the time at which the survey was made, and may be evidence of title, but as to whether it is sufficient evidence or not, is a question to be decided in each particular case. Held, further, that, as the two maps showed that the portion of the land decreed to the plaintiff was in his predecessor's possession at the date of both surveys—that is to say, at two periods with an interval of nearly twenty years between them—they might be sufficient evidence of title, and the decree of the lower Court was correct. Mohesh Chundra Sen v. *Juggut Chundra Sen, I. The decree-holder then brought a suit against the objector, claiming a declaration of his right to recover the amount due under his decree by enforcement of lien against the house, and that the order releasing the property from attachment should be set aside. The Courts below, holding that the deed of the sale set up by the defendant was fraudulent and collusive, decreed the claim. Held, that although the defendant was not a party to the decree obtained against the mortgagor, yet, as the basis of his title to claim the property had

31. ——————Commission of partition. Under a commission of partition issued by the Supreme Court, land in Calcutta was apportioned among the members of a family, and the allotments were confirmed by final decree in 1825. In this suit, brought in 1884, the plaintiff claimed through one of the family, a parcel of land, by reference to one of the allotments so made. The defence, which was made by setting up a title, through the widow of him who received the allotment, was not proved; but the correctness of the area allotted was also in dispute, and the Appellate Court excluded part from the decree, made by the first Court for the whole. It appeared to the Judicial Committee that there was no ground for assuming that the members of the family, who were parties to the partition suit, were under any mistake as to the family property, or that there was any error, or want of due care, on the part of the commissioners of partition, whose proceedings had been regular; nor had there been any adverse claim to any part of the allotted land. The grantee entered into and remained in possession for upwards of twelve years. Held, that the position of the grantee was not that of a lessee, and that his possession (although in its inception an act of trespass against the husband), having continued for upwards of twelve years, had perfected his title to the lands. One who holds possession on behalf of another does not, by mere denial of that other's title, make his possession adverse, so as to give himself the benefit of the statute of limitation. 38. ——————— Proof of title—Possession for period of limitation. Plaintiff, stating that he was obstructed in the cultivation of certain land which belonged to him, asked that the obstruction be removed and damages granted. The damages were disallowed, but the Civil Judge made a declaration of title in the plaintiff's favour, basing that entitlement on the statute of limitation. Held, that, where a man seeks a declaration of a title other than the possession which he has, mere possession for the period of the statute will not justify the declaration, which, allowing it to be made, ought to be based upon a finding of the title alleged by plaintiff, and not upon the existence of a possession for the period required by the statute to bar the action of another. This issue was found in favour of the plaintiffs by the first Court; and the Appellate Court, finding that the plaintiffs had been in possession for more than twelve years, concluded that, at all events, they had a title by adverse possession. On an appeal, the High Court considered that the latter decision was not upon the issue raised, the plaintiffs' claim being founded on an original title to the site of the chur, a title denied by the defendants, and remanded the suit for judgment on this issue, whereupon the Appellate Court maintained the judgment of the first Court in favour of the plaintiffs, finding on the evidence that the land belonged to the plaintiffs. Upon a second appeal the High Court reversed the decree of the Appellate Court, and dismissed the suit, on the ground that there was an entire absence of evidence as to which party was entitled at the date to which the dispute related. Held, that this was erroneous. On a question of parcel or no parcel, when possession has been established for a period, there is not an entire absence of evidence of anterior ownership, because presumitur retro. Although it was admitted that the plaintiff had held possession as shebait, and managed the property connected with the endowment for more than ten years, on the nomination of the Hindu residents of the locality, the defendants put the plaintiff to proof of his title as shebait. The lower Courts found that the plaintiff had failed to prove his title, and, holding that on this ground he had no locus standi, dismissed the suit. Held, that, as a suit to oust the plaintiff from his office would have been barred by limitation, by reason of his having held the office for a period exceeding that provided by the law of limitation, he had acquired a complete title for the purposes of any litigation connected with the affairs of the endowment, and that the suit had been wrongly dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff had failed to prove his title. 2. ——— Suit for possession of land held under superior holders. The plaintiff sued to recover possession of certain lands said to have been included in a talukh pottah given him by the zamindars, alleging that the defendants were obstructing his possession. For the defence it was averred that these lands fell within a 9 annas share which belonged to one D, and that by process of sale they became the right of other parties under whom defendants held as lessees. Held, that, notwithstanding the parties to this suit held under a superior landholder, plaintiff was entitled to have his title put in issue and determined. If the Indian Courts agree in holding that he has not done so, even though the High Court may not have attended to the depositions of material witnesses, the Judicial Committee will not disturb the decision of the High Court. He also left a will, of which he appointed R executor, and declared that "the whole of my estate, both real and personal, and the existing shop, you, R, are the proprietor of the whole." R was directed to furnish the expenses of the household and carry on the shop, and pay for religious observances, etc. The testator then left legacies to his daughters and others, but made no mention of his sons B and T. R applied for probate of the will, and a caveat was entered by B, but the opposition was withdrawn on a compromise, and the will was proved ; the compromise, however, was never carried out. son, M, and his two brothers, B and T, surviving him, and having made a will appointing T executor, and giving him the power of dealing with all the property. T applied for probate, but was opposed by M; but on 23rd May 1867 probate was granted. On 26th March 1867 B and T mortgaged a two-thirds share in the house to the defendant, and, on default in payment of the mortgage-debt, the defendant obtained a decree for payment or sale on 6th January 1868. On 17th August 1867 T mortgaged the whole house to the plaintiffs to secure payment of money borrowed to carry out A's will. The plaintiffs obtained a decree for foreclosure on 15th July 1869, and subsequently a decree for possession. In a suit brought by the plaintiffs in possession alleging that the defendant's mortgage and decree threw a cloud on their title, and that they would be injured by the sale, the plaint prayed that the defendant might be restrained by injunction from proceeding to sale, and his mortgage be brought into Court and cancelled. Held, that, to entitle them to relief, they must prove their title as well as their possession, and, on failure to do so, the suit must be dismissed. The defendants denied both plaintiff's title and possession, and set up title in themselves, and alleged that they had long been in possession. The District Judge found that plaintiff had failed to prove a title by purchase, but had shown that he had been disposed otherwise than by due course of law, by defendants, within six months prior to the institution of the suit. He considered that s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act applied, and declared plaintiff entitled to possession, but dismissed the suit in so far as it claimed to have plaintiff's title established. Held, that, inasmuch as the suit had not been brought under the special provisions of the Specific Relief Act, but was based on plaintiff's superior title, a claim to title being also set up in defence, the issue concerning title should have been tried. The suit ought to have been treated partly as a suit under s. 9 and partly as based on plaintiff's title. Ram Harak Rai v. Seodihal Joti, I. L. R. 15 All. 384, not followed. In the case of a mortgage, the title of the mortgagor will be extinguished only at the expiration of the period prescribed for the redemption of the mortgage, and, in the case of a lease, the landlord's title can be extinguished only at the expiration of the period prescribed by Art. 139 of Sch. 2. MISCELLANEOUS CASES—concld.

Donee's power of alienation to prevent gift devolving on husband. The question in this case was whether the appellant or the respondent was entitled by inheritance to a village the subject of a gift said to have been orally made by a predecessor in title of the respondent to his daughter on her marriage to the appellant in 1868, for possession of which the respondent sued. Her case was that the gift was subject to the condition that on the death of the donee without issue (which event had occurred) the village should revert to the donor and his heirs: and she relied on an ekrarnama executed by the donor in 1883, when the donee was separated from the appellant and was an inmate of her father's house, by which deed the alleged condition of the gift was recited and confirmed. The defence set up by the appellant was that the village had been given to him at the marriage for the benefit of himself and his wife, or, in the alternative, that if it was given to his wife, he took it as her heir. The Subordinate Judge found on the evidence that the appellant and respondent both failed to prove any condition attached to the gift, but that, inasmuch as it was common ground that there was a gift to the daughter, it must be presumed to have been an absolute gift, and the appellant was entitled as her heir. Held, by the Judicial Committee, that the High Court was right in reversing that decision, because, if the gift of the village were absolute in favour of the daughter, she had, on the evidence in the case, by the subsequent deed of 1883, agreed it should at her death revert to her father and his heirs. TODA GIRAS ALLOWANCE ACT (BOM. ACT VII OF 1887).

——— s. 5—Toda Giras allowance—Attachment and sale of in execution of a decree—"Money likely to become due," interpretation of—How far can the allowance be attached and sold. The plaintiff, who held a money-decree against the defendant, applied for its execution by sale of the toda giras allowance which the latter was entitled to receive periodically from the Mamlatdar's Kacheri. The specific prayer in the application was the attachment and sale of the allowance which was to become payable to the defendant during the twenty years following the application. The lower Courts held that the defendant's life interest in the toda giras allowance computed at its valuation for twenty years, could be attached and sold in execution of the decree. Held, reversing the order, that it is clear from the language of s. 5 of the Toda Giras Allowance Act (Bombay Act VII of 1887) that it is not the life interest of the judgment-debtor in a toda giras allowance, but something short of it that is allowed by the Act to be attached. The words "money likely to become due" in s. 5 of the Act must be restricted to the case where, for instance, during the lifetime of the judgment-debtor, a sum of money is directed by the Collector to be paid to him on account of a toda giras allowance not immediately but on a date subsequent to the date of the order of direction, and the judgment-debtor dies before that date; and to other cases of a similar character. XVIII of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1872. The power of levying tolls under Act VIII of 1851 is vested in the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, and is restricted to levying tolls only at the toll-bar : the establishment of a toll must be by some distinct resolution of the Government, notified in some way or other by the Government. The word "extortionately" in s. 6 of Act VIII of 1851 is not used in the same sense as it is used in the Penal Code, but as meaning an unlawful demand of toll acompanied by pressure, the pressure in this case being the exercise of the powers indicated in s. 3 of the Act by seizing the complainant's horses and carts and detaining them until the toll was paid. Where one of two co-sharers was entitled under an ekrarnama to collect the tolls of the whole market and to divide the profits with the other co-sharers at the end of the year, and the lessee of the latter attempted to collect his lessor's share independently :—Held, that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to take proceedings under s. 145 in such a case. boundary, when evidence insufficient—Second appeal —Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 584 —Error of law. When the question was in which of two adjoining villages—the boundary line between which admittedly corresponded with the boundary line between two pergunnahs —the land in dispute was included :—Held, that a Topographical Survey map of 1869, in which the boundary line between the two pergunnahs was given, was admissible in evidence under s. 36 of the Evidence Act. When pergunnah boundaries are found entered in such map the presumption is that they were so entered in pursuance of instructions received. S. 36 of the Evidence Act does not require that the authority under which a map is prepared must be authority given by Statute. Assuming that Topographical Survey maps were not prepared for revenue purposes they are official documents prepared by competent persons and with such publicity and notice to persons interested as to be admissible and valuable evidence of the state of things at the time they were made. They are not conclusive and may be shown to be wrong, but in the absence of evidence to the contrary, they may be properly judicially received in evidence as correct when made. Jagadindra Nath Roy v. *Secretary of State for India, 7 C. In cases of boundary disputes, the fact that no satisfactory evidence as to possession is obtainable does not relieve the Court of the duty of settling the boundary line on the evidence before him. Lukhi Narain Jagadav v. *Jadu Nath Deo, I. If a Magistrate seeks to justify his acts under the provisions of a Statute, he must bring himself strictly within the words thereof. When a Magistrate holds a search of a house without first recording the grounds of his belief that the owner thereof has in his possession any arms, etc., for an unlawful purpose and that such owner cannot be left in possession of such arms, etc., without danger to public peace in the way provided for in s. 25 of the Indian Arms Act (XI of 1878) he cannot justify the search under that Act. If there are no proceedings pending before him, a Magistrate cannot be said to be acting as a "Court" within the meaning of s. 94 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898), and cannot, therefore, direct a search to be made in his presence pursuant to s. 105 of that Code. S. 165 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898) does not authorise a search for the purpose of discovering arms generally. A Magistrate, when he is conducting a search for the discovery of arms, cannot be held to be "acting judicially" within the meaning of the Judicial Officers' Protection Act (XVIII of 1850). The bonâ fides of a Magistrate in conducting a search does not release him from the obligations the law casts upon him: while, having regard to his bonâ fides his conduct may not be such that the damages to be awarded for trespass should be exemplary, yet they ought to be substantial and not purely nominal. TOWN-DUTIES, BOMBAY.

———— Act XIX of 1844—Suit to levy a tax on cotton and cotton seeds purchased in, and exported from, Broach—Cess illegal—Agency—Trust. The plaintiff, manager and part proprietor of a Vallabhacharya temple at Broach, sued the defendant to establish the right of the temple to levy a cess on cotton and cotton seed purchased in Broach and exported from it. The defendant denied the plaintiff's right and contended (inter alia) that, even if the right existed until 1844, it was then abolished by Act XIX of that year, which "enacted that from the first day of October 1844 all town duties, kusubviras mohtarphas, baluti taxes, and cesses of every kind on trades and professions, under whatsoever name, levied within the Presidency of Bombay, and not forming a part of the land revenue, shall be abolished." Held, that Act XIX of 1844 applied to the cess claimed by the plaintiff. The expression "cesses of every kind" included the cess on cotton and cotton seeds, and absolutely put an end to the right, if any existed, of the Government or of any private individual of levying the same. Held, also, that the suit could not be regarded as a suit for money had and received by the defendant to the plaintiff's use, or as one to recover money received by the defendant as trustee or agent. 1. ———— Injunction to restrain use of trade-marks—Combination of figures. The plaintiffs, from 1872, imported and sold an article described as 7½ lb grey shirtings, and marked as follows: "In the centre of each piece of cloth a stamp in blue colour of a turtle in a star, with the words 'trade mark;' underneath in a semi-circular form, is the name 'Fleming, Galbraith & Co., Manchester,' and under this the number 39 within a star, and at the bottom of each piece the number 2008." In 1877 the plaintiffs discovered that the defendants were importing from the same manufacturers, and selling cloth of a similar quality marked as follows: "A stamp in blue colour of a rose in a square; underneath are the words 'Ralli and Mavrojani' arranged in a semi-circular form, and under this the number 39 in a star, and at the bottom the number 2008." On the facts of the case the lower Court (MACKPHERSON, J.) granted an interim injunction to restrain the defendants from so marking their cloth, on the ground that it was a colourable imitation of the plaintiffs' mark and calculated to mislead the public; and on appeal the Court (GARTH, C.J., and MARKBY, J.) upheld that decision so far as to continue the injunction. Held per GARTH, C.J., that if the imitation of the plaintiffs' marks generally, or the use of the number 2008 in particular, would be calculated to deceive or mislead the public, the defendants ought to be restrained from such use or imitation. Under the circumstances, the use of their marks by the defendants would be calculated to deceive the public into the belief that they were purchasing goods imported by the plaintiffs. Per MARKBY, J.—The number 2008 was not part of the plaintiffs' trade mark proper, nor on the evidence was it so associated with the plaintiffs' name as to indicate to the public that the goods bearing that number came only from the plaintiffs' firm as importers; on the evidence it was merely a quality mark and therefore not calculated to mislead the public into the belief that they were purchasing the plaintiffs' goods, while in fact they were purchasing those imported by the defendants. Semble: There may be a right to exclusive use of a trade mark by traders who are importers only. 2. ———— Right to use of trade mark—Rival traders—Similarity of name. No trader importing goods can lawfully adopt a trade mark which it calculated to cause his goods to bear in the market the same name as those of a rival trader. TAYLOR v. VIRASAMI . I. L. R. 6 Mad, 108

3. Restraining use of trade mark—Evidence of fraud. The ground upon which a person is restrained from using another's trade mark is that he is gaining an advantage by the use of a particular trade mark which is the property of another. It is not necessary to prove intentional fraud, or to show that persons have been actually deceived. It is sufficient if the Court be satisfied that the resemblance is such as would be likely to cause the one mark to be mistaken for the other. EWING v. GRANT, SMITH & Co. . 2 Hyde 185

4. ——— Possession and use of trade mark—User in foreign market—Abandonment—Estoppel by conduct. Such possession and use of a trade mark in one market as to constitute a right in it establishes in the owner thereof an exclusive right to that trade mark in other markets, although the owner may not have used it in such markets. To constitute a mark, a trade mark, it must have been adopted as a symbol devised to distinguish a particular class of goods as the goods of that class manufactured or selected by a particular manufacturer or merchant. Where the plaintiffs by their conduct let the defendant to believe that they claimed no right to a certain trade mark, and that it was open to the defendant to adopt it as his own, and the defendant did adopt it, and by his industry secured a wide popularity for it in the Indian market:—Held, that the plaintiffs were estopped from denying the defendant's right to use the trade mark in the Indian market. LAVERGNE v. HOOPER . I. L. R. 8 Mad. 149

5. ——— Right of exclusive user—Infringement—Combination of numerals as a trade mark—Injunction. The question of the right to the exclusive user of a trade mark or trade number is largely, if not entirely, a question of fact, and the question whether it exists in any given case must depend upon whether the evidence in that case is sufficient to show such an association or connection between the mark or the number and the firm which uses it as to indicate the ordinary purchasers in the market that the goods are the goods of that particular firm. To show that a particular trade number has acquired a reputation in the market, and that purchasers buy the goods by that number and not from an examination of the nature or quality of the cloth is not sufficient to establish the right of exclusive user of that number. There must be such an association between the number and the firm's name as to indicate in the understanding of the public that the goods bearing that number came from that particular firm. The right of exclusive user of a name or a number as a trade mark is not an absolute and unqualified right which would entitle the owner to prevent another person from using it under all circumstances. It is only when the use of that name or number deceives or is reasonably likely to deceive the public that it can be interfered with or prevented. There must be a reasonable probability of purchasers being deceived; it is not enough to show a mere possibility of deception. BARLOW v. GOBINDRAM . I. L. R. 24 Calc. 364

6. ——— Offence of using false or counterfeit trade mark—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1840), ss. 482, 486—Prosecution after one year from first discovery of offence—Limitation—Merchandise Marks Act (IV of 1889), s. 15. A complainant having, in 1893, discovered that goods were being sold marked with what was alleged to be a counterfeit trade mark, called upon the persons so selling to discontinue the use of the said alleged counterfeit trade mark and to render an account of sales. The right to proceed further was reserved, but no action was then taken. In 1898, upon its being ascertained that the same trade mark was being used, a prosecution was commenced. Held, that, inasmuch as the complainant had not shown that he believed the use of the alleged counterfeit trade mark had been discontinued after his first discovery and complaint in 1893, the prosecution was time-barred under s. 15 of the Indian Merchandise Marks Act, 1889; and that the complainant must enforce his remedy by civil process. VI 2, (4), of the Indian Merchandise Marks Act (I of 1889); therefore, when a person sells books with a counterfeit property mark, he commits at offence under s. 486 of the Indian Penal Code. The mere fact that a Bank imported and sold gold bars with a particular mark impressed upon them, a mark which was not originally theirs, but belonged to a Bank that had ceased to exist and where there was no proof of any transfer or assignment of the mark, or that the new Bank succeeded the other in the sense either that it was a continuation of that Bank under another name, or that it succeeded to the business or acquired the good-will of that Bank was held not to be sufficient to establish that the mark was the trade mark of the new Bank. TRADE MARK—contd.

the plaintiff, and having a trade mark so similar to the trade mark on the watches imported by plaintiff that it was calculated to deceive purchasers into the belief that such watches were watches imported and sold by the plaintiff. It was proved that the trade mark on the watches so imported by the plaintiff was not the trade mark of the plaintiff, but that of the manufacturer in Switzerland and that the plaintiff was merely an importer and seller of the watches under a contract for exclusive supply in India. Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to an injunction. An importer can only protect a trade mark representing his own reputation and the advantage accruing therefrom, but not the trade mark of another, a manufacturer or producer. It was necessary for the plaintiff to show that the value of the trade which he carried on was due to the reputation acquired by and attaching to the trade mark as a guarantee of importation by him, and not merely as a guarantee of manufacture by somebody else, and that therefore the imitation of that trade mark was an infringement of an exclusive right of his own, entitling him to ask for protection. This the plaintiff has failed to do. It was contended by the defendants that in no case was the plaintiff entitled to relief, inasmuch as by using the words " Roskopf Patent " in the trade mark for which he claimed protection he was guilty of deception, the fact being that there was no patent in existence for the watches which bore this trade mark. A certified copy of the judgment of a Swiss Court against one Ferdinand Schmidt on this point was tendered in evidence. Held, that the issue as to the use of the word ' Patent ' could not be decided in this case if the trade mark in question was not this plaintiff's as the Court could not in this suit decide whether Messrs. Schmidt and Company were or were not precluded from using the word ' Patent ' on Roskopf watches manufactured by them. No decision on the point could have effect in a case to which Messrs. Schmidt had not been made a party. Held, also, that the judgment tendered was not admissible in evidence. An application was made on behalf of the plaintiff to add the manufacturer as co-plaintiff in the suit. Held, that the application should be refused. The plaintiff's case was wholly different from that of the manufacturer. The plaintiff's case was that the defendants had infringed his trade mark as importer, the exclusive right to which in India had been established. The manufacturer's claim would raise questions as to his rights to adopt and protect it in the country of its origin, and consequently in all possible markets in which it might be introduced. Ss. 27, 31 and 32 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882) did not apply. HEINIGER v. DROZ (1900) . . I. L. R. 25 Bom. 433

10. ——— Prior use in Scotland——Prior user by owner in Scotland—Effect on right to exclusive user in British India by a person other than the owner—Infringement. Plaintiff claimed to have been for many years the sole importer into Bombay and Madras of umbrellas bearing a certain trade mark. Defendant had recently commenced importing and selling in Madras umbrellas which, plaintiff contended, bore a trade mark so similar as to be calculated to deceive purchaser so as to induce them to buy defendant's umbrellas under the belief that they were buying plaintiff's. He asked for an injunction and damages. Defendant denied that plaintiff had been the sole importer of umbrellas bearing the trade mark in question ; or that he was the owner or entitled to the exclusive use of that trade mark ; or that umbrellas bearing that trade mark had come to be known as umbrellas imported and sold by plaintiff alone. It was contended that the trade mark belonged to, and had, since 1884, been used by, a Glasgow firm, who manufactured the umbrellas, and supplied them to defendant through another. Defendant denied the alleged similarity of the trade mark, or that purchasers were calculated to be deceived as alleged, and contended that plaintiff could not lawfully use or claim it. For the purposes of the case it was assumed that the trade mark in question had been used by the Glasgow firm before it was used by plaintiff in India ; and that it had never been used by the Glasgow firm in India before plaintiff so used it. On its being contended that, inasmuch as the trade mark had originally belonged to the Glasgow firm, it could not be carefully used or claimed by plaintiff, notwitstanding that the Glasgow firm had never used it in or imported umbrellas bearing it into India. Held, that the contention could not be supported, and that the prior use in Scotland did not justify the Scotch firm and the defendant in claiming that plaintiff's user of the trade mark was illegal or otherwise than an exclusive user. The defendant, a publisher in Bombay, prepared a calendar and put the name " Shri Chandu Panchang " on the outside, although the calendar was not prepared by the descendants of Shri Chandu. The complainant thereupon filed an information against the defendant, under s. 482 of the Indian Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) and s. 6 of the Merchandise Marks Act (IV of 1889). Held, (i) that the defendant had committed no offence under s. 482 of the Indian Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), for the title " Shri Chandu Panchang" did not come within the definition of " trade mark " given in s. 478 of the Code ; and (ii) that

J. & Co. from J.F. A. & Co., the London manufaturers. The label consisted of a youth and girl in fancy dress and goods bearing the label became known in Bombay and up-country as 'Jori Mal.' By M's request the name of C. J. & Co. was printed on the border of the label in Persian and Gujarati characters. In 1897 M's partner having retired from the firm, M, the fourth plaintiff, continued the business of C. J. & Co. with the other plaintiffs under the name, style and firm of V. & Co. V. & Co. then ordered goods bearing the label from B. W. A. & Co. in London instructing them to place on the border of the label the name of their firm V. & Co., in English, Persian and Gujarati characters.

In 1898, B. W. A. & Co. having become insolvent, the plaintiffs imported goods, without the label from B. & Co., the defendants, who had taken up the business of B. W. A. & Co. In 1899, the plaintiffs requested the defendants to arrange, if possible, to send out the goods under the "Jori Mal" label. In 1900, the defendants, having purchased from B. W. A. & Co. their rights under the label, proceeded to place it on goods manufactured for and sold by them, leaving the border of the label blank or inserting on the border their own name, or, by special request, the names of the constituents, by whom the goods were ordered. It was not expressly agreed that B. W. A. &. Co. should not supply goods under the label to constituents other than the plaintiffs. The lower Court held, inter alia, (i) that the plaintiffs had lost their right to the exclusive user of the label as against the defendants, and (ii) that the plaintiffs were not entitled to the rights, if any, of the firm of C. J. & Co. to the label. On appeal by the plaintiffs :— Held, that the plaintiffs have failed to establish an exclusive right to the label. In the absence of contract, a seller of goods has no exclusive right to a mark, which merely denotes goods, which he sells, even though he may have designed the mark himself. Such a mark may be a mere quality mark indicating the reputation of the goods, irrespective of the reputation of the seller. Obviously every trader being entitled, if not bound, to state truthfully the quality of the goods he sells, no one trader can restrain any other from exercising that right by a mark truthfully indicating quality. For neither of the two grounds for protection exists in such case. His reputation is not injured and no deception is practised on the public. To give an exclusive right there must be something further. The mark must amount to a representation that the quality is wholly or in part due to and guaranteed by some person or persons concerned in or connected with the origin or history of the goods. In such cases the public are invited to rely on the reputation of the person denoted, and no other person can, without their authority, make such representation. It is a question of evidence in each case, whether there is false representation or not. Held, also, a trade mark, belonging to a firm, would in the absence of express provisions to the contrary as part of the partnership assets, be available for any partner of that firm, carrying on that business. Hirsch v. Jonas, *L. 18. ——— Slander of title, suit for—Infringement of trade mark—Colourable imitation—Malice—Similarities calculated to deceive incautious, ignorant or unwary purchasers. A made a representation to the Collector of Customs that the trade mark on certain goods imported by B was a colourable imitation of the trade mark on goods manufactured by C and imported by A. Thereupon the Customs authorities held an inquiry and detained the goods. B brought an action for damages against A for slander of title. Held, that in order to enable B to succeed he must substantiate (i) that the statement to the Collector of Customs was untrue in fact, (ii) that the statement was made maliciously, i.e., without reasonable and probable cause; (iii) that he suffered special damage thereby. Held, further, that no action for slander of title lay against A, inasmuch as the mark on the goods imported by B was a colourable imitation of that on C's goods. A person has a right to use any marks he pleases so long as they are not calculated to mislead the public, and do not infringe anybody's trade mark. In order to arrive at a conclusion as to whether a trade mark is a colourable imitation of another or not the Court may look at the two marks in question with its own powers of forming an opinion, accompanied by the evidence given in the case. It has to consider whether the mark is calculated to deceive incautious, ignorant or unwary purchasers. Re Christiansen's Trade mark, 3 R. P. C. 54, Johnston v. *Orr Ewing, L. R. 7 A. 1. ——— Transfer by unregistered document—Delivery of possession—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 54. A certain plot of land being transferred by the Road Cess Department to the Public Works Irrigation Department for a sum less than one hundred rupees without any registered instrument, the Secretary of State for India in Council instituted a suit against the defendants for recovery of possession of the said lands. Upon an objection taken that the plaintiff acquired no title to the property as the transfer, upon which he relied, was in contravention of the provisions of s. 54 of the Transfer of Property Act: Held, that inasmuch as the transfer was not made by a registered instrument, and as also the plaintiff had been in occupation from before the date of the transfer and there was not any delivery of possession within the meaning of the provisions of s. 54 of the Transfer of Property Act, the plaintiff acquired no title by the said transfer. Ganga Narain Gope v. *Kali Churn Goala, I. 1. ——— Power to transfer—Mad. Reg. IV of 1816, s. 26—Village Munsif—Jurisdiction. In a suit under Regulation IV of 1816, the defendant having objected to the Village Munsif trying the suit on the ground of personal hostility, the Munsif transferred the suit to another Village Munsif. Held, that this transfer was illegal. Per HUTCHINS, J.—Semble: In such a case the Village Munsif should report the facts to the District Court, and the District Judge should transfer the case for trial to another Village Munsif. The District Judge decided the suit, and from his decree there was an appeal to the High Court. The High Court remanded the suit under s. 592 of the Code to the Court of the District Judge. The latter transferred the suit so remanded for trial to the Subordinate Judge. Held, that the District Judge had then no power to transfer the suit, but was bound to try it himself. Semble: That s. 25 of the Code of Civil Procedure has no application to a case remanded under s. 562 of the Code. The defendants in a suit instituted at Mainpuri, who resided and carried on business at Surat, applied under s. 24 of the Civil Procedure Code that the suit might be tried at Surat, on the ground that it would be tried with greater convenience to them at that place. Held, that, there being no balance in favour of either justice or convenience on the side of the Surat Court, the suit should proceed at Mainpuri. The Court having jurisdiction to entertain such suit, at the joint request of the parties, transferred it for trial to itself under s. 25 of the Civil Procedure Code, and tried it. Held, in the High Court, that, inasmuch as the parties has assented to the transfer of the suit, and its transfer brought it into the right Court, the fact that the suit had been originally instituted in the wrong Court did not render the transfer illegal, and the Court having jurisdiction had properly tried the suit. A suit having been instituted in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, who was incompetent to try it, the case was transferred by consent of parties to the Court of the District Judge for convenience of trial. Held, that such transference was incompetent and that such consent did not operate as a waiver of the plea to the jurisdiction which was taken in the defendant's written statement and subsequently insisted upon. filed in the District Judge's Court, and was subsequently upon application by the appellant withdrawn by the High Court under s. 25 of the Civil Procedure Code and registered as an appeal to that Court. The order of withdrawal left it open to the respondent to raise objection on the score of want of jurisdiction of the District Court at the time of hearing of the appeal. Held, that, when an appeal is transferred under s. 25 of the Civil Procedure Code, it must be heard subject to all the objections which could be taken before the Court from which it has been transferred. The High Court therefore had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal. Peary Lall Mozoomdar v. Komal Kishore Dassia, I. L. R. 6 Calc. 30; and Ledgard v. Bull, I. L. R. 9 All. 393 : L. R. 13 I. P., s. 9. There is nothing in the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1882) or the High Courts Act (24 & 25 Vict., c. 104) or the Letters Patent which prevents the High Court from calling for the record of the proceedings in the winding-up of a Company under the Companies Act, and transferring those proceedings to its own file. Such a power is given to the High Court by s. 647 read with s. 25 of the Civil Procedure Code. Where, in the proceeding in the winding-up of a Company under Act VI of 1882, an order was passed admitting the proof of a particular creditor of the Company before any liquidator had been appointed:—Held, that this was an irregularity which by itself would justify the High Court in sending for the record. Where the District Judge conducting the proceedings in the winding-up of a Company under Act VI of 1882 had, after receiving notice of the admission by the High Court of a petition for transfer of those proceedings to its own file, drafted and placed upon the record an order which it might have been difficult for him to reconsider if the matter again came before him, and where the case appeared to be one in which serious questions of law were likely to arise which it would probably be difficult to discuss adequately in the District Court, in the absence of the authorities upon the subject and of any rules framed by the High Court for dealing with winding-up under the Act, and the case was of a kind which would probably come before the High Court in a variety of appeals from orders brought by one side or the other:—Held, that, under these circumstances the case was a proper one for the exercise of the High Court's jurisdiction by calling up the winding-up proceedings to its own file. In the matter of the WEST HOPETOWN TEA COMPANY . I. 24. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 25—District Court, power of, as to suit pending in its own Court—Ultra vires. S. 25 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) only enables a District Court to transfer a suit pending in a Court subordinate to itself, and not to transfer a suit which is pending in its own Court. Accordingly, where a District Judge made an order to retransfer to the original Court certain suits pending in his Court which had been previously transferred to his Court from a Subordinate Court. —Held, that the order of retransfer was ultra vires and should be discharged. An application to be declared an insolvent under the Civil Procedure Code is a proceeding in execution, and as such can be made the subject of an order under s. 25 of the Code. A creditor who has received notice of an insolvency petition, and whose name is entered on the record of the execution proceedings as an opposing creditor, is a "party" within the meaning of s. 25 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and may apply for a transfer of the proceedings under the section. A further order was made by a single Judge, which, though in form an order dismissing a review petition against the first-mentioned order, was in substance an adjudication upon the question whether the High Court has jurisdiction to order the transfer of a suit from the High Court of such an Agent to a District Court. Held, that the High Court has no jurisdiction to transfer a suit pending in the Court of the Agent to the Governor, Vizagapatam, to the District Court of Vizagapatam; and that Agency Rule No. 22 made in 1840, under the powers conferred by Act XXIV of 1839, is a valid rule. 1. GENERAL CASES—contd.

28. ——— Reasons for transfer—Amending issues—Procedure on transfer. The mere transfer of a suit for the convenience of the public, or for the acceleration of business, from one subordinate Court to another, does not affect the authority of the Judge of the District Court to transfer it to his own file, or to another Court, or to retransfer it, if he see sufficient cause for so doing; nor would the circumstance that a case had been up on appeal to the High Court on a preliminary point, and been remanded for a trial on the merits, limit the authority of the District Court Judge to bring it upon his own file, or to transfer it to the file of a Court other than that in which it was instituted. The omission of the Judge to assign his reason for transferring the case does not vitiate his proceeding. When a Judge transfers a case to his own file, he is at liberty to amend the issues first laid down and to raise additional issues, and to go into the whole case, except upon any question upon which there has been a judicial finding. During the pendency of the suit the Subordinate Judge took leave and his successor was not invested with Small Cause Court powers. In consequence of this, the District Judge made an order, under s. 25 of the Code of Civil Procedure, transferring all cases above the value of R50 then pending before the Subordinate Judge in his capacity as a Small Cause Court to the Munsif to be tried as Munsif's Court cases. The Munsif had Small Cause Court powers up to R50. The plaintiff's suit was for R69. The case was accordingly tried by the Munsif and the plaintiff appealed, his appeal coming before the same Subordinate Judge before whom the suit was filed. Held, that, granted that the suit was a Small Cause Court suit (which was not decided), whether s. 25 of the Code of Civil Procedure or s. 35 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887) was applicable, it would remain throughout a Small Couse Court suit and be subject to the incidents of such a suit. 9. ——— Ground for transfer—Sale in execution of decree—Order winding up company. On 25th October 1870, a petition for the winding up of the B T E Company of Assam was presented to the Court of Chancery in England by one of the shareholders of the Company, and a provisional liquidator was appointed. On 5th November, at an extraordinary meeting of the Company, it was resolved that the Company should be wound up, and liquidators were appointed. On 12th November the petition for winding up came on for hearing, and an order was made that the voluntary winding up should continue, subject to the supervision of the Court. On 18th November, by deed under the hands and seals of the liquidators, M was appointed their attorney in India. On 27th October certain immoveable properties in Assam belonging to the Company were attached in execution of decrees in certain suits in the Court of the Munsifs of Debroghur. On 9th December the properties were put up for sale, and purchased at prices which, it was alleged, were considerably under their value. Applications were made in the Munsif's Court at Debroghur by the purchasers for confirmation of the sales, which applications were opposed by M and pending the Munsif's decision an application was made to the Deputy Commissioner of Luckimpore for an order to stay all proceedings in the decree suits on the ground of the order for winding up the Company of 12th November, which application was refused on 15th February 1871. On 16th February 1871 the Munsif made an order confirming the sales. M thereupon petitioned the High Court for the removal of the suits from Assam to the High Court, to be tried in its extraordinary original civil jurisdiction, on the ground that no appeal would lie against the order of 15th February refusing to stay the proceedings in the suits; and that, if an appeal should be preferred to the Deputy Commissioner from the order of the Munsif confirming the sales, his decision would be final The application was opposed on behalf of the purchasers. Held, that the Munsif, not having had notice of the winding-up order of 12th November, had power to

1886 the Government of Bombay issued the notification (No. 823) above set forth. On the 11th March 1886 an application was made to the High Court of Bombay for the transfer of the case to another Court of Session or to the High Court for trial. Held, that Perim is a Sessions Division, and that, after the establishment, under the Code of Criminal Procedure, of a Court of Session for the Perim Sessions Division and the appointment of the Resident at Aden as Sessions Judge of that Court, the accused stood properly committed to a Court of Session. The High Court therefore could transfer the case from that Court, under s. 526 of the Code, to any other Court of equal or superior jurisdiction, or to the High Court of Bombay. Per BIRDWOOD, J.—The High Court cannot, under s. 526 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), any more than under s. 25 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), direct the transfer of a case, which is not properly before a subordinate Court of competent jurisdiction, to receive and try it. Peary Lall Mozoomdar v. *Komul Kishore Dossia, I. A charge was made against the accused of using criminal force under s. 141 of the Penal Code. The Police Magistrate heard the evidence for the prosecution, and, without disbelieving it, decided it did not amount to the offence charged. Held, that, assuming that an error of law had been committed, the High Court had no power to issue a mandamus to the Magistrate to commit the defendants; it was not a case where the Magistrate had declined jurisdiction; he had exercised his jurisdiction and heard the case. Held, also, it was not a case which the Court could transfer under s. 147 of the High Court's Criminal Procedure Act. 15. _____ Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 526 and 192—Transfer of Criminal case by the High Court to the Court of a District Magistrate—Interpretation of order—Practice. When a criminal case is transferred by an order of the High Court from a Court subordinate to a District Magistrate, to the Court of a District Magistrate if it is intended that the District Magistrate shall have power to transfer the case to a subordinate Court, that intention will be expressed in the order of the High Court. If no such intention is expressed, it will be understood that, in the case of a transfer from a Court subordinate to a District Magistrate to a District Magistrate's Court, that District Magistrate's Court is expected to try the case itself; but, when the transfer is from the Court of one District Magistrate to the Court of another District Magistrate it will be understood that, unless the contrary is directly expressed, the Magistrate of the Court to which the transfer is made has power and jurisdiction to apply s. 192 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and to transfer the case to the Court of any Magistrate subordinate to him who may be competent to try it. It requires only that the party should notify to the Court before which the case is pending, before the commencement of the hearing, his intention to make an application for the transfer of the case. 16. ——— View of the scene of the occurrence by a Magistrate trying a criminal case—Local investigation—Criminal Procedure Code, s. 526. It is not only not objectionable, but in many cases highly advisable, that a Magistrate trying a criminal case should himself inspect the scene of the occurrence in order to understand fully the bearing of the evidence given in Court. But if he does so, he should be careful not to allow any one on either side to say anything to him which might prejudice his mind one way or the other. The fact he has held such a local investigation does not amount to a ground for transferring the case to another Magistrate. In the matter of the petition of LALJI . I. L. R. 19 All. 302

17. ——— Bias—Reasonable apprehension in the mind of the accused of Magistrate being biassed—Suit by servant of estate under Court of Wards, the District Magistrate as Collector being Manager—Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898), s. 526. Where the apprehension in the mind of the accused that he may not have a fair and impartial trial is of a reasonable character, then, notwithstanding, that there may be no real bias in the matter, the fact of incidents having taken place calculated to raise such reasonable apprehension ought to be a ground for allowing a transfer. In the matter of the petition of J. Wilson, I. L. R. 18 Calc. 247, and Dupeyron v. Driver, I. L. R. 23 Calc. 495, referred to. The mere fact that the Magistrate of the district is, in his capacity as Collector, concerned in the management of an estate held by the Court of Wards is no ground for asking for a transfer from the district of a case brought by a servant of the estate and pending before a Subordinate Magistrate in the District. 18. ——— High Court, power of, to transfer case under s. 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure—Bias, reasonable apprehension of—Witnesses, convenience to—Meaning of "case" and "criminal case"—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 9—Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898), ss. 4, 6, 107, 110, 145, 178, 192, 340, 342, 435, 437, 439, 526, 527, 528 and 556—Charter Act (24 & 25 Vict.), c. 104, s. 15—Letters Patent, s. 29. Held (per GHOSE, J.), that an investigation in a case under s. 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code is an inquiry, within the meaning of cl. (a) of s. 526 of that Code. A Court of a Magistrate taking cognizance of a case under s. 145 is a Criminal Court, within the meaning of the Criminal Procedure Code. The expression "Criminal case," in s. 526, may be understood as simply distinguished from a civil case, being a case over which a Criminal Court has jurisdiction. It is doubtful whether, under s. 526, the Legislature meant to confer on the High Court the power of making a transfer in cases other than those in which a person is charged with an offence. The High Court may, however, under s. 15 of the Charter Act, direct the transfer of a case, under s. 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, which a Magistrate has taken cognizance of. Next to the importance of deciding a case fairly and impartially is the importance of conducting oneself in such a manner as to inspire in the minds of the parties a confidence that nothing but absolute justice would be done. If, therefore, by reason of the words or conduct of a Magistrate, or Judge, before whom a case is pending, any party reasonably apprehends that there is a bias against him in the mind of the officer concerned, it would be expedient for the ends of justice to transfer the case from his file to that of some other officer competent to try it, though there may not be any actual bias. Dupeyron v. Driver, I. L. R. 23 Calc. 495, and The Legal Remembrancer v. Bhairab Chandra Chuckerbutty, I. L. R. 25 Calc. 727, referred to. Held (per TAYLOR, J.), that the phrases "case" and "criminal case," in the Criminal Procedure Code, are not co-extensive, and are not used indiscriminately or interchangeably. The phrase "criminal case," is intended to be used in a limited sense, and not to apply to every case cognizable by a Criminal Court. It is doubtful whether the High Court has power under s. 526 to transfer cases which do not relate to matters which may strictly be described as criminal as relating to a crime or offence under the law. The power, however, exists under s. 29 of the Letters Patent, wherein the phrase "criminal case," appears to be used without the distinction which apparently exists in the Criminal Procedure Code in respect of cases tried by a Criminal Court as opposed to civil cases. 19. ——— Magistrate taking part during investigation by police—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 526, 164, 342—Transfer of pending cases—Examination of accused by Magistrate, preliminary to trial, by way of cross-examination. When a Magistrate was present at a search made by the police during an investigation, and in all probability he came to know of some facts in connection with the case, it is expedient that the case should be tried by some other Magistrate. During a police investigation, the examination of an accused by a Magistrate by way of cross-examination is improper. (TAYLOR, J.)—In the course of a police investigation a Magistrate is entitled to record, under s. 164, Code of Criminal Procedure, any voluntary statement made by an accused person, but he is not entitled to examine him in respect of the facts of the case. S. 342 of the Code only empowers a Court to examine an accused to explain evidence already recorded. GYA SINGH v. MOHAMED SOLIMAN (1901) . 5 C. W. N. 864

20. ——— Reasonable apprehension in the mind of the accused—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 526—Incidents and circumstances calculated to create apprehension. A Magistrate is bound to postpone the hearing of a case for the purpose of enabling a party to apply to a Higher Court for a transfer and his refusal to do so renders the subsequent proceedings voidable, if not void. Queen-Empress v. *Gayitri Prosunno Ghosal, I. Confidence in the administration of justice is an essential element in good government and a reasonable apprehension of failure of justice in the mind of the accused should be taken into consideration on an application for transfer. Narain Chandra Banerjee v. *The Howrah Municipality, 10 C. 23. ——— Opinion arrived at in another but similar case on other evidence—Bias—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 526. The doctrine that a reasonable apprehension in the mind of an accused that he will not have a fair trial is a sufficient ground for transfer is sound, but in applying it regard must be had to the circumstances of each case. The mere fact that in another case, on other evidence, the Judge has come to a particular conclusion is not in itself a sufficient ground for transfer. Asimaddi v. *Govinda Baidya, 1 C. W. The mortgage was dated the 6th April 1881, and the mortgage-money was repayable on the 13th May 1881. On the 9th July 1881 the mortgagee caused a notice to be served on the mortgagor in compliance with the provisions of ss. 7 and 8 of Regulation XVII of 1806. The year of grace expired on the 10th July 1882. It was contended by the mortgagor that, as the Transfer of Property Act came into force on the 1st July 1882, the proceedings taken by the mortgagee should be regulated by the procedure laid down in ss. 86 and 87 of that Act, and not by the procedure prescribed by Regulation XVII of 1806. Held, that the procedure laid down by the Transfer of Property Act could not be applied to the case. Although the year of grace had not expired when that Act came into force, and the full and complete right of the mortgagee had not accrued, he had acquired the right to bring a suit under the provisions of Regulation XVII of 1806 at the expiration of the year of grace, and the mortgagor was under a liability to part with his property upon a suit being brought at the expiration of that year, and such right and liability came withint he meaning of these terms as used in cl.. Where, therefore, under the provisions of Regulation XVII of 1806, notice of foreclosure had been served on a mortgagor by conditional sale, the mortgage having been executed and the foreclosure proceedings taken before the Transfer of Property Act came into force, and after the expiry of the year of grace, the money not having been paid, the mortgagee instituted a suit for possession on foreclosure, and when such suit was defended by a third party who had purchased the mortgaged property at an execution-sale and obtained possession before the commencement of the foreclosure proceedings, and the necessary notice had not been served upon him :—Held, that it was competent to the Court to apply the procedure prescribed by the Transfer of Property Act and grant the mortgagee a decree in the terms of s. 86, substituting the period of "one year" for the period of "six months" therein mentioned. Ganga Sahai v. *Kishen Sahai, I. (c), of Act IV of 1882. Ganga Sahai v. Kishen Sahai, I. L. R. 6 All. 262, approved. Per WILSON, J.—It is a general rule in construing Statutes that in matters of substantive right they are not to be so read as to take away vested rights, but that in matters of procedure they are general in their operation. There is nothing in the Transfer of Property Act from which it can be beyond reasonable doubt concluded that the Legislature intended to depart from this settled principle of legislation. Per TREVELYAN, J.—There is a clear distinction between "relief" and the mode or procedure for obtaining such relief. The "relief" remains unaffected by a change of procedure. The "rights and liabilities" of a mortgagor and mortgagee, and the "relief" in respect of such rights and liabilities, are the same under Act IV of 1882 as they were before. A different procedure for enforcing such rights and obtaining such relief, has, however, been adopted by the Transfer of Property Act. BHOBO SUNDARI DEBI v. RAKAL CHUNDER BOSE . . . . I. L. Four male members of the family C, D, E, F, who were in the line of heirs joined A in executing the mortgage. Subsequently some usufructuary mortgages were executed to B and B was in possession of the zamindari. In 1894, Original Suit No. 43 of 1894 was brought by B against A, C, D, E, F, and others to recover the amount due under the mortgage of 1892. A consent decree was passed making defendants A, C, D, E, F liable for the amount and directing that in case the amount was not recovered in the lifetime of A, it should be recovered from the other defendants when they succeeded to the estate and the zamindari was made liable for the decree amount. A died in 1904. He was succeeded by one not a party to the suit and on the latter's death in 1905, C succeeded as zamindar. In 1899 and 1903 two applications for execution by sale of the whole zamindari were put in by B and were granted after notice served on C. The notices, however, only stated that application was made for execution of the decree, but the reliefs asked for were not stated. A applied again for execution in 1905. The prayer was for sale of the zamindari and for the appointment of a Receiver, but the prayer for sale was given up at the trial. C raised various objections which were over-ruled and the Sub-Judge appointed a Receiver to take charge of the zamindari and its appurtenances. C appealed :—Held, on appeal, that C in 1892 was not a dormant co-owner with A in the zamindari and that the mortgage by C of his right in the zamindari in 1892 was a transfer of a bare expectancy and was a nullity under s. 6 (a) of the Transfer of Property Act. The probihition in s. 6 (a) of the Transfer of Property Act is based on principles of public policy, and the Court cannot allow such transactions to be effected by a consent decree. Lakshmanaswami Naidu v. Rengamma, I. L. R. 26 Mad. 31, referred to. The principles of equity, on which English Courts grant relief in such cases when the property actually vests, cannot be given effect to in the face of express prohibition contained in s. 6 (a) of the Transfer of Property Act. An order passed in execution proceedings will be res judicata only when the notice gives sufficient intimation of the relief prayed for. Narayana Pattar v. Gopalakrishna Pattar, I. L. R. 28 Mad. 355, followed. Held, further, that as the Receiver was validly appointed on the ground that the property was the subject-matter of the suit, the Appellate Court had jurisdiction to maintain him as a means of realising the amount from the judgment-debtor personally and the property must be considered under attachment, though not attached under s. 274 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Amounts realised by an usufructuary mortgagee in possession after decree for sale cannot be applied in satisfaction of the decree amount unless certified under s. 258 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held, also, that under the circumstances of the case the decree-holder may be considered to have applied for the enforcement of the decree against C personally and the order of the lower Court upheld on that ground. Amendment of petition by inserting a prayer for execution against C personally allowed. RAMASAMI NAIK v. RAMASAMI CHETTI (1906) . . . . I. L. R. 30 Mad. 255

It is neither a vested nor a contingent right. It does not come within the definitions of a "vested interest" in s. 19 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), or of "a contingent interest" in s. 21 of the Act and s. 107 of the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865). The mortgage-deed did not in terms purport to pass the sarbarakari rights. But it is found that though the sarbarakari tenure was never allowed to be specially merged in the superior tenure, yet at the time the mortgage was created, it was not known that any sarbarakari interest existed in these villages, but both parties understood that the entire interest in the taluk without reservation of any sarbarakari rights passed under the mortgage. Held by PARGITER, J.—That it was not open to the mortgagor, on subsequently discovering that he had the sarbarakari rights in these villages, to say he had not mortgaged his entire interest in the villages, and that defendants Nos. 2 and 3, who were subsequent bonâ fide mortgagees for value of the sarbarakari interest, were in no better position. Held by WOODROFFE, J.—That according to the rule of construction embodied in s. 8 of the Transfer of Property Act, the general words used in the mortgage-deed were, in the absence of reservation of entire rights, sufficient to pass the entire interest of the mortgagor. The Transfer of Property Act makes no distinction between free-hold and lease-hold property for the purposes of the rule of law embodied in ss. 8 and 70 of the Act. In this respect the Act reproduces the English law, which is, that all things which are annexed to the property mortgaged are part of the mortgage security and therefore the deed need contain no mention of structures or fixtures, unless a contrary intention can be collected from the deed. The terms of the compromise were embodied in a deed, the terms of which were (inter alia) as follows: "The said B will hold possession as a proprietor, generation by generation without the power of transferring in any shape. The following shares recorded in B's name shall not be transferred or sold in auction in payment of any debt payable by the said B, and in the event of their being transferred or sold, such transfer will be invalid, and the plaintiffs will then be entitled to set aside that transfer, and to obtain possession." B obtained possession of the shares allotted to him by the compromise. Subsequently, certain creditors of B attached the shares referred to in the deed in execution of a decree obtained against the heirs of B for money lent to B on a bond, which he had executed while in possession of the shares, and in which he made a simple mortgage of them. The representatives of the plaintiffs in the suit in which the compromise was made objected to the attachment. Held, by OLDFIELD, J., that the deed of compromise passed an absolute estate to B and his heirs to which the law annexed a power of transfer, and that, in reference to s. 10 of the Transfer of Property Act, the stipulation against alienation on B's part, or against sale by auction in execution of decrees aginst him, was void. Per MAHMOOD, J.—That the rule contained in s. 10 of the Transfer of Property Act was not binding upon the Court in this case, inasmuch as the question was one of succession of inheritance, to be governed by s. 24 of the Bengal Civil Courts Act; that it was for those objecting to the attachment to show that, under the Hindu law the rights of B in the property ceased to exist at his death, or that his estate devolved upon them free of his debts; that the Hindu law being silent on this subject, the principles of justice, equity, and good conscience ——— Order for stay of sale—Mortgage decree—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 244, 291 and 588—Order absolute for sale—Court's power to adjourn sale of mortgaged property. An appeal lies against an order for stay of sale of property directed to be sold in execution of a mortgage-decree, notwithstanding that the said order is in terms one under s. 291 of the Code of Civil Procedure. After an order absolute for sale had been made under s. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act, the Court has power to adjourn the sale of the mortgaged property with a view to give time to the mortgagor to raise money to pay off the decree. It could adjourn the sale to a future date in order to have a better sale in the event of want of bidders or for other similar reason. Kedar Nath Raut v. Kali Churn Ram, *I. L. against B and other co-sharers, for partition, admitting that B had a share in the property. Afterwards C purchased the share, which B claimed to have held. Some of the defendants, who were co-sharers of the property under partition, then put in written statements, in which they denied that B had any share. A preliminary decree was passed by the Court specifying the shares of the several proprietors and declaring that B had no share at all. B did not enter appearance in these proceedings. After the decree declaring the shares of the proprietors had been passed, C applied to be made a party to that suit, but her application was rejected. B appealed against the preliminary decree, but his appeal was dismissed. Upon a suit by C for possession of the share purchased by her from B, the defence mainly was that the suit was barred by reason of s. 25 of the Transfer of Property Act:—Held, that the suit was not so barred. The suit did not become contentious, until the written statement was put in by the opposing defendants disputing any right, title or interest of B in the property under partition, as in the plaint in the partition suit it was admitted that he had a share in the property under partition; and that, having regard to the fact that C, the transferee, was not allowed to become a party to that suit, she could not properly be regarded as prejudiced by the result. Jogendra Chunder Ghose v. Ful Kumari Dassi, *I. SUBRAHMANIA AYYAR, Acting C.J.—A tenant-in-common may have ejectment to the extent of his interest, on proper notice to quit; and the inclusion in such a suit of the other co-sharers, as defendants, is merely the inclusion of persons properly parties to the proceeding and not of litigants against whom a separate claim, having no connection with the ejectment, is made. Per SANKARAN NAIR, J.—The distinction between the law in England and India as to the rights and liabilities of joint lessors and lessees discussed and explained; as also the rights of lessors, who are tenants-in-common. Case law, English and Indian, on the subject, considered. Where the relation is created by contract with several joint landlords, according to the English cases, such relation subsists only so long as all of them wish it to continue, while according to the Indian cases it subsists, until all of them agree to put an end to it; and such a contract cannot, in the absence of special circumstances, be put an end to by any one of them, if they continue to hold as joint tenants. This principle, however, will not apply when the suit is for ejectment and partition and all the co-owners are made parties. The principles embodied in ss. 37 and 109 of the Transfer of Property Act ought to be applied in such cases, though they are not expressly declared applicable. When the lessor recognises the right of another in the premises demised, all the obligations of the lessee, as to payment of rent and surrender of possession, must, if such obligation be severable, and the lessee will not be prejudiced by such severance, be performed by the lessee between the lessor and such other, in such proportions as may be settled by all the parties concerned, including the lessee. So, where a person consciously avoids making an enquiry, though he may be said to have a belief on the matter, it would not be a belief in good faith. According to the Civil Procedure Code the essentials of a suit are—(i) opposing parties, (ii) a subject in dispute, (iii) a cause of action, and (iv) a demand of relief. If there is no inaction on the plaintiff's part, the suit would be contentious, notwithstanding the fact that the service of the summons could not be effected on the defendant. An issue as to whether a transfer of immoveable property was fraudulent against a creditor within s. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act can be raised and decided only in a suit properly constituted for that purpose; and the present suit not having been so constituted either as to parties or otherwise, that question was not decided and decision given as in the case presented to the Court. Malkarjun v. Narhari, 5 C. W. N. 10 : s. c. L. R. 27 I. A. 236, referred to. In a suit purporting to be brought on a mortgage, only a money-decree was made. It was pointed out that so long as that decree remained unreversed, the suit could not be regarded as one in which a right to immoveable property was "directly and specifically in question," within s. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act. By the time mortgaged properties were brought to sale in execution of a decree obtained on the mortgage, the equity of redemption had been purchased by the mortgagee himself in the name of a benamidar, so that at the time of sale the mortgagee alone was represented on each side of the record. On the 17th December 1878 E retired from the trust and made over his interest to the remaining trustee G, and on the same day J executed a deed of appointment in favour of her children representing to her solicitor that she did so to protect the property from her husband. The deed of appointment was witnessed by E, and was duly registered, but it was not mentioned in the deed which assigned the trust property to G, and no information of it was given to him, the deed remaining in J's custody and not being made over to G. In 1884 G retired from the trust, and E became sole trustee in his place. In March 1884 money was raised by J and E on mortgage of the trust property to G, but no mention of the deed of appointment was made in the mortgage-deed. J's husband died in October 1884, but neither then, nor on the occasion of another mortgage of the property in 1888, was any mention made of the deed of appointment, and there was nothing on the record of the case to show that the husband was ever in needy circumstances, or pressed his wife for money, or that he died leaving no property. In 1890 E and J mortgaged the house and premises to the plaintiffs, the mortgage-deed (which was duly registered) reciting the settlement of 1870, and that "J has not made any irrevocable appointment of the said trust premises under the power of appointment given to her in the settlement," but making no mention of the deed of appointment executed by her in 1878. A deed of further charge was also executed by J and E in 1891 in favour of the plaintiffs also without any mention of the deed of appointment : this was also duly registered. Before execution of the mortgage of 1890, the plaintiffs' solicitors did not search the register of deeds further back than 1884, because they were dealing with persons who must have known of the exercise of the power of appointment, and who had given a covenant that no such exercise had been made and because they then found that G, the former trustee had taken a similar security himself in 1884 and must have been satisfied that no such blot existed on the title. They had, moreover, a letter from

G's solicitors saying that they had searched the register up to 1884. J first set up the deed of appointment as a defence in the present suit, which was brought on the mortgages against E and J and their children, and in which the plaintiffs sought to recover the amount advanced with interest, and prayed that the deed might be declared void as against them. In this suit E did not appear. The principal grounds of defence were that the mortgage-deeds were not explained to J, that she was ill at the time and left all the transactions to her brother E, and that she did not know the contents of the deeds which she contended were therefore not binding on her; that the deed of appointment was made in consideration of her natural love and affection for her children; and that the plaintiffs had notice of it. On the facts the lower Court (SALE, J.) found that she had full and complete knowledge of the contents of the mortgage-deeds and was bound by them, and that there was gross fraud towards the plaintiffs on the part of E in suppressing the fact of the existence of the deed of appointment. Held by SALE, J., that according to the law which existed in India prior to the passing of the Transfer of Property Act, the deed of appointment was a voluntary conveyance and fraudulent within the meaning of the Stat. 27 Eliz., c. 4, and void as against the plaintiffs as subsequent transferees for valuable consideration; the legal presumption of fraud which the Court was entitled to make on the cases decided on that Statute rendering the question of notice or no notice immaterial. Judha v. Abdool Kureem, 22 W. R. 60; Doe d. Otley v. Manning, 9 East 59; Doe d. Newman v. Rushan, 17 Q. B., 724; and Godfrey v. Poolee, L. R. 18 Ap. Cas. 497, referred to. S. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act has not altered the law in that respect. The deed of appointment came within the definition of "transfer of property" given in that Act, there being nothing in the Act to suggest that it was intended to confine its operation to transfers by contract. The words of s. 53, "may be presumed to have been made with such intent as aforesaid" (i.e., with a fraudulent intent), should be construed in accordance with the cases decided under the Stat. 27 Eliz., c. 4. Even assuming that it was intended by s. 53 to exclude voluntary conveyances of which a subsequent transferee had notice from the presumption of fraud:—Held, on the facts, that the plaintiffs had no notice of the deed of appointment. The doctrine of notice, if applied, must be applied in accordance with, and subject to, the definition of notice given in the Act itself. There was no actual notice, and there was not such an "abstention from inquiry or search" on the part of the plaintiffs as to fix them with constructive notice. The words "wilful abstention from inquiry and search" mean such abstention as would show want of bonâ fides on the part of the plaintiffs in respect of this particular transaction. Agra Bank v. Barry, L. R. 7 E. & I. 135, referred to. Held, also, that the doctrine of registration amounting to notice, as laid down in the case of Lakshmandas Sarupchand v. Dasrat, I. L. R. 6 Bom. 168, had no application to the present case. Having regard to the terms of s. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act, that doctrine, if applicable, can only apply for the purpose, either of rebutting the presumption of fraud or of preventing the presumption of fraud from arising. If the true meaning of that section be that the Court is to presume fraud only in accordance with the facts of each particular case, the facts of the present case were amply sufficient to raise the presumption as regards the deed of appointment. That deed therefore was fraudulent as against the plaintiffs, and they were entitled to a declaration that it was void and inoperative as against them. Held, on appeal (by PETHERAM, C.J., and NORRIS and O'KINEALY, JJ.), that, looking to the unusual way in which the transaction as to the deed of appointment was carried out, and the secrecy given to it, the result of which was to enable E and J to raise money on the trust property by inducing persons to believe that the whole title lay in themselves alone and on the other facts in the case, apart from the presumption which might be made under s. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act, where a transfer is made gratuitously for a grossly inadequate consideration, viz., that it may be presumed to have been made to defraud or defeat creditors, the decree of the Court below was correct. 5. ——— Assignment in fraud of creditors—Interest taken under will. B died in 1891, leaving a widow (defendant No. 1) and two sons P and D (defendants Nos. 4 and 5). By this will he gave his widow a life-interest in the rents and income of his property subject to the obligation of maintaining, educating, and bringing up the children. After his death the property, moveable and immoveable, was to be divided among his sons equally when D should attain the age of 25. He attained majority in October 1895. On the 13th June 1895 the plaintiffs obtained a decree for R3,976-10-10 against the widow and her son P. In execution of that decree they attached under an order, dated 2nd July 1895, the immoveable properties which had belonged to the testator's estate on the ground that both the widow and P had an interest in them. The defendants alleged (inter alia) that by an assignment dated the 20th February 1896 the widow had assigned and surrendered her life-interest to her son D, and that such interest was therefore not available to satisfy the plaintiff's decree against her. As to P's interest the defendants alleged that by a deed of settlement, dated the 9th February 1895, it was validly settled for the benefit of himself and his family, and that therefore he had no interest in him which could be attached under the order of the 2nd July 1895. That even independently of the attachment, her assignment to her own son D was invalid as against the plaintiffs under s. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882). The object of that assignment was to protect the property from the creditors and it was designed to defeat the plaintiff's decree and it was therefore fraudulent and void as against the plaintiffs. That the deed of settlement by P of the 9th February 1895 was void as against the plaintiffs under s. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882). That the plaintiffs were entitled to realize the shares and interest both of the widow and of P so far as might be necessary to satisfy their decree of 13th June 1895. Ganpati, the manager of a Hindu undivided family, to recover a sum of money due to him, and on the same day obtained an order for attachment before judgment of certain property belonging to the defendant and his family. Before the attachment was actually effected, the property in question and other property was sold to Kedari (defendant No. 1). The deed of conveyance was executed on the day the suit was filed, and the order for attachment was made and notice of the order for attachment was given both to the vendor and the purchaser before the deed was registered, but before the attachment was actually effected. Subsequently the plaintiff obtained a money-decree in his suit, and then filed this suit against the vendor and purchaser, praying for a declaration that the conveyance was fraudulent and void, and that the property was liable to attachment in execution of his decree. The lower Courts dismissed the suit, holding that the sale to the vendee was valid, although made with the object of defeating the anticipated attachment of the plaintiff. On appeal to the High Court :—Held (confirming the decree), that cl. 2 of s. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) did not apply, as it was not found that the transfer in question was made fraudulently or for a grossly inadequate consideration. Held, also, that, although the object of the transfer was to defeat an anticipated execution, that did not show that the intent was to defeat or delay the creditory so as to render cl. 1 of s. 53 applicable. Such intent would probably be inferred if their was such an inadequacy of consideration as to bring the case within cl. 1 of s. 53. On the 11th August 1897, another creditor, Jaitha Kupaji, obtained letters of administration to the estate of the deceased, and, as such administrator, sold the property to the son of mortgagee, the latter having died. Subsequently the plaintiffs obtained a money-decree against the estate and sued to establish their right to attach the property, alleging that the sale was void under s. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882). The lower Appellate Court held that the purchase was for value, and that there was no evidence of fraud, and it dismissed the suit. On second appeal :—Held (affirming the decree), that the sale was valid. The fact that it was a sale of the whole of the property of the deceased to one of his creditors made no difference. The only question was whether the transaction was in good faith and for proper consideration. The test of good faith in such cases is whether the transfer is a mere cloak for retaining a benefit to the grantor. On the findings of the lower Court it appeared that in this case it was intended that the grantee should have the property and keep it. NATHA KUPAJI v. MAGANCHAND MOTIJI (1903) I. L. This mortgage was found to be fictitious and without consideration and to have been made solely for the purpose of defeating the creditors of the mortgagors. On the 15th of August 1898 the mortgagee transferred his rights under this mortgage to his wife B, in part satisfaction of her dower debt. It was found that this was a bonâ fide transaction and that B obtained the transfer of the mortgage without any knowledge of its fraudulent character and was a transferee in good faith and for consideration. On the 29th of October 1897 the same property was again mortgaged to one BP, who accepted the mortgage in ignorance of the existence of the mortgage of the 23rd October 1897. This mortgage was registered on the 22nd of March 1898. BP afterwards brought a suit for sale on his mortgage impleading B as a defendant, as well as the mortgagor and the prior mortgagee. Held, that B was entitled

II, Arts. 132, 111—Art. 132 applies to suits to enforce the charge created by s. 55 of the Transfer of Property Act.* The statutory charge, which an unpaid vendor obtains under s. 55 of the Transfer of Property Act, is different in its origin and nature from the vendor's lien given by English Courts of Equity to an unpaid vendor. Webb v. Macpherson, I. L. R. 31 Calc. 57, referred to and applied. The article of the Limitation Act applicable to a suit to enforce such charge is Art. 132 of Sch. following terms: "Deed of consent or permission granted to . . . . . , by . . . . . in consideration of this amount, the trees standing . . . . . shall be cut down at your expense during a period of 6 years from this date, with the exception of teak and blackwood. For every cart load of timber so removed . . . you are to pay a kuttikanam of R2-4-0 and on those timber, the seal of the Etam shall be impressed without delay . . . . during the period of 6 years, the Etam shall not grant any permission to others to cut trees . . . . You have the right to cut down trees and none whatever to the land." The first defendant and the other defendants formed a Tarward and in a suit brought on behalf of the Tarward against P and the first defendant, it was declared that the karar was not binding on the Tarward and P was restrained from cutting timber. The present suit was instituted by P to recover personally from the first defendant and from the Tarward properties the amount advanced with interest as damages. Held, that the suit so far as the Tarward properties were concerned was res judicata by reason of the decision in the previous suit. Held, also, that the suit as against the first defendant was barred by limitation. The article applicable to the suit is either Art. 62 or Art. 97 of Sch. II of the Limitation Act. The document is not a sale or lease of immoveable property within the definition of those terms in the Transfer of Property Act and a covenant for title or for quiet enjoyment cannot be implied under s. 5 (2) or s. 108 (b) of the Act. Art. 116 of Sch. II of the Limitation Act does not apply to the case. The document did not create a mortgage or charge on immoveable property. It is no more than an exclusive license to cut trees. A document may create an interest in land and bring it within the provisions of the Registration Act. The covenant of title will not necessarily be implied in such cases unless it is one of the transactions in which the covenant can be implied under the Transfer of Property Act. *Seeni Chettiar v. unpaid purchase-money—Estoppel—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 115. In a registered sale-deed of a chawl it was stated that the vendor had received consideration in full and there was also an acknowledgment of the vendor at the foot of the deed to the same effect. The vendor had also parted with all the title-deeds relating to the property. The vendee subsequently mortgaged the property to the plaintiff who had no knowledge that the full amount of the consideration-money was not paid to the vendor though he knew that the vendor was in possession of some portion of the property. Held, that the defendant (the vendor) was estopped from contending that she had a lien on the chawl for the unpaid balance of the purchase-money by her declaration as to the receipt of the whole purchase-money and by her act in handing over the title-deeds. Per Batchelor, J.—A vendor of immoveable property who endorses upon the purchase-deed a receipt for the purchase-money cannot set up a lien for unpaid purchase-money as against a mortgagee for value without notice under the purchaser. Where the adjustment of matters, which form part, but are not the essence and substance of the contract, cannot be carried out in the mode contemplated, the Court will do whatever may be right and proper to effect such an adjustment itself. Dinham v. Bradford, L. R. 5 Ch. App. 519, referred to. Where a deed of sale provides that the vendee shall pay "the amount due, as per sub-division of the peshkush due to Government" and the deed contains no other words to show that the sub-division was a pre-requisite to the vendee's liability, the mere use of the words as per sub-division does not make it such and, where no sub-division is effected and the vendor pays the whole peshkush, the Court will ascertain, as between the vendor and vendee, the proportion payable by the latter and direct payment thereof. An acknowledgment of a conditional liability will not, under s. 19 of the Limitation Act, give a fresh start as long as the condition remains unfulfilled. to marshall. A bonâ fide purchaser, who purchases for value a portion of a mortgaged property without notice of such mortgage has no right, in a suit by the mortgagee to enforce his mortgage, to insist that the portion not sold to him must be proceeded against first and the portion purchased by him must be sold only for the balance, if any, due. Under ss. 67 and 68 of the Transfer of Property Act, the mortgagee is entitled to an order that the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof should be sold on default of payment. The purchaser cannot claim such a right under s. 81 or s. 56 of the Transfer of Property Act, as the former applies only to second mortgagees and the latter confers such right only "as against the seller." Krishna Ayyar v. *Muthukumarasawmiya Pallai, I. It is competent to the Court under s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act to order a sufficient portion of the mortgaged property to be sold; and, if the portion not sold by the mortgagor is sufficient, and if the mortgagee will not be prejudiced, the Court may by its decree direct such unsold portion to be sold first; and if the decree directs the sale of the whole property, the Court in execution may first bring to sale the portion unsold and, if the sale-proceeds be sufficient, stop the sale of the portion sold by the mortgagor. 2. ——— Registration of mortgage—Interest in land—Right to redeem immoveable property mortgaged. Two documents were produced in evidence ; one of which was in terms an absolute sale. This document had been registered. The other document (which was not dated) had apparently been written contemporaneously with the first, but it had not been registered. The document purported to show that the transaction between the parties was a mortgage. Held, that the second document could not be received as evidence of a mortgage transaction not below R100, and that the registration of the first document, which was on the face of it an absolute and unconditional sale, could not be regarded or operate as the registration of a mortgage. Though there is nothing to prevent the whole of a mortgage transaction being reduced in any form to writing on different papers, whether attached together or detached, yet the requirements as to registration cannot be said to have been complied with, if some of such papers are registered while others are left unregistered. A document which gives a person a right to redeem a mortgage on immoveable property on payment of money creates an interest in immoveable property and its registration is compulsory under s. 7 of the Registration Act. On the 3rd June 1893, D deposited these mortgage-deeds with G's agent in Calcutta as security for his debt to G. On the 19th June 1893, D wrote a letter to G's agent which, after reciting the amount of the debt, contained amongst others the following clause:—"That I shall pay him one-fourth of R70,000 within a fortnight, one-fourth by promissory note payable six months from date, and the remaining half by a promissory note payable within a year. In the meantime and until payment of the claim in full of Raja Gokul Doss (G) you will hold as agent for him the mortgage kistbandi, dated 25th Falgoon 1292, executed in my favour by Babu Bagabatty Charan Roy and others as enumerated below, which I have already made over to you as such agent as aforesaid as security for the due payment of the said debt, not to be parted with by you without mutual consent of myself and Raja Gokul Dass, or under an order of Court." Held, that the mortgage was concluded on the day when the deeds were deposited with G's agent in Calcutta, and that under s. 59 of the Transfer of Property Act a valid equitable sub-mortgage was created in favour of G on that day. Kadar Nath Dutt v. Sham Lal Khettry, 20 W. R. 150, referred to. Upon a suit by the equitable sub-mortgagee (G) to enforce his mortgage against the original mortgagor R and a subsequent mortgagee, the defence was that the alleged equitable mortgage, which was created by a letter, not being registered under s. 17 of the Registration Act had no validity at all; and that it could not have priority over the subsequent legal mortgage. Held, that a deposit of title-deeds of certain property under a verbal arrangement to secure payment of a debt was not an oral agreement or declaration relating to such property within the meaning of s. 48 of the Registration Act, but the transaction was a valid equitable mortgage within the meaning of s. 59 of the Transfer of Property Act, and it did not require registration. Coggan v. Pogose, I. L. R. 11 Calc. 158, followed. Held, further, that in India there is no such distinction between legal and equitable estates as is known in England, and if the claim of the subsequent legal mortgagee can be sustained, it can only be sustained under s. 48 of the Registration Act. Webb v. Macpherson, *I. and placed him in possession of the property. In 1901 the plaintiffs tendered the amount of the principal to the defendant, but it was not accepted. The plaintiffs in consequence filed a suit under s. 62 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) to recover possession of the mortgaged property, and at the same time, under s. 83 of the Act, deposited the amount of the principal in Court as the amount payable on the mortgage. The Court passed a decree for possession. In 1904 the plaintiffs filed another suit to recover mesne profits from the defendant from the date of the deposit to the date when he recovered possession of the mortgaged property from the defendant in execution of the redemption decree in the previous suit. The claim was disallowed on the ground of res judicata. Held, that the plaintiffs having failed to ask for mesne profits in the previous suit, his present claim was barred either under s. 13 or 43 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The profits derived by a mortgagee after a proper tender made or after the amount due has been deposited in Court are profits for which he has to account to the mortgagor in virtue of a liability tacked on, so to say, by the Statute to the mortgage contract; and as such a claim to them by the mortgagor is one arising from and connected with his right to redeem or recover possession of the property. From the date of the tender or of the deposit, as the case may be, the mortgagee continues as mortgagee but with a statutory liability to account for the profits received by him from that date. He is not then a mere trespasser but a mortgagee still, holding the property as a kind of trustee for the mortgagor and as such accountable to the latter for the profits. The assignee of a mortgage decree purchasing a portion of the mortgaged properties, acquires over such portion a lien for only a proportionate share of the mortgage amount. The implied covenant on the part of the mortgagor, under s. 65 of the Transfer of Property Act, to pay the public charges on the properties mortgaged does not extend to the purchaser of the equity of redemption from the mortgagor. Such purchaser in omitting to pay such charges does not fail to discharge any obligation owing from him to a mortgagee of the said properties, and in purchasing such properties at a revenue sale for non-payment of such charges, he does not gain an advantage as qualified owner in derogation of the rights of the mortgagee or other persons interested in the property so as to constitute him a constructive trustee for them under s. 90 of the Trusts Act. The defendants having failed to pay the amount due on the first mortgage, the first mortgagee obtained a decree and brought the land to sale. The plaintiff then brought a suit in the Small Cause Court to recover the amount due on footing of his hypothecation-bond. Held, that the hypothecation-bond contained no personal covenant by the obligors, but that on the construction of ss. 65 and 68 of the Transfer of Property Act the obligors

2. ——— Sale of mortgaged premises under Land Acquisition Act—Personal suit by mortgagee. The sale of mortgaged premises under the Land Acquisition Act is not a destruction of the security within the meaning of s. 68 of the Transfer of Property Act, and does not enable the mortgagee to sue the mortgagor personally. 4. ——— Personal decree against mortgagor—Right of suit. Suit for a personal decree on a usufructuary mortgage which contained no express covenant to pay, but provided that, if the mortgagor repaid the secured debt before a certain date (now passed), he should be replaced in possession. The mortgaged premises had been attached in execution of a decree obtained by a third party against the mortgagor, and a claim preferred by the plaintiff having been erroneously rejected and the premises sold, he was dispossessed. The mortgagee accordingly brought his suit as above. Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to maintain the suit either under the terms of the mortgage or under Transfer of Property Act, s. 68. The lease was for a term certain with a covenant that the mortgagor might renew on compliance with certain conditions. The mortgagor, on the expiry of the lease, did not fulfil the conditions of the said covenant, but refused to give up possession of the mortgaged property to the mortgagees. Held, that the mortgagees were entitled, either under cl. (b) (as held by EDGE, C.J., and TYRRELL, J.) or under cl. (c) (a) held by KNOX, BANERJI, and BURKITT, JJ.) of s. 68 of Act IV of 1882, to a money decree for the amount due under the mortgage. Shitab Dei v. *Ajudhia Prasad, All. The disturbance of the mortgagee's possession by a trespasser will not confer upon the mortgagee a right to sue the mortgagor for the mortgage-money. Gopalasami v. *Arunachella, 1. L. 9. ——— Mortgage—Right of mortgagee to sue for mortgage-money. Where on the execution of a usufructuary mortgage the mortgagor fraudulently suppressed the fact that there was outstanding against the mortgaged property a decree for sale on a prior mortgage, and this decree was subsequently put into execution, it was held, that the mortgagee was entitled, under s. 68 (c) of the Transfer of Property of Act, 1882, to sue the mortgagor for the mortgage-money. The mortgage in question contained a covenant that, if any "khalal" occurred, the mortgagor would be responsible and would repay the mortgage-money. Held, that the expression "khalal" could not be confined to an unforeseen event or accident; but would include the consequences of conduct such as that of which the mortgagor had been guilty. 4. ——— Mortgage—Redemption of part—Whole burden on remainder—Purchase by mortgagee of portion of mortgaged property—Enhancement of Government revenue—Compensation for improvements. G, the predecessor in title of the plaintiffs, mortgaged Kachaura to N K, the predecessor of the defendant, and subsequently mortgaged 11 biswas of Kachaura and 6 biswas of Agrana to N K. N K obtained a decree on the first mortgage and purchased the whole of Kachaura. The plaintiffs acquired from G the equity of redemption in 5 biswas of Agrana and brought the suit, out of which these two appeals arose, to redeem this 5½-biswa share on payment of a proportionate amount of the mortgage money and to recover surplus profits, if any. The parties submitted to the decision of the Lower Courts that the plaintiffs must redeem the whole 6-biswa share. Held, in S. A. 265 of 1904, that the answer to the question whether the defendant mortgagee could throw the whole burden of the second mortgage on the remainder of the mortgaged property depended on the circumstances under which his purchase was made. If two persons jointly mortgaged property to a third person, who subsequently purchased the equity of redemption from one of them, he could not throw the whole burden of his mortgage on the other. But in this case the purchase was made at an open sale and not subject to any charge, and the defendant could throw the whole burden on the remaining property. The second mortgage further contained clauses (a) that if the Government revenue was enhanced the mortgagor was to be liable for the amount of the enhancement, (b) that if the mortgagee spent any money in the construction of wells the mortgagor would refund him the amount at the time of redemption. Held, in S. A. 298 of 1904, (a) that the defendant mortgagee, having paid enhanced revenue to save the property, upon failure by the mortgagor, was entitled to receive from the plaintiff the whole amount of the enhancement with interest. Girdhari Lal v. *Bhola Nath, I. R1,400; the deed stated that the money was borrowed with a view to discharge a prior mortgage, and proceeded "as you have undertaken to pay R1,000 to the mortgagee, I credit you with R1,000 and receive R402 in cash." The plaintiff paid off the prior mortgagee on the 18th April 1890, but did not obtain possession, other persons having entered in the interests of the institution. The plaintiff now sued for possession and a declaration of his mortgage right, the persons in possession and the prior mortgagee, but not the mortgagors, being joined as defendants. Held, that the Transfer of Property Act, s. 74, was not applicable to the case, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to a decree. At a still later date, the mortgagor gave a further usufructuary mortgage over it to the predecessor in title of the third defendant. Plaintiffs then sued the mortgagors on their two mortgages, obtained a decree and brought the property to sale, when it was purchased by the second plaintiff, the undivided brother of the first plaintiff. The third defendant was not made a party to this suit. Plaintiffs now sued the mortgagors as well as the third defendant, and prayed that the third defendant might be decreed to pay them the amount of their decree, and that in default it be declared that the third defendant be absolutely debarred of his right to redeem the prior mortgagee, and that he be ordered to surrender possession of the property to plaintiffs. Held, that the right of the third defendant was not affected by either the decree or the sale; the only effect of the sale being to transfer to the purchaser (the first mortgagee) the equity of redemption of the mortgagor. Held, also, that the only right that the third defendant had now was that which he could have claimed to exercise if he had been a party to the suit on the prior mortgage, namely, a right to redeem that mortgage with the view of enforcing his own mortgage. Muhammad Usan Rowthan v. *Abdulla, I. 1. ——— Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 3, 78—Gross negligence—How far registration amounts to notice—Registration Act, s. 50. Where a mortgagee prior in date duly investigated the title of the mortgagor, but after the execution of the mortgage returned the title-deeds to the mortgagor, according to the custom prevailing in the mofussil, and subsequent thereto a mortgagee in Calcutta advanced moneys on one of those title-deeds without any actual notice of the prior mortgage, but without having duly investigated the mortgagor's title or searched the register:—Held, that the prior mortgagee was not within s. 78 of the Transfer of Property Act guilty of such gross negligence as would postpone her mortgage to the subsequent mortgagee and the conduct of the subsequent mortgagee was not such as to create any predominating equity in his favour. The fact that there is in this country a universal system of registration is one of the circumstances to be taken into consideration in determining the question of gross negligence; Semble: The question whether registration is notice or not is a question of fact, and as each case arises it should be determined whether the omission to search the register together with the other facts amounts to such gross negligence as to attract the consequence which results from notice. Tomb v. *Rand, 2 Bro. 2. ——— Gross negligence—Failure to get possession of title-deed does not necessarily amount to gross negligence where system of registration exists—Delay, effect of, in registration of documents. A mortgaged property to B on 21st December 1896 and subsequently mortgaged the same property to C on 20th January 1897. A wilfully delayed the registration of the mortgage-deed to B, which was finally registered on the 21st April 1897. The title-deeds of the property were not given to B, but were given to C, when the property was mortgaged to him. The mortgage was executed outside Madras and was in respect of property in the mofussil. In a suit by C to recover the amount due on his mortgage-deed, C claimed priority over B on the ground that B was guilty of gross negligence in not obtaining possession of the title-deeds. Held, that the failure on B's part to obtain the title-deeds from A did not, under the circumstances, amount to gross negligence within the meaning of s. 78 of the Transfer of Property Act and did not postpone his mortgage to that of C. Held, further, that the delay in the registration being due to the default of A, which B could not have anticipated, did not make B's failure in obtaining the title-deeds amount to gross negligence. What amounts to gross negligence must be determined according to the circumstances of each case; and one of the circumstances to be taken into consideration in this country is that a universal system of registration is established by law. As registration puts subsequent incumbrancers in a position, with the exercise of reasonable care, to find out prior incumbrances, failure on the part of the prior mortgagee to get possession of the title-deeds must not be imputed to him as gross negligence. The system of registration having caused mortgagees to attach little importance to the possession of title-deeds, the existence of a practice by which the title-deeds are left with the mortgagor must also be taken into consideraion. Another fact to be considered is that the possession of title-deeds in the Presidency towns, where mortgages may be created by depositing them, is of greater importance than in the mofussil. Damodara v. *Somasundara, I. In 1886 A hypothecated the house now in suit to the plaintiff. In this suit the plaintiff sought to recover the principal and interest due on his security of 1886, and he contended that X and Y who were defendants 4 and 5, were not justified in permitting B to retain R150 of the price, and that that sum should accordingly be debited against them in the accounts. Held, that, under the Transfer of Property Act, s. 82, plaintiff was not entitled to compel defendants 4 and 5 to satisfy their debt against B's house so far as it extended. At the date of this mortgage, some of the villages comprised therein were liable under one or both of two decrees obtained on prior mortgages. Subsequently to the decree of the 28th of February 1878, four of the villages affected by that decree were sold in execution of a simple money-decree and were acquired from the purchasers by one A. On the 20th of August 1879 and the 20th of August 1882 these same four villages were brought to sale in execution of the decree of the 28th of February 1878, and were sold for R44,500. Thereupon the former purchaser A brought a suit against the representative of the mortgagee of 1874 and certain other persons for contribution, alleging that the said four villages had been sold for considerably more than the amount for which they were proportionately liable under the mortgage-decree; that the defendants were owners of villages which were equally liable with his (the plaintiff's) villages under the decree of the 28th of February 1878, but which had contributed nothing towards the satisfaction of that decree; that six of those villages and an eighth share in a seventh had been purchased by S (the predecessor in title of one of the defendants H), in execution of simple money-decrees, and that a share in an eighth village had been similarly purchased by the predecessor in title of the other defendants. Against these villages the plaintiff sought contribution. Held, that, in calculating the amount to which the plaintiff was entitled by way of contribution, the plaintiff was bound to take into account the liabilities which existed on most of the villages in respect of which the suit was brought under the two prior mortgages; that the plaintiff was entitled to obtain contribution from those villages only which had not been sold in execution of the decree of the 28th of February 1878; that the unrealized balance of that decree must be regarded as the amount which the villages purchased by the decree-holder himself had contributed to the decree; and further that, in determining the amount which the plaintiff was entitled to recover, regard must be had to the claims for contribution of the owners of such of the other mortgaged villages as had been sold in execution of the decree of the 28th of February 1878, and had, like the plaintiff's villages, fetched more than their quota of liability for the decree. 4. ——— Contribution—Liability of several properties to rateable contribution "in the absence of a contract to the contrary." The owner of certain lands mortgaged them, and subsequently effected a partition of the family property between himself and his three sons. By the terms of that partition, the father and his sons each took a fourth share in the family property and each became liable for a fourth of the mortgage-debt. One of the sons then sold the greater portion of his share in the mortgaged property to plaintiff giving plaintiff a security bond for a sum of money and hypothecating other lands to indemnify plaintiff from any loss which might arise if the original mortgagee should bring the mortgaged lands to sale. The mortgagee obtained a decree on his mortgage, in execution of which a portion of the mortgaged land was sold, including that which plaintiff had bought. The proceeds of sale of the said portion were sufficient to satisfy the mortgagee's decree. Plaintiff then sued on his security bond, and the land hypothecated to him was sold, plaintiff receiving the amount secured by the bond. He now sued under s. 82 of the Transfer of Property Act, and claimed rateable contribution from the other portions of the mortgaged property which had not been sold to satisfy the mortgagee's decree. Held, that he was entitled to recover, and that his right to rateable contribution was in no way affected by the indemnity bond or the payment made to him thereunder. Held, further, that the words "in the absence of a contract to the contrary," in s. 82 of the Transfer of Property Act, apply to contracts between a mortgagor and mortgagee, and that an agreement which is binding only as between the mortgagors is not "a contract to the contrary," within the meaning of the section. 5. ——— Contribution to mortgage-debt—Liability of land in possession of third person. Certain land was mortgaged to R. Subsequently a portion of the land comprised in R's mortgage was mortgaged to plaintiffs together with other land. R then obtained a decree on his mortgage, in pursuance whereof the said portion of R's security which was also mortgaged to plaintiffs was sold. R's decree was thus satisfied, without the necessity for the sale of the remaining land which comprised R's security. This remaining land was purchased by some of the defendants. Plaintiffs now sued on their mortgage, and claimed not only as against their mortgagors, and the property comprised in their security, but also, on the principle of contribution, sought to charge any balance which might still remain due as against the remaining land already referred to as having been purchased by some of the defendants. Held, that plaintiffs were not entitled to enforce contribution against the defendants. Semble: That, if the claim for contribution were maintainable, it ought not to have been joined with the ordinary claim on a mortgage. Plaintiffs had purchased a portion of the property comprised in their own mortgage when it was sold in execution of R's decree, already referred to. By that purchase they had made a profit. It was contended that plaintiffs in their character of second mortgagees stood in a fiduciary position towards their mortgagors, and that they were not entitled to be treated as independent strangers buying at an auction-sale. There was nothing to show that plaintiffs had taken any advantage of their position. Held, that plaintiffs took an absolute title, such as strangers might have taken. Held, also, that their claim on their mortgage was not affected by their purchase of part of the property, since under the circumstances they must be taken to have paid the full value of the unincumbered property. The owners of certain property, wishing to raise a sum of ₹10,500 on mortgage, executed two mortgages in favour of the same mortgagees over the same lands, on the same day;—one for ₹10,000 and another for ₹500. The later instrument recited the bond for ₹10,000 as a prior mortgage. The mortgagees then sued on the mortgage for ₹500, and obtained a decree, under which portions of the security were sold, subject to liability under the mortgage for ₹10,000. The mortgagees now sued on the mortgage for ₹10,000, when it was objected that the suit was not maintainable by reason of s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held, that this objection was not sustainable, and that, regarding the case as one of a mere personal claim on the instrument of mortgage, s. 43 did not apply. Although all the properties mortgaged may be originally equally liable for the mortgage-debt, this liability may be altered by a mortgage-decree or by arrangement made by the parties, by which the incidence of the debt may be thrown, as was done in this case, primarily on some of the properties, and the other properties are only liable if the debt is not realized by the sale of those properties. Whatever might have been the right of the purchaser of some of the properties if such a mortgage-decree had not been passed, he cannot, when he has purchased the properties subsequently to the decree, and subject to the mortgage and the arrangements made with regard to it, call upon the purchasers of the other properties to contribute except as provided in that decree. On objections being taken that the decree-holder was not entitled to do so, and that even if he could do so the decretal amount ow sought to be recovered should be apportioned between the properties purchased by him and the remaining properties. Held, that the decree-holder was entitled to execute his decree against any of the mortgaged properties. Held, further, that the question of apportionment must be tried and disposed of in a separate litigation, and could not properly be considered and decided in execution proceedings. Harendra Kumar Guha v. *Din Dayal Saha, 4 C. 9. ——— Mortgagor and mortgagee—Requisites of valid tender—Mortgagee wishing to gain possession—Mortgagor's right to redeem—Construction of mortgage-deed. In a mortgage-deed after enumerating several contingencies provision was made under on the happening of any of them in the following terms: "Notwithstanding anything contained to the contrary the mortgage-debt for the time being owing on the security of these presents shall at once become payable as if the due date or extended date, if any, had elapsed, and in such case all such rights and remedies shall be available to the Banker as will be available to her under the terms of these presents upon default being made in payment of the principle moneys or interest and all other moneys thereby secured and the Banker may in such event in her discretion without any further consent on the part of the Company forthwith enter upon and take possession of the mortgaged premises or any of them of which she is not already in possession." Owing to the happening of some of the contingencies the plaintiff, the mortgagee, claimed that the debt owing on the security of the mortgage-deed had become payable and that she was entitled to enter upon and take possession of the premises mortgaged to her. She contended that the expression "as if the due date had elapsed" not only served to accelerate the due date, but also to fix the amount of the mortgage-money at what it would have been if in fact the due date had elapsed. The defendant alleged a tender of the mortgage-money to the plaintiff's attorneys and a refusal to accept the same, and claimed to redeem the property. Held, (i) that the words "as if the due date had elapsed" were used merely to accelerate payment and they could not be construed to cover the further amount that would have been due on the expiry of the due date of the mortgage. (ii) That the tender was not good, as the plaintiff's attorney disclaimed authority to receive it. (iii) That the defendant was entitled to redeem the property. Per CURIAM.—A tender must be made either to the principal, whose business it is to consider it, or to his authorised agent, and a tender made to a person, who disclaims authority to receive it is made at the maker's risk. Watson v. *Hetherington, I. The mortgagees refused to accept this sum in discharge of the mortgage, and the mortgagor filed a suit for redemption, without, however, withdrawing from Court the money which he had deposited, In this suit the mortgagor obtained a decree for redemption on payment of the sum deposited, plus a small item for costs ; and an appeal by the defendants from this decree was dismissed. The defendants then appealed to the High Court, but, pending their appeal, were allowed by the Court in which it was deposited to withdraw the money, paid in by the plaintiff under s. 83. Held, that the defendants had, after such withdrawal of the money deposited by the plaintiff, no right to proceed with their appeal. The money deposited by the mortgagor plaintiff continued to be held by the Court on the terms upon which it was originally deposited, and the defendants were only entitled thereto upon fulfilling the conditions laid down in s. 83 of the Transfer of Property Act, that is to say, if they stated their willingness to accept the money deposited in full discharge of their mortgage, and deposited the mortgage-deed (if in their possession or power) in Court. On 27th October 1890, interest to the amount of R23,403-15-6 had at various times been paid and that was all that was due for interest up to that date. Nothing more was paid until, on 17th August 1895, the mortgagor being anxious to redeem the mortgage tendered to the mortgagee, in full discharge of the bond, the sum of R44,596-0-6, a sum fixed, as amounting together with the interest already paid, to R68,000, which by s. 6 of Regulation III of 1872, as amended by s. 24 of Regulation V of 1893, was the full amount (being double the principal) which the mortgagor considered could be recovered from him on the bond On tendering that amount the mortgagor demanded the return of the bond, but the mortgagee, though willing to give a receipt for the money, could not give him the bond, and the mortgagor deposited the money in Court under the provisions of s. 83 of the Transfer of Property Act, that is, in full discharge of the bond. Notice of the deposit was sent to the mortgagee, but the money was not withdrawn until 23rd September 1896, when a Receiver appointed in a partnership suit between the members of the mortgagee's firm succeeded in withdrawing it by some means not disclosed and without the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act, for such withdrawals being followed. On 7th February 1900 the mortgagee and his partner brought a suit on the bond for R33,698-9, in which they credited the amount of R44,596-0-6 as having been paid in part satisfaction of the bond on the day when it was drawn out, and charged interest and compound interest at 12 per cent. on the entire sum (R22,859-5) shown to be due on that date. The pleas in defence were s. 6 of the Regulation III of 1872 as limiting the amount of interest recoverable, and the deposit under s. 83 of the Transfer of Property Act as being a full discharge of the bond. The High Court, affirming the decree of the Subordinate Judge, held on the construction of the Regulations that the plaintiffs having received the principal and a sum for interest equal to the principal there was nothing more due and dismissed the suit. Held by the Judicial Committee, that in the absence of anything to show that he had any greater power or authority to withdraw the money than the plaintiffs themselves had the Receiver must be taken to have withdrawn it subject to the conditions prescribed by s 83 of the Transfer of Property Act, that is, in full discharge of the bond. The plaintiffs were bound by the acts of their agent and could not rely upon the Receiver's default in omitting to perform any of the necessary conditions, in order to escape from the consequences which would of necessity have followed the withdrawal if everything prescribed by the Act had been rightly done. The amount was paid by a puisne mortgagee, who was a party in the suit and was taken out by the decree-holder : Held, that under s. 74 of the Transfer of Property Act the puisne mortgagee acquired all the rights and powers of the prior mortgagee as such, but the rights so acquired were not such as could be worked out in execution of the decree made in favour of the prior mortgagee, that decree having been discharged by the payment. A separate suit to enforce those rights was not therefore barred by s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. The existence of a decree cannot, by the operation of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, bar a fresh suit between the parties in respect of rights, which cannot be worked out without additions to the decree which the Court of execution has no power to make. The form of order given in s. 86 of the Transfer of Property Act contemplates a suit between one mortgagee and the mortgagors only and should be treated as a common form not to be literally followed in every suit for foreclosure but to be adapted to the particular circumstances of each case. For the purpose of making decree in which the rights of puisne incumbrancers to redeem would be recognised and provision made for the event of their being exercised, a form similar to that which obtains in the Chancery Division of the High Court in England might be found appropriate. On the contention being raised, on appeal, that the order was null and void for want of notice to the defendant :—Held, that the view of the majority of the Court in Mallikarjunadu Setti v. *Lingamurty Pantulu, I. 4. ——— Mortgage—Suit for foreclosure—Appeal—Application for order absolute for foreclosure—Limitation—Execution of decree—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Art. 178. The plaintiff sued for foreclosure of a mortgage which purported to comprise five villages. On the 19th of June 1899 he obtained a decree, but it was in respect of three villages only. As to these the decree provided for foreclosure in default of payment by the defendants of a sum of R39,584-6-8 on or before the 19th of December 1899. The plaintiff did not ask for an order absolute for foreclosure in respect of this decree, but appealed against the dismissal of his suit as regards the two remaining villages. This appeal was dismissed on the 4th of August 1902. No part of the mortgage-money was paid ; and on the 15th of September 1903, the decree-holder appealed under s. 87 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, for an order absolute for foreclosure. Held, that the decree-holder's application was not barred by limitation. The nature of proceedings for foreclosure is such that a mortgage must be foreclosed as a whole or not at all. The decree-holder in this case could not have applied for an order absolute for foreclosure on the decree of the 19th of June 1899, without giving up his appeal from that decree. Raham Ilahi Khan v. *Ghasita, I. TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT (IV OF 1882)—contd

A decree for sale under s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act in a final decree; and all subsequent proceedings are proceedings in execution of that decree and the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure apply to them so far as they are applicable. In the absence of anything to the contrary in the decree the judgment-debtor is entitled to stop execution by payment of the debt at any time after the decree is passed, and before the sale in execution is complete; and it is not finally complete, until he has had an opportunity of obtaining its rescission under s. 310 (A) of the Code. Mallikarjunadu Setti v. Lingamurti Pantulu, I. L. R. 25 Mad. 244, followed. Bibijan Bibi v. Sachi Bewah, I. L. R. 31 Calc. 863, followed. The provision in a decree for sale at the suit of a mortgagee for delivery of possession in the event of payment within time need not, to that extent, be necessarily considered as a decree or order in favour of the mortgagor with all the incidents of a decree for redemption in a suit brought by the mortgagor himself. The provision may well be regarded as laying down the conditions on which the mortgagee is to receive payment. Even if regarded as a decree in favour of the defendant mortgagor, a decree forced on him by the mortgagee. It is not easy to see why the mortgagee by forcing this decree on the mortgagor should be enabled to convert his decree for sale into one for foreclosure. The mortgagor as decree-holder may waive the benefit of the decree thus forced on him; his right as judgment-debtor to pay the debt into the execution Court and have satisfaction entered up will remain unaffected. Vallabha Valia Rajah v. Vedupuratti, I. L. R. 19 Mad. 40, considered. The rule of law laid down that a mortgagor, who has obtained a decree for redemption, cannot apply for execution of the decree after expiry of the time limited, must be confined to a decree for redemption passed at the suit of the mortgagor. The right of the mortgagor to possession on payment of the decretal amount raises a question relating to the satisfaction of the decree within the meaning of s. 244 of the Code, and must be determined by the Court executing the decree. He is not bound to bring a separate suit for possession. The deed of usufructuary mortgage on which the suit was brought provided for redemption in the month of May. The decree contained no restrictions as to the date of payment and the mortgagor paid the money into Court in November and ousted the mortgagee. In determining the amount to which the mortgagee was entitled as interest:—Held, that the original contract to take the usufruct in lieu of interest was determined when the mortgagee sued for and obtained a decree for sale and that the mortgagee was not entitled to the melwaram for the whole year, but might, in the agreement of the parties, be given a proportionate share for the six months after May. The parties not agreeing, the Court on further consideration awarded interest at the Court rate of 6 per cent. after the period fixed for redemption. That it was not incumbent upon the mortgagee decree-holder to make the purchasers parties to the proceedings even if the decree-holder was aware of the sale. But it was the duty of the purchasers to apply to be made parties to the proceedings and, in those proceedings, to claim under their purchase the right to redeem the mortgage. That not having done so their purchase did not confer on them any right in the mortgaged properties as against the mortgagee decree-holder who subsequently purchased the properties in execution of the mortgage-decree. Semble: The doctrine of lis pendens applies to ex parte decrees and in mortgage suits. The prior mortgagee's decree being partly satisfied the puisne mortgagee paid the balance of what was due under that decree and then proceeded to apply for an order absolute for sale not only of the property comprised in the prior mortgage, in respect of which a decree had been obtained, but of the property comprised in his own mortgage. Held, that the applicant was not entitled to any order in respect of his own mortgage. Bansi Dhar v. *Gaya Prasad, I. The provisions of s. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act have reference to the execution of a mortgage-decree and ought not, in reason, to be so construed as to render the application of this principle impossible in cases where an order absolute for sale had been made on the ground that such order extinguished the security. Dinobundhu Shaw Chowdhry v. *Jogmaya Dasi, L. When such an application, unverified, but filed with the decree, does not fully comply with the requirements of s. 235 of the Code of Civil Procedure and is defective only in minor particulars, which can be easily gathered from the decree filed therewith, it may be treated as substantially an application for execution in accordance with law, sufficient to save limitation under Art. 179 of Sch. Where the mortgagee released substantial portions of the mortgaged property and the purchasers of those portions from the mortgage-debt, there being no consent or acquiescence on the part of the mortgagor, and there being nothing to show that the amount which the purchasers paid to the mortgagee was the full and true value of the property, which they purchased. Held, that the mortgagor was entitled to claim to have the mortgaged property sold before a decree could be passed against him under s. 90. Sheo Prasad v. *Behari Lal, I. The property ordered to be sold was brought to sale, but realized an amount insufficient to satisfy the decree. Held, that the decree-holder was under these circumstances competent to apply for and obtain a personal decree against the mortgagor under s. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. Sheo Prasad v. Behari Lal, I. II, Art. 173A. A Court to which an application is made under s. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act has full power to ascertain what balance of the mortgage-debt is really outstanding at the time of the application and to make the order absolute for the realisation of that amount only. S. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code does not apply to an application made under s. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act, that section not having been made applicable by any rule issued by the High Court under s. 104 of the Transfer of Property Act; consequently Art. 173A of Sch. II of the Limitation Act does not apply to the case of any payment made before a decree absolute is made. Any question that arises as to an order absolute for sale is not a question relating to the execution of the decree. Kedar Nath Raut v. *Kali Churn Ram, I. L. 1. ——— Decree for sale on a mortgage—Mortgaged property—Sale in execution of a decree held by a different mortgagee. In order to make the remedy provided by s. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act available, it is necessary that the mortgaged property should have been sold in execution of the decree held by the person applying for a further decree under s. 90. That section does not apply where the mortgaged property has been sold under a decree held by some other person. Mahammad Akbar v. Munshiram, All. Weekly Notes, (1899) 208, followed. RAJ SINGH v. PARMANAND I. L. R. 11 All. 486

3. ——— Mortgage-decree—Order under s. 90 not necessary when decree is a personal one. S. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act contemplates the making of a supplemental decree in the special case provided for by that section, namely, the net proceeds of any sale of the mortgaged property proving insufficient to pay the amount due for the time being on the mortgage and does not apply to a case where the original decree is a personal one against the mortgagor, under which the mortgagee can, in execution, proceed against any property of the mortgagor other than that comprised in the mortgage. No supplemental decree under s. 90 is necessary in such a case. Held, upon a construction of the decree in this case, that it was a mortgage-decree as well as a personal decree against the defendant. 4. ——— Mortgage—Decree for sale—Half of mortgaged property exempted from sale on suit by a third party—Remainder insufficient to satisfy the mortgage-debt. A mortgagee held a decree for sale and an order absolute for sale of the property comprised in his mortgage. Before, however, the sale could be carried out, a third person succeeded in establishing his title to one half of the property mortgaged. The decree-holder brought to sale the remaining half of the property covered by his decree, but the amount realised proved insufficient to satisfy the mortgage-debt. Held, that, under such circumstances, there was no bar to the decree-holder obtaining a decree over against the unhypothecated property of the mortgagor under s. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. Muhammad Akbar v. *Munshi Ram, All. 5. ——— Mortgage—Suit for sale—Premature suit decreed in part on confession of judgment by some of the defendants—Subsequent suit for balance of the mortgage-debt—In a usufructuary mortgage of a shop, a separate dwelling-house was hypothecated as collateral security. The dwelling-house was subsequently sold to third parties. Before the expiry of the term of the mortgage the mortgagee brought a suit to recover the mortgage-debt with interest, and the cost of certain repairs to the shop by sale of both the shop and the dwelling-house. This suit was decreed as against the representatives of the mortgagor, who confessed judgment, but dismissed as against the purchasers of the house as premature. After the expiry of the term of the mortgage, the plaintiff brought a second suit asking for sale of the dwelling-house. Held, that this second suit was not barred. The defendants' purchasers, having formerly pleaded that the plaintiff's suit was premature, could not now plead that his present claim ought to have been included in it; and neither s. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, nor s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure applied. An application, which the Court was not competent to grant, is not one in accordance with law within the meaning of Art. 179, cl. 4, Sch. The plaintiff claimed a personal decree under the terms of the mortgage. Held, that the words "such sale" in s. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act mean a sale of the property directed to be sold by the decree under s. 88 and the order under s. 89, and that the decree-holder was entitled to a decree under s. 90. Sheo Prosad v. *Behari Lall, I. The words of the section show that this direction should have been in a supplemental decree to be passed when the net proceeds of the sale should be found to be insufficient. The original decree should merely have reserved to the plaintiff liberty to apply for a decree under s. 90. divided half of a house and removal of an attachment which was levied under the personal clause of the aforesaid decree, before the birth of the minor:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a direction that the house to the extent of the plaintiff's interest therein be released from attachment. Held, further, that the personal decree was contingent on the ascertainment of the balance and only became operative and capable of execution when the balance was ascertained. Until then the amount of the debt, for which alone the personal decree was passed, could not be stated as required by s. 235 (g) of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). He subsequently sold the whole of this property to C and left with him the bulk of the sale consideration for redemption of the mortgage and sub-mortgage. B obtained a decree for sale of the mortgaged property, but not of the sub-mortgaged property. The proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged property proving insufficient, the decree-holder applied for a decree under s. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act against C and the personal representative of A. Held, that by retaining in his hands parts of the purchase-money and expressly or impliedly agreeing to pay the amount to B, C did not become personally liable, and a decree under s. 90, Transfer of Property Act, could not be made against him. ——— s. 90 and s. 89—Execution of decree—Mortgage—Decree for sale of part only of the mortgaged property—Property sold insufficient to satisfy the mortgage-debt.—Application for decree over, under s. 90. A mortgagee holding a simple mortgage, by which certain immoveable property was hypothecated sued for, and obtained, a decree for the sale of part only of the mortgaged property. Such portion having been sold, and the net proceeds of the sale having proved insufficient to satisfy the mortgage-debt, the decree-holder applied for a decree over, under s. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act, against the unhypothecated property of the mortgagor. Held, that the original decree having been in fact passed, whether rightly or wrongly, for sale of a part only of the mortgaged property, and the sale of that part having realized an amount not sufficient to satisfy the mortgage-debt, there was, under the circumstances, no objection to the mortgagee obtaining a decree over, under s. 90. Semble: That there is nothing to prevent a mortgagee relinquishing his claim against a portion of the mortgaged property, and, if the sale of the remaining portion proves insufficient to satisfy the mortgage-debt, obtaining a decree under s. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act against the unhypothecated property of the mortgagor. A decree was passed for redemption or sale. The plaintiff did not pay the amount decreed, and the property was sold, but it failed to realize the amount of the debt and costs due to the prior mortgagees. Held, that the decree, so far as it affected the puisne mortgagee not being a personal decree, the prior mortgagees could not recover the balance of the amount decreed by arrest of the puisne mortgagee. S. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, could not be so construed as to make it applicable to the present case. Ram Lal v. Sil Chand, I. L. R. 23 All. 439, referred to. The prior mortgagee without making the puisne mortgagees parties to their suit, brought a suit for sale on their mortgage, obtained a decree, and in execution thereof caused lots 1, 2, and 4 out of the property comprised in their mortgage to be sold. Of these lots they themselves purchased lots 1 and 2, and lot 4 was purchased by one Shib Lal. The puisne mortgagees next brought a suit for sale on their mortgage without joining the prior mortgagees as parties, and obtained a decree for sale, which decree was purchased from them by Shib Lal. The proceeds of the sale by the first mortgagees of lots 1, 2, and 4 being insufficient to satisfy their decree, lots 3 and 5 were caused to be put up for sale. Shib Lal thereupon instituted a suit for a declaration that this property could not be sold without giving him an opportunity to redeem, and a decree was passed in his favour. The prior mortgagees then brought a suit against Shib Lal, the mortgagors and the subsequent mortgagees to recover payment of the amount remaining due to the plaintiffs on foot of their prior mortgage by sale of lots 3 and 5. Held, (i) that by reason of the purchase of lots 1 and 2 by the prior mortgagees in execution of their decree the integrity of the mortgage was broken up ; (ii) that the prior mortgagees were entitled to recover by the sale of lots 3 and 5 a rateable portion of the mortgage-debt proportionate to the value of the said lots at the time when the prior mortgage was executed ; (iii) that Shib Lal as representing the puisne mortgagee was not entitled in the present suit, in which he was defendant, to claim to redeem the whole of the property mortgaged, notwithstanding that the puisne mortgagees were not mad parties to the suit of the prior mortgagees, in execution of the decree in which the latter brought to sale and purchased lots 1 and 2. Dina Nath v. *Lachmi Narayan, I. Of this sum R349-15 were left in the hands of the mortgagees to enable them to redeem the mortgage of 1884 and obtain possession of the mortgaged property; and in the deed the sub-mortgagor in express terms transferred his interest in the land, the subject-matter of the mortgage, and agreed that the sub-mortgagees should remain in possession of the land from 1308 to 1314 Fasli, paying rent therefor to the proprietors of the mahal. Held, that the sub-mortgagees from B L were entitled to redeem the prior mortgage of 1884. Ganga Prasad v. *Chunni Lall, I. 2. ——— Failure to pay money on date fixed—Court's power to enlarge time for payment. The failure to pay money on or before the date mentioned in the redemption decree does not absolutely bar the mortgagor's right to obtain possession of the mortgaged property: since the Court may, under s. 93 of the Transfer of Property (Act IV of 1882) upon good cause shown, enlarge the time for payment upon such terms as it thinks fit. The plaintiff within three years of the date of the decree produced in Court the decretal amount and prayed for possession of the mortgaged property. Held, that such an application could be treated as one for enlargement of time under s. 93 of the Transfer of Property Act. Held*, that s. 95 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, cannot be interpreted absolutely according to the letter of the section, for it would then have reference to cases of usufructuary mortgage only, which could not have been the intention of the Legislature. To give effect to what was apparently the intention of the Legislature, it is necessary to read the section in some such way as the following: "Where one of several mortgagors redeems the mortgaged property and obtains possession thereof, if the mortgagee be in possession, he has a charge, etc." Where, therefore, a person, who had a mortgagor's interest in a decree for sale on a mortgage, satisfied the decree and then brought a suit for contribution against

The construction of s. 95 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) should not limit its operation to mortgages under which possession passes, and therefore on redemption properly repasses: the better way is to construe it distributively, to make the condition of obtaining possession apply only to the cases in which its fulfilment is from the nature of the mortgage possible, and in other cases to make the charge follow on redemption. To raise funds for the defence of a relative the plaintiff and defendants jointly executed a bond in the ordinary form, each pledging immoveable property as security. The plaintiff eventually paid off the amount due on the bond and redeemed all the property mortgaged. In a suit, in which he claimed the whole sum paid by him on the ground that he had executed the bond only as a surety, the defendant denied that he was a surety and pleaded that he was only entitled to a rateable amount from each of them. Held, that the plaintiff's failure to prove that he was merely a surety on the bond did not preclude him from recovering a proportionate share from each of the defendants; and that under s. 95 of the Transfer of Property Act, he was entitled also to a charge for such amount on the defendant's interests in the property respectively mortgaged by them. 1. ——— Hindu law—Personal decree against managing member of joint family not impleaded as such—Effect of sale in execution of such decree—Sale of mortgaged property in execution of decree on a money-bond for interest due on the mortgage. The managing member of a joint Hindu family executed in 1878 a mortgage on certain lands, the property of the family, to secure a debt incurred by him for family purposes, and in 1881 he together with his brother executed to the mortgagee a money-bond for the interest then due on the mortgage. In 1882 the mortgagee brought a suit on the money-bond, and, having obtained a personal decree against the two brothers merely, brought to sale in execution part of the mortgaged property which was purchased by a third person. Held, that the sale did not convey the interest of another undivided brother who was not a party to the decree. Held, further, per KERNAN, J., that the sale in execution was invalid under the Transfer of Property Act, s. 99. 2. ——— Money-decree "on the responsibility of" mortgaged premises—Attachment and sale of mortgaged premises—Purchase by mortgagee. A usufructuary mortgagee left the mortgaged premises in the possession of the mortgagor under a rent agreement in 1878. The rent having fallen into arrear, the mortgagee sued the mortgagor in October 1882 and obtained a decree for the arrear which provided for its payment by the mortgagor "on the responsibility of the defendants mulgeni right" in the mortgaged premises. The decree-holder attached the mortgaged premises in execution, and having brought them to sale and purchased them himself, he sued for possession. Held, that the sale was invalid under the Transfer of Property Act, s. 99. 3. ——— Usufructuary mortgage—Suit by usufructuary mortgagee for sale of equity of redemption of mortgaged property in execution of a decree for mesne profits and costs. Certain usufructuary mortgagees, not having been put in possession of the mortgaged property by the mortgagor, sued and obtained a decree for possession with mesne profits and costs. Under this decree, the mortgagees were put in possession of the mortgaged property. They then applied for attachment and sale of the mortgaged property in execution of their decree for mesne profits and costs. This application was disallowed. The mortgagees then brought a suit for sale of the equity of redemption of the mortgaged property, reserving their rights and interests under the mortgage. Held, that such a suit would not lie as being opposed to the intention of s. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. Azim-ullah v. *Najm-un-nissa, I. The decree simply provided that the plaintiff do obtain the amount of his claim, and that the mortgaged property should remain liable for the satisfaction of the debt. The judgment-creditor, in execution of that decree, sold one of the mortgaged properties, and afterwards assigned over the decree, and the assignee, on the 18th August 1894, applied for the execution of the decree by attachment and sale of another of the mortgaged properties. Held, on the objection of the judgment-debtors, that s. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act was applicable to the case, and that the mortgaged property could not be sold, unless a suit under s. 67 of the Act be brought, and the procedure prescribed by the Transfer of Property Act followed. A mortgagee, in execution of a decree obtained against the mortgagor on account of another debt, sold the mortgaged properties, purchased the equity of redemption himself, and obtained possession through the Court. And, in a subsequent suit upon the mortgage for sale of the mortgaged properties, the defence, inter alia, was that the proceedings were contrary to the provisions of s. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act that the purchase by the plaintiff was null and void; and that the mortgagee was bound to account for the period he was in possession of the mortgaged property. Held, that, having regard to the provisions of s. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act, the purchase by the mortgagee was null and void, and possession obtained by him was not in accordance with law, and he was therefore liable to render account of moneys realized from the mortgaged properties during the term of his possession. Durgayya v. *Anantha, I. Both the mortgage and the sale were binding on the tarwad. In execution of a decree for costs and mesne profits the mortgagee brought the equity of redemption in the hands of the purchasers to sale and purchased it himself. Years after this the purchasers of the equity sued to redeem the mortgaged property, treating the sale to the mortgagee as a nullity. They did not implead in this suit the representatives of the original mortgagee. Held, that the suit must fail for want of proper parties. 1. ——— Charge on immoveable property—Mortgage—Construction of document—Limitation. Under s. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act, for a document to create a charge on immoveable property, it must be a document that creates such charge immediately on its execution, and not operates only as a charge at some future time, such as in the event of non-payment of the money secured by it, the latter being the possibility of a charge ultimately arising on the land, and not "a charge" within the meaning of that section. A lent B R99, and B executed a document on the 24th July 1881, whereby he agreed to repay the amount with interest in the month of Baisakh 1289 F.S. (April 1882), and further agreed that, if he did not pay the money as stipulated, he should sell his right to certain land and that A should take possession thereof, and that after A took possession of the land no interest should be paid by him, B, and that A should pay the rent of the landlord out of the profits of the land without any objection. A instituted a suit on the 3rd

August 1885 to recover the R99. Held, that the document did not amount to a mortgage, nor did it create a charge under s. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act, and that the suit was barred by limitation, three years being the period applicable. 2. ——— and s. 58—Hypothecation-bond, suit on. The period of limitation for suits upon hypothecation-bonds which contain no power of sale or effect no transfer of property, executed before the Transfer of Property Act came into operation, is twelve years under Sch. II, Art. 132, of the Limitation Act of 1877. Aliba v. Nanu, I. L. R. 9 Mad. 218, followed. Per MUTTUSAMI AYYAR, J.—"The transaction in suit appears to be of the kind described in s. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act, which defines how a charge is created;" but "it seems to me that the Transfer of Property Act does not invest all prior hypothecations with the rights and liabilities arising from simple mortgages, whether or not those transactions satisfy the requirements of the definition it contains of simple mortgages." 3. ——— and s. 68—"Charge"—Bengal Tenancy Act, s. 65. The Provisions of s. 68 of the Transfer of Property Act are not amongst those made applicable by s. 100 of that Act to a person having a charge within the meaning of the latter section. Semble: The "charge" referred to in s. 65 of the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) is not such a "charge" as that defined by s. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act. Lolit Mohun Roy v. *Bindodai Dabee, I. 4. ——— Mortgage—Suit by sons against father for partition—Subsequent mortgage of suit property by father—Consent-decree in partition suit—Subsequent decree in a suit on the mortgage against the father alone—Liability of property in execution—Effect of instrument intended to be a mortgage but defective in form—Charge. Plaintiffs, who were the sons of first defendant, had, on 18th March 1893, instituted a suit against their father for partition. On 24th July 1893, their father executed a deed purporting to mortgage the house to defendants Nos. 2 and 3. That deed was, however, attested by only one witness. On 24th December 1894, a razinama was filed, and a decree based on it was passed in the partition suit between plaintiffs and their father, by which the father conveyed to plaintiffs the whole of his interest in the immoveable family property, retaining only sufficient money to satisfy certain incumbrances which existed on the property. These were in fact paid off, and the plaintiff took possession. Defendants Nos. 2 and 3 obtained, against the father alone a decree for the amount of their mortgage, and for sale in default of payment: and purchased it at a sale in execution thereof; and obtained possession through the Court. Plaintiffs then applied, under s. 332 of the Code of Civil Procedure, for an order restoring them to possession, and, as that application was dismissed, filed the present suit. Held, that plaintiffs were entitled to recover possession. As against the plaintiffs, the decree obtained by defendants Nos. 2 and 3 must be regarded as merely a personal decree against the father on his covenant to pay; and the house was not available in execution of it, inasmuch as it was the separate property of the plaintiffs, under the decree in the partition suit, at the time when the decree was obtained. Quære: Whether an instrument which was intended to be a mortgage, but is invalid by reason of its not fulfilling the requirements of law, should be held, as between the parties to it, to operate so as to create a charge under s. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act. Tofaluddi Peada v. *Mahar Ali Shaha, I. 5. ——— Mortgage decree—Payment by one of several representatives of deceased mortgagor—Charge—Contribution. A mortgagee having obtained a decree on his mortgage the decretal amount was paid off by one of several representatives of the deceased mortgagor. Held, that the latter did not thereby acquire a charge on the mortgaged property, within the meaning of s. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act. The provisions of s. 95 and s. 82 of the Transfer of Property Act do not apply to such a case. Bhagwandas v. Hardei, I. L. R. 26 All. 227, disapproved. Danappa v. *Yamnappa, I. L. 6. ——— Documents executed in the mofussil—Contracts of the people of India—Liberal construction—Regard to be had to all the circumstances of a transaction—Intention to make land security for payment of debt—Charge. Documents executed in the mofussil come within the statement of the Privy Council in Hunoomanpersaud Panday v. Mussumat Babooee Munraj Koonweree, 6 Moo. I. A. 411, that "deeds and contracts of the people of India ought to be liberally construed. The form of expression, the literal sense, is not to be regarded so much as the real meaning of the parties which the transaction discloses." Where having regard to all the circumstances of a transaction there remains no doubt that the documents are sufficient and do show an intention to make the land security for the payment of the debt mentioned therein, the documents create a charge. The defendants denied the settlement. The first Court found for the plaintiff; but on appeal an objection having been raised by the defendants that the verbal lease was illegal under the Transfer of Property Act, the suit was dismissed. Held, that a hât is a benefit arising out of land, and therefore within the definition of "immoveable property" as given in s. 2, cl. 5, of the General Clauses Act (I of 1868). A building was erected, and it was not contended that it was of a kind different from or of a value out of proportion to what was in the contemplation of the parties, when the lease was entered into. At the expiration of the term, the lessor sued to recover the land, but he did not claim that the tenant was no longer at liberty to remove the building (though this had not been removed during the continuance of the lease). On its being contended that the tenant was entitled to be paid the value of the building, which he had erected on the land before he could be evicted: Held, that it is established that the maxim "quicquid ædificatur solo, solo cedit" does not generally apply in India and even in cases to which the English law as such was applicable, the Indian Legislature, by Act XI of 1885, departed from that maxim in the cases specified in s. 2 of that Act (corresponding to s. 51 of the Transfer of Property Act). Both under the Hindu and the Muhammadan law (as well as under the common law of India) a tenant, who erects a building on land let to him, can only remove the building and cannot claim compensation for it on eviction by the landlord. Mahalatchmi Ammal v. *Palani Chetti, 6 Mad. On the 22nd February 1904, A's successor brought a suit against B to recover the lands got by B from A :—Held, that the dispossession of plaintiffs which entitled him to bring a suit under s. 119 of the Transfer of Property Act must be held to have taken place only when the decree for possession against him was confirmed on second appeal, by the High Court. Held, further, that s. 10 of the Limitation Act did not apply to the suit. The section proceeds upon the well-known distinction between transfers for valuable consideration and voluntary transfers, and the transfer in this case is not the less a transfer for valuable consideration because the consideration subsequently failed. The first paragraph of that section means that a gift of immoveable property can be effected by the execution of a registered instrument only, nothing more being necessary. Semble: The same is the case under that section with regard to moveable property, provided that a registered deed (and not the alternative mode of delivery) be adopted as the mode of transfer. Where a Hindu executed a deed of gift in favour of his wife and died and the deed was subsequently registered at the instance of the widow :—Held, that it was a valid deed of gift within the provisions of s. 123 of the Transfer of Property Act. The widow being entitled in the circumstances of the case to letters of administration to the estate of the donor was primâ facie qualified to admit execution of the document as his "representative" within the meaning of s. 35 of the Registration Act, the fact that she herself was the donee under the document being immaterial. Nand Kishore Lal v. *Suraj Prasad, I. 1. ——— Transfer of debts—Notice of transfer—Assignment of mortgagee—Mortgagor, liability of, to assignee of mortgagee when no notice of assignee given. An Assignment is perfectly valid, though the notice referred to in s. 131 of the Transfer of Property Act has been given, though the title of the assignee as against third parties not complete until such notice has been given, the object of such notice being the protection of the assignee. S. 131 of the Transfer of Property Act makes no alteration in the law as it obtained in England previous to the passing of that Act and as laid down in the cases cited in the note to Ryall v. Rowles, 2 W. & T. L. C. 777, the first portion of the section merely fixing the time when the section comes into operation and the latter providing for the protection of the debtor if he deals with the debt before that time. Where, therefore, an assignee of a mortgagee brought a suit on the mortgage against the mortgagor and the mortgagee and no notice of the assignment had been given to the mortgagor under s. 131 of the Transfer of Property Act :—Held, that the Court was wrong in dismissing the suit merely on the ground that no notice was served, as after the suit was instituted the mortgagor became aware of the assignment, and the transfer accordingly came into operation on the date when he thus became aware of it. when such notice was received; that in this case the assignment would come into operation against the obligor when he became aware of the suit; and the obligor when he became aware of it by the institution of the suit; and that, if he had prior notice and sold the property to bonâ fide transferees for value without notice either of the charge created by the bond or the assignment, such transferees would be protected from liability. *Lala Jugdeo Sahai v. 1. ——— Transferee of a claim for smaller value—Recovery of full amount of debt. It is not the object of s. 135 of the Transfer of Property Act absolutely to prevent a transferee, who has purchased a claim at a smaller value, from recovering the full amount of the debt due from the debtor. GRISH CHANDRA v. KASHISAURI DEBI . . . . I. L. R. 13 Calc. 145

2. ——— Right of suit—Suit to set aside a document—Actionable claim. The co-sharers of a Hindu family, one of whom was a minor, owned certain immoveable property in Munshigunge near Dacca. In 1873 a perpetual lease of this property, executed by all the co-sharers except the minor, was granted to certain persons hereinafter called the lessees. On the minor's behalf the lease was executed by his elder brother as guardian of the minor. In May 1882 the minor, who had previously attained his majority, sued the lessees and his co-sharers for a declaration of his right to, and for possession of, his share in the said property, alleging that the perpetual lease was not binding on him. On the day after the institution of the suit the plaintiff sold all his interest therein to A for R600. Held, that A's purchase was an actionable claim within the meaning of s. 135 of the Transfer of Property Act. RAJANIKANTH NAG RAI CHOWDHURI v. HARI MOHAN GUHA . . I. L. R. 12 Calc. 470

3. ——— and s. 52—Sale of immoveable property by person out of possession—Actionable claim. A transfer of ownership of immoveable property is not a sale of an actionable claim, although the owner at the time of the sale may not be in possession. A and B, being owners of an 8 annas share of certain immoveable property, sold it under a kobala to C and D. At the time of the sale X and Y were in adverse possession of the share. Held, that the transaction was a sale under s. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act, to which the provisions of Ch. VIII of the Act, specially those of s. 135, were inapplicable. Semble: S. 135 refers to claims for money of some kind or the like, although the money claim may be a charge on immoveable property. MUDUN MOHUN DUT v. FUTTARUNNISSA . . I. L. R. 13 Calc. 297

4. ——— Transfer of a claim for smaller value—Transferee not entitled to recover more than price paid for claim. S. 135 (d) of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) means that if a creditor or party having an actionable claim against another has put into Court and has proceeded to the point at which judgment has been delivered affirming it, or the liability of the defendant has been so clearly established that judgment must be delivered against him, the mischief or danger of any trafficking or speculation in litigation disappears, and the defendant can suffer no prejudice by any arrangement between the plaintiff and a third person as to who is to enjoy the fruits of the decree, nor is there any probability that the process of the Court will be misused. On the other hand, if one who has an actionable claim against another chooses to sell it for less than its actual value, the person who buys embarks more or less in a speculation which can be defeated by payment to him of the price paid for it with interest and incidental expenses. The debtor's right to discharge himself by such payment is not forfeited by his putting the assignee to proof of his case in Court, nor did the Legislature intend that the position of the assignee should be better after suit and decree than before. Girish Chandra v. Kashisauri Debi, I. L. R. 13 Calc. 145, dissented from. Chedambara Chetty v. Renga K. M. V. Puchaiya Naickar, L. R. 1 I. A. 241 : 13 B. L. R. 509, and Ram Coomar Coondoo v. Chunder Canto Mookerjee, L. R. 4 I. A. 23 : I. L. R. 2 Calc. 233, referred to. The assignee, under an instrument dated the 18th December 1885, and in consideration of R5,000 of a share of R10,000 out of R20,000 claimed by his assignors as unpaid dower-debt joined with the assignors in instituting a suit for recovery of the dower-debt on the 22nd December of the same year. Held, that the assignee's proceedings were of the nature contemplated by s. 135 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), and that he was not entitled to a decree for anything in excess of R5,000, the price paid by him for the R10,000 share of the debt. JANI BEGAM v. JAHANGIR KHAN. . . I. L. R. 9 All. 476

5. ——— Actionable claim—Transfer of a claim for amount less than its value—Recovery of full amount of debt. S. 135 of the Transfer of Property Act does not protect a defendant from payment of the full amount payable under a claim transferred for a sum less than that recoverable under the claim, where the money is recovered by suit after a contest as to the liability of the defendant. Grish Chandra v. *Kashisauri Debi, I. 6. ——— and ss. 136, 137—Apportionment. A sued as assignee of a bond (payable in 1872), hypothecating land in the mofussil. B, A's assignor, was a vakil practising in the High Court. B had obtained an assignment of the obligee's interest in the bond sued on, and also another bond for R3,000 between the same parties after the 1st July 1882 for R4,500. B had previously purchased the two bonds at a sale in execution of the decree of the Subordinate Judge's Court at N for R5 each. A's assignment from B purported to be made to A in payment of certain debts owed to him by B. No interest has been paid on the bond, and no tender had been made to plaintiff. Held, on the evidence, that there was no consideration for the bond sued on or that it had failed. Per Curiam : The true construction of s. 136 of the Transfer of Property Act appears to be that the officers mentioned in it habitually exercising their functions in a particular Court are precluded from buying any actionable claim cognizable by the Court. In the absence of evidence showing that B practised as a pleader regularly in the Subordinate Court at N, the Court declined to hold that the assignment to him was inoperative altogether. There was, however, the Court held, no doubt that the assignments to him and by him were governed by s. 135, and that, under s. 137, the person to whom a debt is transferred takes it subject to the liabilities to which the transfer was subject at the date of the transfer. Upon the facts of the case B was clearly not entitled to recover more than R4,500, whatever might be due on the document. As he was the purchaser of an actionable claim, s. 135 of the Transfer of Property Act applied to him, and he could not recover more than the price he paid and the interest due thereon. There is no foundation for the suggestion that, where two actionable bonds are brought together for R4,500 and only R950 are recovered upon one of them, the assignee is precluded from recovering the difference, but that he must submit to a loss arising from an apportionment. RATHNASAMI v. SUBRAMANYA . . . I. L. R. 11 Mad. 56

7. ——— Transfer of actionable claim. The first paragraph of s. 135 of the Transfer of Property Act has no application to a case in which the debtors deny the existence of the claim altogether, and where the purchaser of the claim has to obtain judgment affirming the claim before any satisfaction is made or tendered. Cl. (d) of that section is not limited to cases where the judgment of a Court affirming the claim has been delivered, or where the claim is made clear by evidence, before the sale of the claim. Grish Chandra v. *Kashisauri Debi, I. ——— s. 135—contd.

in it as against an attaching creditor of the obligors. Held, that there had been no adjudication on the claim to exclude the rule in the Transfer of Property Act, s. 135, and accordingly the plaintiff was entitled to recover only the sum paid by him for the assignment with interest from the date of payment to the date of the decree. RAMACHANDRA v. VENKATARAMA I. L. R. 13 Mad. 516

10. ——— Actionable claim—Transfer of claim for an amount less than its value—Suit by transferee to enforce claim—Defendant not entitled to plead that terms of transfer were unconscionable. A mortgagee by conditional sale having obtained an order for foreclosure under Regulation XVII of 1806, his heirs, who were out of possession, executed a deed of assignment to a third person, transferring to him the rights acquired by the mortgagee under that order. At the time of the execution of the deed no step had been taken by the mortgagee or his heirs to bring a suit for declaration of thei title and for possession of the property. A suit for that purpose was brought by the assignee, the defendants being the conditional vendors, and also the assignors under the deed above-mentioned. The latter made no defence, but admitted the justice of the claim, and a decree was passed in favour of the plaintiff against them as well as against the other defendants. Held, that the answering defendants, the conditional vendors, could not take advantage of the terms of the assignment for the purpose of defeating the claim, on the ground that the assignment was an unconscionable bargain, so unfair that the Court should not enforce it. If a person who has in actionable claim against another chooses to sell it cheap, that is no reason why that other is to stand cleared and discharged of his liability to the assignor. Held, also, that the answering defendants were entitled to the benefit contained in the first paragraph of s. 135 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), and would be entitled to take the bargain off theplaintiff's hands by paying to him the price and incidental expenses of the sale with the interest on that price from the day that the plaintiff paid it to the date of its repayment to him. Jani Begam v. *Jahangir Khan, I. 20. ——— and s. 139—Insolvent Act (Stat. 11 & 12 Vict., c. 21), s. 86—Purchaser of scheduled debts—Right of purchaser to be paid full amount of such debt. An insolvent, having filed his schedule in April 1881, obtained his personal discharge in September 1881, and on the same day judgment was entered up against him for the amount of his scheduled debts under s. 86 of the Insolvent Act (11 & 12 Vict., c. 21). The schedule contained the names of thirteen creditors. The insolvent afterwards settled with four of them. The remaining nine, whose aggregate claims amounted to R1,180-7-0, sold their claims. Certain assets belonging to the insolvent's estate having subsequently come into the hands of the Official Assignee, the purchasers claimed to be paid the full amount of the scheduled debts which they had bought. It appeared that the debts in question were debts incurred on certain promissory notes passed by the insolvent. The insolvent contended that under s. 135 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) the purchasers were only entitled to the amount which they had actually paid for the debts they had bought. Held, that they were entitled to be paid the full amount of the scheduled debts. If the debts at the time of purchase were to be regarded as debts in respect of promissory notes, s. 139 of the Transfer of Property Act applied, and if the claim was under the judgment entered up against the insolvent, then clause (d) of s. 135 applied. In the matter of RUNCHOD KHUSHAL . I. In the same year he sued B for the money. Held, that the suit was not barred by limitation, and that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree; but that he could recover only the price actually paid by him with interest and the incidental expenses and costs, as the case was not within Transfer of Property Act, s. 135 (d), since, on the true construction of the decree of 1889, all that had been decided was who should hold the money pending the settlement of the rights of the rival claimants. No intimation of the discovery was given by the finders to any public authority, but the Subordinate Magistrate, being informed of it by the police, proceeded to the spot and recovered the idols on the third or fourth day after they were found. They were then sent by the Magistracy to the Court of the Principal Sudder

Ameen to Madura to be dealt with under the provisions of Regulation XI of 1832. Proclamation inviting claimants was made and petitions asking for possession of the idols were presented by three parties—first, by the Rani of Shivaganga, on the ground that she was trustee of the devastanams on her estate, on which the idols had been found; second, by the Stanikam of a temple in the village of Anandur and third, by the finder. The Principal Sudder Ameen adjudged the idols to be the property of the Rani, and directed that they should be delivered to her. The finder appealed to the Civil Court, which reversed the decision of the Principal Sudder Ameen, and directed delivery to the appellant. Against this order the Rani appealed to the High Court on the grounds—first, that Regulation XI of 1832 only applies to cases in which the ownership of the property is undiscovered, and that, in the present case, the Rani was presumably the owner of the property found; second, that a trespasser could not benefit by the finding. Held, that the Rani had no title to what had been hidden in former times in the soil now belonging to her; that it had been found that these idols were hidden in a stone chamber specially appropriated to that purpose, and that she could not therefore claim a title as owner. As to the objection that the finder, being a trespasser, could not benefit:—Held, that it was unnecessary to consider this objection unless the Rani had some right or title to the treasure, the same as she had in the soil of the tank; that she had not such right, and therefore that the contention as to the right to the property found lay between the finder and the State, which had made no claim. An objection, not before taken, was alleged to be argued at the hearing, viz., that the formalities prescribed by the Regulation had not been complied with. Held, that, though immediate notice had not been given by the finder, the property was within three or four days of its discovery in the hands of the authorities, who might be said therefore to have supplied the necessary notice. ———— Right of a talukhdar in Gujarat to treasure trove—Rights of Government—Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 523 and 524—Property placed at the disposal of Government. A bag containing R248-2-0 and a gold ring was found buried in a field under circumstances which created suspicion of the commission of an offence. The District Magistrate called for claimants to come forward under s. 523 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882). Thereupon the plaintiff put in his claim, alleging that, as talukhdar and owner of the soil in which the property was found, he was entitled to the property. His claim was rejected, and an order was passed under s. 524 of the Code placing the property at the disposal of Government. The talukhdar then sued the Secretary of State for India in Council to recover the property in dispute. The Joint Judge awarded the claim. Held, reversing the decree of the lower Court, that, in the absence of any evidence to prove the talukhdar's right to treasure trove either by a grant or prescription, the property belonged to Government, the Indian Treasure Trove Act (VI of 1878) being inapplicable, as no notice was given by the finder, nor were any proceedings taken under it. TREASURE TROVE ACT (VI OF 1878) —concld.

———— s. 3—Property not hidden is not treasure trove and belongs to the owner of the land, on which it is found. S. 3 of the Treasure Trove Act defines treasure trove as anything of value hidden in the soil or in anything affixed thereto. Property not hidden is not treasure trove and is not governed by the provisions of the Act. Unclaimed articles not found hidden are the property of the person on whose land they are found, unless they are found in a public place, in which case they belong to the finder. Under the English law the possession of land carries with it possession of everything which is attached to or under that land and in the absence of a better title the right to possess it also, except in the case of articles found in a public place. This is also the law in India. In England, where the article is hidden, the fact of its being so hidden is taken to show that the owner did not intend to abandon it, and when it is subsequently found hidden, and the owner is not forthcoming, the law gives it as bonum vacuum to the Crown. that the patnidars had been out of possession during a portion of that period when the zamindar himself had been in possession, having purchased the tenure at the sale held in proceedings instituted by him under the Regulation. administration by the executrix of his estate, which consisted of immoveable property in Eastern Bengal and Assam, not being complete, and there being a suggestion of mal-administration, the Court of Wards of Eastern Bengal and Assam declared the infant beneficiary a minor under the Act, declared its determination to take the estate under its charge as the property of the minor, and directed that possession be taken of the property on its behalf. Subsequent to this declaration the executrix purchased a house in Calcutta for the estate and out of the assets of the estate. The officers appointed by the Court of Wards proceeded to execute its directions, they collected and appropriated rents, the collection, however, being made in the name of the executrix as mutation of names had not been effected, and they took over the establishment of the executrix in the absence of the executrix, without her consent and in spite of her protest. On a suit being instituted without notice under s. 424 of the Code of Civil Procedure by the executrix against the officers in their private individual capacity as trespassers, for a declaration of her title and for an injunction :—Held, that the Court of Wards can only take possession of the estate of a minor, if he can be said to be its " proprietor " within the meaning of the Court of Wards Act. The residuary legatee does not become " proprietor " until, after administration has been completed, and the residue ascertained and made over to him. The Court of Wards has no power under its Act to override the wishes of testators and proprietors generally. The Court of Wards has no power to determine whether there had been mal-administration by the executrix, and on its own determination to take possession of the property vested in the executrix. Mal-administration by the executrix was no ground for taking possession by the Court of Wards. In the circumstances of the case, possession of the estate really remained with the plaintiff and there was a continuing trespass against which the plaintiff was entitled to relief by way of injunction. S. 424 of the Code of Civil Procedure has no application where public officers are sued not in an admitted official capacity but as individual trespassers, nor so far as a suit seeks for relief by way of injunction. The High Court may entertain an action in respect of immoveable property, provided a portion of such property is within the jurisdiction. It is not necessary that the cause of action should arise within the local limits, or be specifically with reference to the portion of the property within those limits. An acquisition of property for the estate, by the executrix, by purchase out of the assets of the estate formed part thereof, although the purchase took place after the declaration of the Court of Wards taking over charge of the estate. A trespass committed by order of a higher official is in substance the act of that official, who can be sued as a trespasser. GANODA SUNDARY CHAUDHURANI v. NALINI RANJAN RAHA (1908) I. L. Officers, how to be exercised—Indian Arms Act (XI of 1878), s. 25—Provision "having first recorded grounds of his belief," whether mandatory or directory—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 94, 96, 105, 106, 165—Search-warrant—Magistrate as "Court"—Search by police officer—Police Act (V of 1861), s. 4—Powers of District Magistrate—Letters Patent of 1865, s. 20—Extraordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of High Court. For some time previous to the 27th April 1907, there had been a considerable tension of feeling between the Hindus and Mahomedans at Jamalpur, in the District of Mymensingh. On the 27th April a Mahomedan was shot by a Hindu, and a serious conflict was narrowly averted by the Sub-divisional Officer and the District Superintendent of Police. On the arrival of the District Magistrate in Jamalpur, on the morning of the 28th April, he received reports from the two Officers of the occurrences of the 27th April, and he was also informed that the police had reason to believe that fire-arms were stored in certain cutcheries belonging to Hindu zamindars. In consequence, the District Magistrate accompanied by the District Superintendent of Police proceeded to search the cutcheries. Under the orders of the District Magistrate, the cutchery of the respondent was forcibly entered, boxes forced open and search made. On an action instituted against the District Magistrate for trespass, it was found as a fact that he had acted with perfect bonâ fides:—Held (BRETT, J. dissenting), that according to the principles of equity, justice and good conscience, the search constituted an actionable trespass unless warranted by some Statute, and in the circumstances of the case, the search was warranted by no Statute. When Executive Officers are invested with Statutory powers of a special and drastic nature, before exercising those powers, they must strictly comply with the provisions of the Act which created them. The search being a general search for arms, was not warranted by s. 25 of the Arms Act of 1878, which required that before making the search, the Magistrate should first record the grounds of his belief, in terms of the section which was not done. The words "having first recorded the grounds of his belief" in s. 25 are mandatory. The search was not warranted by s. 105 of the Criminal Procedure Code, as, in the circumstances of the case, the Magistrate was not acting as a "Court." The search was not warranted by s. 165 of the Criminal Procedure Code: that section does not apply to a Magistrate. Semble: A general search for arms would be governed rather by the provisions of the Arms Act, than by the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The search must be taken to have been conducted by the Magistrate in his executive and not in his judicial capacity, and hence he was not protected by Act XVIII of 1850. Per HARINGTON and BRETT, JJ.—The issue of a search-warrant by a competent Magistrate is a judicial act. Hope v. *Evered, L. The sellers retained the mate's receipts for the goods, but the master signed the bill of lading in the purchasers' names, who, while the bill they accepted was running, became insolvent. In such circumstances, held by the Privy Council (reversing the decision of the Supreme Court at Bombay), that trover would not lie for the goods, for that on their delivery on board the vessel they were no longer in transitu so as to be stopped by the sellers; and that the retention of the receipts by the sellers was immaterial, as after their election to be paid by a bill the receipts of the mate were not essential to the transaction between the seller and purchaser. Upon an action of trover brought against the assignee of A, who had seized the goods, it appeared in evidence that a portion only of the goods was in the warehouse specified at the date of the sale, and that no part of the loan was paid on that day, the same being discharged by instalments a few days afterwards: whereupon the Judges of the Supreme Court held that there had been no valid transfer and consequently no conversion, and gave an interlocutory judgment in accordance with such view. Held, by the Judicial Committee on appeal from that decision, and from an order refusing a new trial, that the decision was not justified by the evidence, and must be reversed and a new trial granted. If the Company's paper was not procurable, the notes were to be returned to the plaintiff. D did not go to the place stipulated to purchase the Company's paper, but, meeting the defendant and others, he went into a house hired for gambling, and lost at cards and paid away to the defendant some of the notes he had received from the plaintiff. The plaintiff now sued the defendant to recover the notes so entrusted to D, on the allegation that they had been entrusted by him to D for a specific purpose, and that the defendant was not a bonâ fide holder for value. He (the plaintiff) stated in evidence

"that if the paper had been bought, he would either have taken the papers at the most favourable market price for the bank, or have sold them and given D the profit." Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. The defendant was not a bonâ fide holder for value. Per PAUL, J., in the Court below, and per NORMAN, J., on appeal.—The notes were especially entrusted to D for the purchase of the Company's paper. Per PHEAR, J.—Upon the case put forward by the plaintiff, the transaction was a short loan, and not a bailment, and did not bear the character of a trust. But upon the evidence the notes were the property of the bank, and remained so in D's hands, and therefore the plaintiff was entitled to recover on behalf of the bank. 1. ——— Creation of trust—Owner of property constituting himself trustee—Father opening an account in name of his son. In order that the owner of the fund may constitute himself a trustee, of it, he must either expressly declare himself a trustee, or must use language which, taken in connection with his acts, shows a clear intention on his part to divest himself of all beneficial interest in it, and to exercise dominion and control over it exclusively in the character of a trustee. From the single circumstance that an account has been opened by a father in his books in the name of his son, in which money is credited to the son, no presumption can be raised in India that the father intends to create a trust, in favour of his son, of the sums appearing in the account. 2. ——— Subsequent disposition by settlor—Disposition out of income. Held, that where a trust has been once perfectly created although there may have been no transmutation of possession, it cannot be defeated by any subsequent act of the settlor, and apparent dispositions of portions of the property afterwards made by him to particular members of a family, the individuals constituting which have, as a class, a beneficial interest in the whole, must be regarded not as gifts to them for creations of new trusts in their favour which he had no power to make, but as the acts of a trustee, and available only to the extent of the shares to which such persons may be entitled. But this applies only to dispositions out of the principal of the fund, and not to payments made out of its income to particular members of the family for their maintenance, or other expenses, as there may be circumstances which would render itinequitable to take an account of the latter, so as to charge such persons with what they may have received beyond their respective shares. 3. ——— Invalid declaration of trust—Intended transfer of property—Incomplete gift—Evidence of interested parties. The plaintiff, H, was the daughter of one K, deceased. K some two years before his death in 1866 contemplated conferring a bounty to the extent of R5,000 on each of his daughters, M and H. For M he bought a house at Zanzibar and settled it on her by a formal deed of settlement with various limitations. For H, too, he at first intended to buy a house; but finding houses in Bombay were too dear, he purchased a Government promissory note of the nominal of R5,000. The note was purchased in his own name, and a separate account of it opened in his books, headed "The account of one promissory note bearing 5 per cent. interest." This account he debited with all expenses over and above the R5,000 incurred in and about the purchase of the note, such as for premium, carriage hire, etc., charging, moreover, 9 per cent. interest on these items of debit (which interest he carried as a gain to his general interest account) and he credited the account with the interest collected on the note from time to time, allowing interest at 6 per cent. on these items of credit. He kept also a separate

account of the proceeds of the note, headed, " The account of interest on one promissory note for R5,000." The plaintiff stated that on the day when the note was bought her father K brought it and showed it to her, saying, " This is your note ; take it when you want it ;" and that she left it in his custody, saying, " I will take the note when my sons grow up and do business." Corroborative evidence—which, however, differ in details from, and was in some respects inconsistent with, the evidence of the plaintiff—was given by the plaintiff's son and husband, as well as by a fourth witness not interested in the case. No interest was even paid to the plaintiff by K himself, although he lived for two years after the purchase of the note ; but after K's death his son recognized some claim in the plaintiff to the income of the sum of R5,000 set apart by K, and he paid her sums, equivalent to the proceeds of the note, with more or less regularity down to the date of his death. The note itself, however, he sold without communicating with the plaintiff, and appropriated to himself the sum realized by the sale, although he continued the account of interest on the note, and even headed that account in H's name. Later still, after the death of K's son, his grandsons, the defendants, made similar payments for some time, but irregularly, and finally they refused to pay anything further. The plaintiff sued for the note or its value, and for arrears of interest accrued due thereupon, asserting that the evidence established a declaration of trust in respect of the note. Held, that the evidence was insufficient to establish a valid declaration of trust, for while K's books of account might very well be held to corroborate the testimony of a trust which was itself of a satisfactory description, they were insufficient of themselves to establish such a trust ; while the oral testimony—which, if taken together and accepted as reliable, might well suffice to establish the acknowledgment of a trust—contained such discrepancies and was so generally misty and uncertain in character that it ought not to be accepted unless corroborated by undisputed facts in the case incapable of being explained except on the hypothesis advanced by the plaintiff. Per SARGENT, C J.,—The equitable doctrine of the transfer of ownership by acknowledgment of trust, when it is sought to establish it by oral evidence, requires to be applied in this country with the greatest caution ; and we cannot doubt that to allow an acknowledgment of trust to be established by the evidence of interested parties speaking as to conversations which took place seventeen years ago without the corroboration derived from other evidence pointing irresistibly in the same direction would be to introduce a most dangerous mode of appreciating evidence in this country, and would offer a direct encouragement to perjury. The suit dismissed, but without costs, K's intention that H should have the benefit of the R5,000—to which, however, he had failed to give effect—being clear.

4. ——————— Gift—Requisites to complete gift—Donor constituting himself trustee for donee—Enforcement of trust by representative of donee—Trustee, liability of. The plaintiffs, M and R, were Parsis, and were married in the year 1851. The defendant was the widow of B M, who was the father of the plaintiff R. The plaintiffs sued to recover from the defendant certain Government promissory notes which they alleged had been presented by B to M at her marriage for her sole and separate use. They alleged that the said notes, then of a nominal value of R1,500, were endorsed in the name of the said B, and had been deposited by him for safe custody with M's grandfather J ; that the said B during his life used from time to time to receive the same notes from J and draw the interest thereon for M ; that B died in 1864, and that after his death the defendant, who was his widow and executrix, used to draw the interest for M ; that in 1869 she obtained possession of the said notes, and had ever since continued in possession thereof, informing the plaintiffs that she was duly keeping them and collecting the interest for M ; that the plaintiffs had been living with the defendant until shortly before the present suit, and having then separated from her, had called upon her to hand over the notes and the accumulated interest, which she refused to do. The defendant denied that her husband B had ever presented M with Government notes for her separate use. She alleged that the notes which had been deposited by B with J were her own separate property, and not M's ; that she and her husband had dealt from time to time with them, and that no interest was ever paid to the plaintiffs, or either of them, or for their benefit. She further stated that some of the notes which had been deposited with J had been disposed of by B in his lifetime with her consent ; that in 1869 she obtained the remaining notes from J and sold them, and applied the proceeds to her own benefit. At the hearing it was proved that, on the occasion of the plaintiff's marriage, presents were made to M both by her own family and by that of the bridegroom R. Two accounts were then opened in the books of the firm of J N & Co., of which M's grandfather J was a partner, one of which showed her acquisitions from her own family and the other her acquisitions from the family of her husband. The latter account contained an entry (under date August 1854) to the effect that B, the father-in-law of M, had bought two Government notes for R1,500 in M's name, and had obtained the interest on them, which was duly credited to her. Other documents were produced, proved to be in the handwriting of B and J, in which the said Government notes were alluded to as the property of M, and as having been purchased with her moneys. In 1864 B died without having endorsed the notes over to M or to any one in her behalf, and they remained in his name in the hands of J until 1869, when the defendant got possession of them. Held, that B was liable to answer for the notes as a trustee and after B the defendant as his executrix and representative. In the documents put in evidence, B alluded to the notes as M's property. His placing them, as he did, with M's grandfather was itself an acknowledgment, according to the practice of the class to which he belonged, that the benefit was to be hers and her children's. He thus sufficiently admitted an obligation as trustee. The legal ownership was his, but he had acknowledged with sufficient clearness an obligation to hold and use the ownership for the benefit of another. Such a purpose clearly manifested constitutes a trust, and burdened with a trust the property passed from B to the defendant as his representative, and could be enforced against her. Held, further, that, having regard to the general practice among Parsis, the conduct of B in relation to the notes showed that it was his intention that the property should be enjoyed in sole and separate use by M and her children. 5. ——— Parol trust—Trustee—Executor de son tort—Donatio mortis causâ—Appeal as to costs—Limitation. One T C in anticipation of death handed over his property to the defendant, his brother, and verbally directed him to pay certain specified debts and to apply the surplus for the necessities and support of his family. Held, that a good trust was created at any rate so far as the debts were concerned. The defendant claimed to have paid to S, the widow of one L, the deceased brother of T C, and himself, the sum of R7,273-1 alleged to have been owing by T C to L. In a suit by the son of T C for an account the Assistant Registrar found (inter alia) in his report that R1,975 had been paid to S by the defendant, and that the balance R5,298-1 had been taken over by the defendant by arrangement with S (the first payment being time barred). Held, that a good trust in favour of S for the whole debt due to her was created in respect of the moneys which reached the defendant's hands applicable under the terms of the mandate to him for the payment of her claim; that no question arose as to limitation; and that it was unnecessary to consider whether the defendant, if acting as an executor de son tort, had power to pay it though barred. Held, also, that the trust was not in the nature of a testamentary disposition, though it was created in anticipation of death, and could not after the death of T C be recalled by his representatives. Peckham v. Taylor, 31 Beav. 250, followed. Quære: Whether as to the application of the surplus after payment of the specified debts the defendant was in the position of an executor de son tort, and that practically it may in some cases be difficult to avoid the application to Hindus of the principles upon which executorship de son tort rests. Jogendra Narain Deb Roykut v. *Temple, 2 Ind. 6. ——— Trust created for specific purpose—Surplus after performance of trust. Where a trust had been created for specific purposes, viz., the performance of religious and other duties, and the trustee had duly appointed another trustee in his place, the latter being entitled to hold the trust estate:—Held, that a decree having been made against the trustee personally, the corpus of the trust estate could not be sold to satisfy the claim of the judgment-creditor, nor could any specific portion of the corpus of the estate be taken out of the hands of the trustee on the ground that there was, or might be, a margin of profit coming to him personally after the performance of the trusts. Held, also, that in a suit in which all the parties interested were not before the Court there could be no decision as to the extent of the trusts nor as to whether any surplus profits of the trust estate would, or would not, after the performance of the trusts, belong to the trustee personally. 7. ——— Improvements of estate—Rights of tenant for life and remainderman as to sums expended. A testator conveyed his property which consisted of extensive coffee estates to trustees upon trust as to part thereof for certain persons for life and then upon trust for their children absolutely. A suit having been filed for the administration of the trusts of the will, a receiver was appointed. On the application of the receiver, and with the consent of all parties, the Court sanctioned the extension of the estate. This was done by raising a loan on pledge of the profits of the estate, out of which, when realized, the loan was paid off. By the will, the trustees were empowered to raise money for the purpose of managing the estate at their absolute discretion, either by using the profits or by pledging or selling the corpus. The tenants for life claimed that the loan might be declared a charge on the estate. Held, that the extension was within the powers of the trustees, but that, as between the life-tenants and the remaindermen, the former were entitled to have the sums expended on the improvements charged on the corpus, they keeping down the interest. 8. ——— Application by trustees to raise money by mortgage of trust-property—Sanction of Court. A testator by his will devised property in Bombay to trustees on certain religious and charitable trusts. The income of the property was more than was required for the purposes of the trust, and the trustees had a surplus of R19,000 in their hands. They were obliged to pull down a certain chawl which stood upon the land for the purpose of rebuilding upon it, and they proposed, with a view to improve the property, to erect a larger and more substantial building than the former one. They expended the surplus R19,000 which was on their hands, but found that to complete the work a further sum of R20,000 was necessary. This they proposed to raise by mortgaging the trust-property. They calculated that the whole mortgage-debt would be paid off out of the surplus rents of the trust-property within three years. They filed this suit, praying that the Court would sanction the proposed mortgage. The Court, however, refused its sanction, and dismissed the suit. 9. ——— Suit for declaration of trust—Possession of trust property—Breach of duty. In a suit for declaration of trust with reference to lands, it must be shown that the party against whom the trust is prayed must have obtained a more or less rightful possession of the lands, but impressed with the obligation of a trust that in a suit such as last mentioned, it must be shown that some duty primâ facie fell on the defendants, of which they were committing a breach. 10. ——— Recognition of trust—Deed of gift, validity of—Oudh Estates Act (I of 1869), s. 8. A talukhdar, deceased before annexation, had provided by will for the succession of his five widows, one at a time, to his estate, with remainder to a son of his nephew. Settlement was made with the senior widow after the mutiny, a sanad granted to her as talukhdar, with full power of alienation, and her name was afterwards entered in the list prepared under s. 8 of the Oudh Estates Acts, 1869. But certain of her acts were not explicable except on the understanding that she was abiding by the will. Held, in a suit by the widow next in order, that such senior widow had undertaken the trust of carrying out the provisions of the will, and that a deed of gift made by her transferred only her interest, which was an estate for life. 11. ——— Cessation of trust—Cessation of performance by congregation of particular form of worship—Commencement of different form of worship. If the congregation of a church as a body cease to follow the observances of a particular form of worship, and in preference for forty years follow those of a different from of worship, there would be no one left for whom and by whom the original form of worship can be continued, the objects of the original trust cease to exist, and the church funds and property become impressed with a trust for the performance of the later form of worship. 12. ——— Suit to enforce trust—Suit for enforcing religious or charitable trusts—Right of suit—Pleading—Security for costs. The representatives of a testator, who has created trusts for religious or charitable purposes, in which the representatives are not personally interested, may institute proceedings to have abuses in the trust rectified, there being no officer in this country who has such power of enforcing the due administration of religious or charitable trusts by information at the relation of some private individual, as is possessed by the Attorney General in England. A suit for this purpose should not be admitted unless the plaintiff gives sufficient security for costs. In order that a decree for an account may be made in favour of the plaintiff in such a suit, he must allege substantially in his plaint that which must be a distinct breach of trust ; it is not sufficient for him to make out a case of mere suspicion, or to rely on particular passages in the defendant's written statement. 13. ——— Religious and charitable trust—Mortgage of trust property—Right of trustee to impeach acts of his predecessor in office—Endowment for charitable purposes. Property granted for religious and charitable purposes is inalienable, except under special circumstances. No person, other than the duly authorized trustee, can alienate by sale or mortgage the property of a religious trust. When a trustee does any act in breach or repudiation of the trust, such act is not binding on his successor in the trust. On the death of D, the hereditary trustee of a devasthan (or religious endowment), disputes arose between G and C as to the succession. G claimed to succeed as D's adopted son. C denied the adoption and claimed as D's heir and nearest kinsman. C obtained a decree against the widow of D for possession of the savasthan property and took possession in 1874. G, in the same year, obtained a decree against D's widow, awarding him possession and management of the property. He sought to execute this decree, but was successfully resisted by C, who had already got possession under his decree. Pending this litigation, the widow of D, the deceased trustee, who was de facto manager, mortgaged two villages forming part of the devasthan property. To pay off this mortgage, G mortgaged the villages to the plaintiff in 1875. The mortgagee sought to take possession of the villages, but he was resisted by C. Thereupon G filed a suit, in formâ pauperis, against C to recover possession and management of the whole devasthan property. Pending the inquiry into G's pauperism, both G and C referred their disputes to arbitration, and an award was made in 1881, by which the mortgaged villages and some other property belonging to the devasthan were assigned to G and his heirs in perpetuity. In 1884 the plaintiff sued to enforce his mortgage lien by sale of the mortgaged villages. Held, that the villages being trust property, it lay upon the mortgagee to prove circumstances justifying a charge on such property. Held, also, that, even assuming that the mortgage-money was actually applied to the purposes of the endowment, the mortgage could not be enforced against the property, as the mortgagor was not a duly authorized trustee. Held, further, that the award made between C and G was not binding on C's successor in the trust, as C professed to act in the matter not as a trustee but as full owner of the devasthan property and in repudiation of the trust. GANESH DHARNIDHAR MAHARAJDEV v. KESHAVRAV GOVIND KULGAVKAR . . . I. L. R. 15 Bom. 625

14. ——— Assignment of religious trust—Delegation of trust—Appointment by trustee of an agent for nine years. A person holding land on trust to supply a temple with rice, etc., out of the income of the land placed the defendant in possession of it under a lease and subsequently in 1888 demised it to the plaintiff for nine years under an instrument which provided that the plaintiff should collect the income, pay part of it to the executant of the instrument, and with the rest perform the trusts above-mentioned. In a suit for rent the defendant denied the plaintiff's title, questioning the validity of the instrument of 1888. Held, that the instrument was valid, as it merely appointed the plaintiff an agent, and did not amount to an assignment of the trust. 15. ——— Charitable trust—Will—Deeds not carrying out will—Misapplication of funds—Mistake—Liability of trustees—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), s. 10, and Sch. II, Art. 120—Fraud—Accounts—Discretion of Court to order accounts—Jurisdiction of High Court where charity established by will is outside the jurisdiction—Advocate-General, right of—Decree in prior suit brought by trustees of charity—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 43. One B R, a Jain, died in February 1863, leaving a will. His widow P (defendant No. 1) obtained letters of administration with the will annexed. The testator died possessed (inter alia) of a half share of certain property in Bombay known as the "Bhimpura property." The remaining half share belonged to two other persons, viz., H D and M T. By his will the testator directed that a moiety of the rental of his half share should be spent on the sadharm (charitable or religious) endowment of a temple at Jackho in Cutch, and the other moiety thereof in establishing two sadavarats, one at Jackho and the other in Palitana. He also set apart a sum of ₹1,26,000, of which ₹1,01,000 were to be expended in building a temple at Jackho, and the balance of ₹25,000 in erecting a market near the temple at Jackho, or, if that was impossible, it was to be spent in Palitana. The plaint complained that of the ₹1,26,000 about ₹60,000 had been spent in buying a property in Bombay, called the "school property," for the purpose of establishing a school there, and about ₹50,000 had been expended in erecting a temple at Jackho, but that nothing had been done with the balance, nor had a market been established at Jackho. All that had been done there was to erect three shops which cost about ₹2,000. The plaintiff further stated that in 1868 P (defendant No. 1) had made over the "school property" and the "Bhimpura property" to three trustees on trusts not strictly in accordance with the testator's will as above set forth. Under this deed the trustees were to apply one moiety of the net rents (1) in sadavarat or alms-giving at Jackho and Palitana; (2) in feasting the caste people in Bombay and Jackho annually; (3) in the worship called satarbhadi at the derasar (temple) in Bombay and Jackho; and (4) in entertaining and clothing the gorib (poor) in Bombay and Jackho. Of the remaining moiety of the rents (5) one-half was to go to sadharm (charities) of the derasar (temple) at Jackho; and (6) the other half to charities at such places as the trustees should think fit. In the following year, viz., on the 17th April 1869, P (defendant No. 1) and the owners of the other moiety of the "Bhimpura property" conveyed the whole of that property to trustees, who were to apply a moiety of the rents (which was to be considered as rent from P's share of the property) (1) in sadavarat and alms-giving at Jackho and Palitana; (2) in feasting the caste people in Bombay and Jackho annually on the anniversary of B R's death; (3) in the worship of the derasar called satarbhadi, and in the entertainment and clothing of the gorib (poor) in Bombay and Jackho. The deed also directed the application of the rents of the other moiety of the "Bhimpura property" part of which was to go to a temple at Tera in Cutch and part to another temple at Jackho. This later deed, it will be observed, omitted altogether trusts (5) and (6) of the earlier one of 1868 in favour of sadharm for the temple of Jackho and for sadharm generally. The trustees appointed by the two deeds were not the same, though some of the trustees of the first were also the trustees of the second. The second deed did not recite or in any way refer to the first. At the date of suit all the trustees named in the deeds were dead except the second defendant. By subsequent deeds, however, new trustees had been appointed and they were all parties to the present suit. Defendants Nos. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7 were trustees of the Bhimpura property, and defendants Nos. 8, 9, 10, and 11 of the school property. The plaint filed on the 10th March 1892, at the relation of two members of the Jain community of Cutch, prayed that the charitable trusts of the testator's will might be carried out, and sought for accounts against the widow of the testator and the trustees of both the deeds, and for a scheme, etc. Held, that the High Court of Bombay had jurisdiction to make a decree declaring the trusts upon which the trustees of the deed of October 1868 held the property comprised in that deed and for rectifying the deed in accordance with such declaration, but that the Court could not go further in settling a scheme. Semble: When money is bequeathed for the purpose of founding a charity outside the jurisdiction, the Court hands the money to the trustees named by the testator, leaving it to the Courts of the country in which the charity is to be established to settle the scheme. Held, also, that the suit was not barred by limitation. It was not one for rectification of the deed of 1868, but rather one against P (defendant No. 1) and her assigns, the trustees of the deed of 1868 and 1869, for the purpose of following the trust property in their hands and having it applied to the proper purposes of the trust, and therefore came within s. 10 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). Charges of fraud and dishonesty made against trustees of a charity must be established at the hearing of the case, and cannot be allowed to be reserved and proved subsequently in the course of taking accounts. Where the trust-deed of a charity, executed subsequently to the death of a testator under whose will the charity was established, does not strictly conform to the provisions of the will, it is not the practice of the Court, when the discrepancy has been made by mistake, to visit the past consequences of the mistake upon the trustees. The plaintiff in this suit demanded an account from P of the Bhimpura property from the testator's death to the execution of the deed of the 13th October 1868, and of the school house property from the date of its purchase to the same time, and also an account against the trustees of the deed of 17th April 1869, of the income of the Bhimpura property, and of its application. Held, that accounts ought not to be required from P. She had made over the property in question to trustees in 1868. There was no evidence that she had ever used any of the income for her own purposes, and the presumption was that she had faithfully discharged her duty. The account was probably barred by Art. 120 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). The trustees of the deed of 1869 had paid over the income received by them to the trustees of the earlier deed of 1868, who were entitled to receive it and therefore no account would be decreed against them. The plaintiff further prayed for an account against the representatives of R B, who had been trustee of the deed of 1868, from the date of its execution to his death in 1889. Under a decree passed in a previous suit (No. 113 of 1889), dated the 10th August 1893, brought by the trustees, they had received from R B's estate the balance which in that suit they had claimed to be due from him to the charity. In that suit the trustees had not asked for an account against him. Held, that the Advocate-General as plaintiff in the present suit was barred by the decree in that suit under s. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The trustees, having then omitted to ask for an account, could not sue again. The Advocate-General represented the same interests as they did, and was therefore equally bound. Even, however, if that were not the case, the Court in the exercise of its discretion would not direct the account asked for. ADVOCATE-GENERAL OF BOMBAY v. BAI PUNJABAI
